
Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by Hengst - 2007/10/12 12:39

er you spell it . .

I don't think he's really going to have a big impact. I think BYU's D-line and linebackers will be able to stuff him. Sure he's 240 . . but he probably needs some momentum to break tackles, which means he's going to have to get past the line of scrimmage, I just don't see it happening.

Am I wrong, should I be worried? I haven't really seen him play to be honest.

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by GoCougarPokes - 2007/10/12 12:51

I am actually not that nervous about him. He isn't like the dude from NM. Frank the tank doesn't have the vision that kid did. Frank is just a big kid that can plow through people. Against the pukers that is all he did. Granted, the pukers looked pitiful and were trying to arm tackle him for the most part. I think with BYU comin off the bye and having time to prepare for him that our Def. will really contain him. I am more nervous about their passing game. UNLV's qb looked good against Wisconsin and i am still a little gun shy after the Tulsa debacle.

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by Uncle Iroh - 2007/10/12 12:54

I am a little nervous.....that he'll eat everything in the buffet line. ;) That's about it. I think that the front seven will handle him.

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by snoscythe - 2007/10/12 12:59

Not worried at all. BYU stopped Rodney Ferguson last week, and that was a better New Mexico offense. We also had the two top receivers in the conference and a mobile quarterback to deal with last week. So, if we can defend all of that and still stop Ferguson, I don't think Frank Summers poses too much of a problem.

UNLV has one of the worst passing offenses in the conference. It's not just because they run the ball either. Dixon's pass efficiency rating of 110.8 is 7th in the conference. I doubt Summers even sniffs 100 yards.

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/10/12 13:06

Yeah, I am with you guys. Zero nervous. Five years ago when we couldn't tackle at all I would have been scared to death but now we do a pretty good job. Once Bronco came around I have noticed that there always seem to be 8 people taking down the ball carrier.

Our front 7 is very solid against the run and I think they will turn "Frank the Tank" into "Frank the Pinto" this week.

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by Pwride - 2007/10/12 13:11

Agreed, they don't have the pass game to make BYU back off. We can let Staffieri/Poppinga/Kehl/Nixon roam free and really knock him back. He won't see 100 yards (No running back has against BYU this season, it won't start here.)

UNLV is going to get into trouble quickly if they let BYU score early. BYU does a great job creating separation early in the game and making teams abandon their game plan. If BYU can score 2-3 times in the first half, look for UNLV to try to pass the ball and give up some turnovers in the air.

=====

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by jmrmoney - 2007/10/12 13:30

I feel pretty confident that the strength of our defense will be able to contain the running game. I have read a few articles which indicate that BYU is not looking past UNLV, but they have a quiet confidence in what they are practicing and preparing for.

I am actually excited to see the secondary play against the Sanford spread offense. I think our DBs are much better than even a few weeks ago, due to the playing time some have received as a result of injuries. I look for our front seven to do a great job on the run game and pressure their QB into some picks and mistakes.

Go Cougars!

Jeff Ray
Lehi

=====

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by shakeNbake - 2007/10/12 13:34

If our guys couldn't tackle (ala Yewtah) then i would be concerned. This guy sort of reminds me of Quinton "Q do what Q want to do" Ganther.

I think we shut this buffet-buster down tomorrow.

C Baker
Saratoga Springs, UT

=====

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2007/10/12 13:41

snoscythe wrote:

Not worried at all. BYU stopped Rodney Ferguson last week, and that was a better New Mexico offense. We also had the two top receivers in the conference and a mobile quarterback to deal with last week. So, if we can defend all of that and still stop Ferguson, I don't think Frank Summers poses too much of a problem.

UNLV has one of the worst passing offenses in the conference. It's not just because they run the ball either. Dixon's pass efficiency rating of 110.8 is 7th in the conference. I doubt Summers even sniffs 100 yards.

You are right. I think Ferguson is a better back and the team shut down his run game this year after giving up about 130 yards last year. Further, Summers has played a few good games so he's not an unknown to Bronco. BYU holds UNLV to about 200 yards total offense and cruises to a win. B)

=====

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by snoscythe - 2007/10/12 13:47

detmer4prez wrote:

I think they will turn "Frank the Tank" into "Frank the Pinto" this week.

I'm sorry, but did someone say Pinto?????????

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=Glcj0szvevU>

=====

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by cougarfan87 - 2007/10/12 14:26

detmer4prez wrote:

Our front 7 is very solid against the run and I think they will turn "Frank the Tank" into "Frank the Pinto" this week.

In that case he will explode on rear impact. :ohmy: :blink: :blush: Perhaps there is a better way of saying that, but I am too tired to think of one.

=====

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by MajorCougar - 2007/10/12 14:28

GoCougarPokes wrote:

I am actually not that nervous about him. He isn't like the dude from NM. Frank the tank doesn't have the vision that kid did. Frank is just a big kid that can plow through people. Against the pukes that is all he did. Granted, the pukes looked pitiful and were trying to arm tackle him for the most part. I think with BYU comin off the bye and having time to prepare for him that our Def. will really contain him. I am more nervous about their passing game. UNLV's qb looked good against Wisconsin and i am still a little gun shy after the Tulsa debacle.

I maintain that Tulsa (yes, a debacle) was an aberration. First off, they had a bye week to prepare for us, after playing CONSERVATIVELY against UL-Monroe. Secondly, our defense was ill-prepared, thinking Tulsa was going to run the ball more and play straight-up ball.

Keep in mind also that UNLV has one of the worst Pass Efficiency Differential ratios in the conference (Difference between Pass Efficiency on offense & defense, compared to ours). Based on the statistics, we have nearly an 80% chance of winning, barring freakish turnovers or a lack of desire to run the ball...:ohmy:

We'll be fine. :) :cheer:

=====

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by decloucog - 2007/10/12 16:28

snoscythe wrote:

detmer4prez wrote:

I think they will turn "Frank the Tank" into "Frank the Pinto" this week.

I'm sorry, but did someone say Pinto?????????

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=Glcj0szvevU>

thanks snoscythe. great clip.

=====

Re:Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners howev

Posted by GoCougarPokes - 2007/10/12 16:44

I too enjoyed the clip...I actually laughed out loud while at work.

=====

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/10/12 17:35

snoscythe wrote:

detmer4prez wrote:

I think they will turn "Frank the Tank" into "Frank the Pinto" this week.

I'm sorry, but did someone say Pinto?????????

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=Glcj0szvevU>

:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: Freaking hilarious Sno. You always come up with the funniest stuff!

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by cosjo - 2007/10/12 17:56

He's tough, but I'm not too worried overall.

http://graphics.fansonly.com/photos/schools/unlv/sports/m-footbl/auto_headshot/1246385.jpeg

Frank Summers

http://tbn0.google.com/images?q=tbn:rUhilynWWGO9aM:http://www.independence05.com/blog/uploaded_images/2006-08MerkavadestroyedinSouthofLebanon-785731.jpg

Frank Summers after a run in with BYU's D

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by bennyhaha - 2007/10/12 18:20

he was a non factor against every other good team this year. he will continue to be a non factor this game. There is no way our LB's are afraid to tackle this guy.

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by craigoscarson - 2007/10/13 08:17

Uncle Iroh wrote:

I am a little nervous.....that he'll eat everything in the buffet line. ;) That's about it. I think that the front seven will handle him.

Come on, where are you going to find a buffet in Las Vegas, lets' be realistic here.....:P

(I seriously pray for those that think I'm being serious)

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners ho

Posted by kenj - 2007/10/13 09:04

We will be fine. If AFA defense can stop him he won't go crazy on us. They are so undersized it is nuts. I do not foresee a problem. Go Cougs

=====

Re: Is anyone nervous about summers (or sumners) howev

Posted by BlueForLife - 2007/10/13 10:08

Even if you give Summers a buck 90 like the Utes did, our offense is not going to allow the UNLV defense to hold them down. They have two freshman in their secondary: a corner, and safety, and then a sophomore at the other safety spot. They are young, so I think we can spread the ball around. If they try to stop the pass, then Unga will pound his way down the field. He's just as tough a runner, and better at catching balls out of the backfield. I see Summers getting over 100 yds, but I don't think their offense can keep up with ours.

37-17

=====