

---

Injury Update!

Posted by oompabluepaw05 - 2007/10/08 18:00

---

A call to anyone that knows and can share! I am deep in the mission field and can't find any info on how Criddle and Collie are doing. I know Bronco kind of dodged the question when asked about them. If he is trying to keep that info safe from future opponents then I will go ahead and wait to see if they are on the field Saturday like everyone else, but, if some one out there (Cruiser Mcgregor) is in the know and can comment on it I would love to know. Also, do you think that Bronco would risk putting Collie back out for punt returns? The only shining moment of the Tulsa game was seeing Collie rip off 30 and 40 yard returns. Would it be worth risking further injury to our number 1 receiver to have that kind of punt return threat?

GO COUGARS!!!:woohoo:

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Hengst - 2007/10/08 18:03

---

Harmon this morning was saying that Collie is probably farther along than Criddle. Collie will play saterday, but Criddle is questionable. Fui will likely be back for eastern washington.

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by oompabluepaw05 - 2007/10/08 18:09

---

Thats good to hear! It will be nice to keep the deep threat so that we can start establishing our run game again! My wife and I will be in town for the Eastern Washington game, hopefully we can be cheering Fui along to a 200 yard game. That game should be a good confidence builder for Fui. Heres hoping that Criddle will be good to go as well!!

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by runbyu1 - 2007/10/08 18:09

---

I doubt we'll see Collie back on PUNT returns---too risky. But kickoffs? I hope we see him returning kickoffs again because that was HUGE? Actually hopefully we don't see anyone returning kickoffs besides the one at the start of the game/half, BECAUSE THERE WON'T BE ANY! Ha ha.

-G

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/10/08 18:13

---

Deep in the mission field and still able to see the games? Wow, you must be a mission president.

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by oompabluepaw05 - 2007/10/08 18:16

---

Naaa no Mission President here! Just residents of the Buckeye State!

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/10/08 18:18

---

oompabluepaw05 wrote:
Naaa no Mission President here! Just residents of the Buckeye State!

HaHa :laugh: Got it.

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by lawman - 2007/10/08 19:04

---

runbyu1 wrote:

I doubt we'll see Collie back on PUNT returns---too risky. But kickoffs? I hope we see him returning kickoffs again because that was HUGE? Actually hopefully we don't see anyone returning kickoffs besides the one at the start of the game/half, BECAUSE THERE WON'T BE ANY! Ha ha.

-G

Roger that! I think that KR suits Collie's strengths more because he can get his speed up to hit the holes. I'd like to see him back in there on kick-off returns! (But hopefull he won't have as many as he did in the Tulsa game!) :silly:

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2007/10/08 20:08

---

Oh ya. I served my mission in Ohio. What part of Ohio do you live at? I served in the Columbus mission. Let me know. I wouldn't worry about Collie. I think he'll be just fine. Saulsberry played pretty well against New Mexico so I think we'll be just fine against them.

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by oompabluepaw05 - 2007/10/08 20:37

---

The Columbus Mission, Nice! We are in the Cincinnati area. I think that Columbus is in a different mission. Its always good to talk to someone who has lived in Ohio.

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by cougbluetrue - 2007/10/08 20:50

---

Columbus mission? I lived in the Mt. Vernon ward for a summer and worked in Marysville. Other than the humidity I loved it out there. Beautiful country

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by bball - 2007/10/08 21:37

---

Any play in football is just as risky as any other, so a player can get hurt on a simple run, sweep or short pass.

Considering the BYU history the past few years, we seem to have more injuries to players going out to get the paper, or in fall practice before pads are put on, or just warming up. Kickoff returns might be the safest place on the planet.

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by etyotx - 2007/10/08 22:28

---

The SL Trib is reporting that Criddle and Collie practiced today.

<http://blogs.sltrib.com/byu/>

- Austin Collie (ankle) and Ben Criddle (foot) returned to practice while Brandon Howard (ankle) and Manase Tonga (sprained MCL) missed practice today. All four are expected to be in the lineup on Saturday against UNLV. Fui Vakapuna (broken hand) could make his return against Eastern Washington.

- Linebacker Markell Staffieri is suffering from a case of pink eye. The eye is swollen and red, but he is taking medication and said it had already improved by this afternoon.

I also found this interesting (although my sister is going to be pissed!)

Austin Collie took advantage of the bye week to get engaged to freshman defensive back Jordan Pendleton's sister. Coincidentally, Collie's and Pendleton's fathers were roommates at BYU.

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2007/10/08 22:36

---

Ya the Cinnцинatti mission was a completely different mission but I did serve in Lebanon which was the very border of the mission I was closer to Cinnцинatti sorry I'm not sure how too spell that? Then I was Columbus. Cinci was only like a half an hour to forty five minutes but I couldn't go there. Ya I never served in Mount Vernon or Marysville. But I know exactly where they are. It was really cool. And after serving out there I love the buckeyes. Next to the y they are my favorite football team. And I pretty much like all sports teams that are in Ohio!

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Khinkaid - 2007/10/09 07:40

---

I used to live in the Cinci area (Northern Kentucky to be exact). I loved the fireworks displays out there on the river. Amazing. I also love the chili. Nothing quite like it back her in Utah. I enjoyed going to Reds games and baseball is much more fun to watch in a stadium then on tv. It has been 11 years since I moved, but was fun while there. Lee Johnson was a member of my ward when he was playing with the Bengals and it was always nice to have him around during the season.

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by j2b03 - 2007/10/09 08:04

---

I have been kinda hit and miss on some of the articles but I thought I remember a few weeks, more specifically after the Tulsa game Bronco stated that Collie would not be returning kick offs or punts because he is worth more as a receiver than as a pr or kr, I could be wrong but I thought I remember reading that.

I served in the Ohio Col. mission during 95-97, mostly in the southern areas, man that is beautiful country especially Chillicothe.

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by TRUEblueBYUfan - 2007/10/09 08:53

---

I served up north in the Cleveland, Johnson farm, Kirkland Temple area all around Lake Erie. Cooool in the winter. Beautiful in the fall. Hotttt in the summer and bareable in the spring. I didn't get into the church history faze of my life till 15 years after my mish... I was soo stupid. All that history and I didn't realize really how much took place. Oh to be 20 again.

Good wishes to you Elder... You're in the perfect place at the perfect time.

---

---

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by oompabluepaw05 - 2007/10/09 18:39

---

Wow, I didnt realize Ohio was so well represented by the Cougar faithful! We have a lot of BYU grads in our ward here as Proctor & Gamble practiclly owns Cincinnati, and it seems they enjoy the bilingual BYU grads servicing their foreign accounts. My wife and I are actually relocating back to Utah in a few weeks! We are super excited to get back to LES and the beautiful mountains! We will miss good old Ohio though. It has been fun to see some pro sports while we were out here. Last month we went to the Bengals Colts pre season Friday night game and saw Curtis Brown, Daniel Coats, Johnny Harline, and Rob Morris all get game time. Good times! Heres to watching the Cougars win out in person!!!!:woohoo:

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by vancouvercougar - 2007/10/09 19:59

---

Gymcoug318 wrote:

Oh ya. I served my mission in Ohio. What part of Ohio do you live at? I served in the Columbus mission. Let me know. I wouldn't worry about Collie. I think he'll be just fine. Saulsberry played pretty well against New Mexico so I think we'll be just fine against them.

I served in columbus as well.

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by craigoscarson - 2007/10/09 20:21

---

Where's the Bulgarian mission thread? :unsure:

Actually I was one of the 1st 25, so I'm guessing since there's only been 150-250, odds are I'm not going to find someone to chat with about bad food and pickpocketing gypsies here :blink:

(I loved my mission though)

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2007/10/09 21:18

---

Oh ya? When did you serve? and what's your last name. I came home in march of 05. It was a good mission. I miss a lot of people out there. There was some cool yet weird people out there. But that's what makes a mission fun.

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Npliam - 2007/10/09 22:16

---

craigocarson wrote:

Where's the Bulgarian mission thread? :unsure:

Actually I was one of the 1st 25, so I'm guessing since there's only been 150-250, odds are I'm not going to find someone to chat with about bad food and pickpocketing gypsies here :blink:

(I loved my mission though)

I have been looking for the Hmong speaking mission thread but I have about the same odds as you have of finding one.

---

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by UliUli79 - 2007/10/09 23:02

---

Npliam wrote:

craigoscarson wrote:

Where's the Bulgarian mission thread? :unsure:

Actually I was one of the 1st 25, so I'm guessing since there's only been 150-250, odds are I'm not going to find someone to chat with about bad food and pickpocketing gypsies here :blink:

(I loved my mission though)

I have been looking for the Hmong speaking mission thread but I have about the same odds as you have of finding one.

I had some Hmong speakers in my branch in the MTC, but that's the best I can do since I served in Korea.

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Short_Changed - 2007/10/10 08:33

---

Npliam wrote:

craigoscarson wrote:

Where's the Bulgarian mission thread? :unsure:

Actually I was one of the 1st 25, so I'm guessing since there's only been 150-250, odds are I'm not going to find someone to chat with about bad food and pickpocketing gypsies here :blink:

(I loved my mission though)

I have been looking for the Hmong speaking mission thread but I have about the same odds as you have of finding one.

I served in the Minnesota Minneapolis Mission (Spanish), but I went on exchanges with the Hmong missionaries and received a Hmong name from one of the members. I even got a name tag in Hmong. Hmong sausage and sticky rice.. mmm!

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2007/10/10 11:25

---

Any other ohian/hmong injuries to report?

Go Cougs!!!

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by Pwride - 2007/10/10 12:15

---

Manase sat out practice with a tender MCL, Criddle is doing good as is Collie. Nothing new to report.

=====

Re:Injury Update!

Posted by lawman - 2007/10/10 12:36

---

---

TRUEblueBYUfan wrote:

I served up north in the Cleveland, Johnson farm, Kirkland Temple area all around Lake Erie. Cooold in the winter. Beautiful in the fall. Hotttt in the summer and bareable in the spring.

I visited the Johnson farm with my family some years ago. It is beautiful there (even in the summer) and it is amazing to think that D&C Section76 and other amazing revelations were received there. What was cool was that hardly anyone was there and so we got some great personal attention from the missionaries that were there. I would highly recommend it to anyone who will be visiting Ohio.

=====