

---

UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by ByuFan1987 - 2007/10/15 11:44

---

Well I had the wonderful opportunity to go to the BYU game in Vegas. Well I just have to say something about the fans over there. Well right at the end of the first half and start of the 3rd quarter a guy started walking through the BYU section with a sign that said BYU SUX and then a picture of well male balls. Our fans started yelling at him and threw some stuff and he finally stopped. To me left towards the top of the stadium there was a group of UNLV fans all having beers and they were just obnoxious! I loved the game and it was a good laugh from their fans. Pretty poor if you ask me! Well just interesting....P

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by UliUli79 - 2007/10/15 13:31

---

The funniest part of the whole game was when UNLV got their garbage time TD and nobody cheered. I was actually kind of confused for a second when the fireworks went off. It was the ultimate anti-climatic end. Does it tick anybody else off that teams run their 2-minute offense against our 2nd stringers? UNLV should have had 8 less points and 70 less total yards. What a cheap stat bump. I guess they had to beat the spread though...:dry:

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by jaga97 - 2007/10/15 13:38

---

I attend nearly every BYU Football and Basketball game at UNLV. I have never had a single incident with a UNLV fan that was not in good fun. I sat next to a UNLV fan at the game and it was nothing but cordial.

I did not see the guy with the BYU Sux sign. I don't get the balls part of the sign. :unsure:

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2007/10/15 13:40

---

well what do you expect them to do, give up???

I also went to the game, and a couple of interesting things said to me from UNLV fans. As I was walking towards my car after the game, some guy yelled at me to go back to provo and drink my cream soda. I told him to get a football team and then we'd talk. I was laughing so hard at his lame attempt to burn me.

The other one was later that night, I was on the strip just walkin around, and this guy saw my shirt (Fully Invested) and yelled go cougars at me, so I yelled go cougars back at him, then he said something I'll NEVER forget. He said "I'm Fully Invested in *@$%." slang for a male body part. I was laughing so hard! I don't think he caught that what he said just made him look gay. I'm still laughing about it!

over all though, I did have some good chats with some UNLV fans, overall I was suprised by how nice the UNLV fans were to talk to

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Khinkaid - 2007/10/15 13:46

---

harlinestillopen wrote:

well what do you expect them to do, give up???

Well you know that is what the team getting creamed expects the winning team to do, give up. If I remember correctly isn't the UNLV coach the same classless guy that refused to shake Bronco's hand because he thought we were running the score up on him with our second string offense? If you expect a team to quit running their plays simply because they are up a large amount of points then in some ways the opposite makes sense. Use your backups to get some good field time since you are not going to win anyway. Not to mention that it could have cost him his starting QB for some games.

---

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Hengst - 2007/10/15 13:46

---

they have fans? who'da'thunk

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by UliUli79 - 2007/10/15 13:47

---

harlinestillopen wrote:

well what do you expect them to do, give up???

Although it would be nice, I'm not that ignorant. I just think that it's ridiculous that teams try to pad their stats. Putting in your subs is a classy move when your beating someone by a bit. It just seems a little silly to do everything you can to rack up stats on another teams subs. Risky too. Just look at what happened to their qb.

All in all though, I have to admit that their fans were pretty cordial.

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Reasonable Man - 2007/10/15 14:25

---

When you play the game, you play to win the game, then you play to win the season, then you play to win next season. I am sure Bronco was happy that UNLV tried their best to score and did on the backups. By getting ahead, he won the game, by resting his starters he saved them from possible injury for the rest of the year, by UNLV playing to score, it gave the reserves quality game time experience which will help them become better players for the rest of the season if they are needed and when they become starters next year. You should thank UNLV for training next years starters. If you are playing for stats then leave your starters in which may not have been a bad idea if BYU is thinks Hawaii needs to exit the BCS poll for them to get in it. That's because UNLV is a common opponent and score differential does matter. Clearly, Bronco is not thinking that way.

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Uncle Iroh - 2007/10/15 15:50

---

The UNLV game was the first away game, (other than Utah), that I had been able to attend. I got to the stadium an hour before the game and got situated. Five minutes before kick off, the "UNLV" fan whose seat is next to mine wanders in with adult beverage in tow, and proceeds with the "%#@# BYU fans, they make me sick". Gives me a hard time and then sits down. As he sits down, he takes off his UNLV hat and proceeds to peel off the stickers under the bill, the NCAA logo sticker, the price sticker, etc. I just laughed at this "UNLV" fans dedication.

Come to find out, through the course of the game, and several adult beverages later, he was from St. George, and there to mostly cheer against us, as he put it"!@$#@ Mormon BYU people!" The lady next to him was almost as bad, telling the guy to spill his beer on me so that my Bishop would ask me why I smelled like beer.

At 24-6, he gets up, tells me congratulations in a very sarcastic tone for beating a "High School team", and leaves.

The UNLV fans who were behind us on the other hand, whom were also very inebriated, were in fact real fans, in as much as they new the names of the players and stayed till the end. The funniest part of the game was right before the touchdown, they were chanting for Stiechen to get in the game because he would get them to 23 points.

=====

---

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by bluesista - 2007/10/15 16:18

---

ByuFan1987 wrote:

Well right at the end of the first half and start of the 3rd quarter a guy started walking through the BYU section with a sign that said BYU SUX and then a picture of well male balls. Our fans started yelling at him and threw some stuff and he finally stopped.

Was that the yellow sign? We didn't know what the picture was, just that it said BYUSUX. This fellow next to me reported him and the UNLV lady had him removed from our section afterwards. Maybe that guy was just making the rounds.

Did anyone else find the "rebels" chant annoying towards the end of the game? I enjoyed the resounding "scoreboard" in response.

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Bilson - 2007/10/15 17:41

---

jaga97 wrote:

I did not see the guy with the BYU Sux sign. I don't get the balls part of the sign. :unsure:

:side: Are you kidding me? Is that really above your level of intelligence?

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Mingjai - 2007/10/15 22:32

---

Bilson wrote:

jaga97 wrote:

I did not see the guy with the BYU Sux sign. I don't get the balls part of the sign. :unsure:

:side: Are you kidding me? Is that really above your level of intelligence?

Gonna have to rely on something besides the spirit of revelation to understand that one!

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by BigTex - 2007/10/16 00:06

---

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by shakeNbake - 2007/10/16 14:59

---

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

=====

---

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by stgeorgefan - 2007/10/16 16:48

---

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

The two point conversion made it a 10 point game( TD FG) Also you know you can't bet on Unlv...

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by oompabluepaw05 - 2007/10/16 16:55

---

My sister and bro in law live in vegas so my whole family minus me and my wife congragated in Vegas for the game Saturday. My family said they had a couple of annoying Reb fans that were drunk upon arriving at the game and continued to slam not just beers but hard liquor. They said that the strangest thing the saw however, was a group of Cougar fans completly decked out with blue and painted faces come up the isle each double fisting cups of beer. :ohmy: Now Im not trying to be judgemental and I am more than excited to accept non LDS BYU fans into the fold, but I thought that rather interseting.

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by MajorCougar - 2007/10/16 16:59

---

stgeorgefan wrote:

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

The two point conversion made it a 10 point game( TD FG) Also you know you can't bet on Unlv...

1. That would be true IF you were going to attempt the onside kick. He didn't. That's why it looked (and smelled) "fishy"...

2. Actually, Greg & Marc on KSL commented on this very topic and stated that the rules have changed recently to allow people to bet on UNLV now...

Hmm.... :blink: ;)

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by BigTex - 2007/10/16 17:17

---

stgeorgefan wrote:

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

The two point conversion made it a 10 point game( TD FG) Also you know you can't bet on Unlv...

---

I didn't know you couldn't bet on UNLV. I also didn't know 10points covered the spread. I thought it was silly to go thru the motions of reducing the lead by an additional point if you weren't planning on attempting an onside. But Sanford is a HC for something right?

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2007/10/16 18:49

---

MajorCougar wrote:

stgeorgefan wrote:

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

The two point conversion made it a 10 point game( TD FG) Also you know you can't bet on Unlv...

1. That would be true IF you were going to attempt the onside kick. He didn't. That's why it looked (and smelled) "fishy"...

2. Actually, Greg & Marc on KSL commented on this very topic and stated that the rules have changed recently to allow people to bet on UNLV now...

Hmm.... :blink: ;)

During the postgame show on KSL, Greg and Mark reported that in Sanford's post game show, he was asked why he went for two and then not kick the onsides kick. His answer as reported was he wanted to cover the spread. He also said he used it as a 2-minute drill exercise. So there is some truth to the fishy smell. :side:

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by BigTex - 2007/10/16 19:43

---

:laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Whether its true or not it's funny just the same

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Raul - 2007/10/16 20:31

---

CougarPeasant wrote:

MajorCougar wrote:

stgeorgefan wrote:

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

The two point conversion made it a 10 point game( TD FG) Also you know you can't bet on Unlv...

1. That would be true IF you were going to attempt the onside kick. He didn't. That's why it looked (and smelled)

"fishy"...

2. Actually, Greg & Marc on KSL commented on this very topic and stated that the rules have changed recently to allow people to bet on UNLV now...

Hmm.... :blink: ;)

During the postgame show on KSL, Greg and Mark reported that in Sanford's post game show, he was asked why he went for two and then not kick the onside kick. His answer as reported was he wanted to cover the spread. He also said he used it as a 2-minute drill exercise. So there is some truth to the fishy smell. :side:

The Las Vegas paper the next morning actually had a section of the Football game report titled "Spread covered" or something similar, and then went on to talk about how that 2-point conversion caused them to cover the spread.....Only in Vegas.

---

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Raul - 2007/10/16 20:35

ByuFan1987 wrote:

Well I had the wonderful opportunity to go to the BYU game in Vegas. Well I just have to say something about the fans over there. Well right at the end of the first half and start of the 3rd quarter a guy started walking through the BYU section with a sign that said BYU SUX and then a picture of well male balls. Our fans started yelling at him and threw some stuff and he finally stopped. To me left towards the top of the stadium there was a group of UNLV fans all having beers and they were just obnoxious! I loved the game and it was a good laugh from their fans. Pretty poor if you ask me! Well just interesting....P

There were two guys who did something similar in our section. During the third quarter, they came walking down the BYU section (The North Endzone, East side) with a similar sign, though this one said "BYU SUK" Many people were giving the guy with the sign a hard time that he couldn't spell. When a worker came and made them leave, she was applauded.

---

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by cszjr - 2007/10/16 20:44

My only experience with UNLV fans was during the Tarkanian era at the NCAA regionals in SLC (granted we are talking Basketball). My roommate was from Vegas and so we got tickets and went and sat with the Rebel fans. Those fans were knowledgeable, polite and rich. Heck, I could have financed my education with the rings the one lady was wearing on her right hand. The left had more.

I had an enjoyable time. They asked about BYU and wished them well. The rebs won and I had a great time.

---

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by cougbluetrue - 2007/10/16 20:50

Raul wrote:

CougarPeasant wrote:

MajorCougar wrote:

stgeorgefan wrote:

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

The two point conversion made it a 10 point game( TD FG) Also you know you can't bet on Unlv...

---

1. That would be true IF you were going to attempt the onside kick. He didn't. That's why it looked (and smelled) "fishy"...

2. Actually, Greg & Marc on KSL commented on this very topic and stated that the rules have changed recently to allow people to bet on UNLV now...
Hmm.... :blink: ;)

During the postgame show on KSL, Greg and Mark reported that in Sanford's post game show, he was asked why he went for two and then not kick the onside kick. His answer as reported was he wanted to cover the spread. He also said he used it as a 2-minute drill exercise. So there is some truth to the fishy smell. :side:

The Las Vegas paper the next morning actually had a section of the Football game report titled "Spread covered" or something similar, and then went on to talk about how that 2-point conversion caused them to cover the spread.....Only in Vegas.

And don't forget the game in Vegas a few years ago where the lights went out about twenty seconds before the game became official. The game went long enough to count in the official records, but not long to count for gambling purposes, so all bets were off. With that in mind, Sanford was definitely covering

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2007/10/16 21:08

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

Shake n' Bake are you completely recovered from Saturday? I know this is off topic but I wasn't able too read enough posts to find out? And ya it was really stupid that they went for two, but they didn't go for an onside kick? Sanford is a real genius. It as a good game and I can't wait to go to the game on Saturday. I hope we beat them by forty points.

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by kiwibacon - 2007/10/16 21:28

Gymcoug318 wrote:

shakeNbake wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

Shake n' Bake are you completely recovered from Saturday? I know this is off topic but I wasn't able too read enough posts to find out? And ya it was really stupid that they went for two, but they didn't go for an onside kick? Sanford is a real genius. It as a good game and I can't wait to go to the game on Saturday. I hope we beat them by forty points. In the "tackle football photos" thread he addressed his health. IIRC he said one HUGE headache on Saturday but is doing fine now.

Edit: found link to thread and attached it.

http://www.cougarblue.com/component/option,com\_fireboard/Itemid,26/func,view/id,142735/catid,2/

---

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2007/10/16 22:15

---

kiwibacon wrote:

Gymcoug318 wrote:

shakeNbak wrote:

BigTex wrote:

What's the deal with going for 2 and than not attempting the onside?

Anybody else notice that little 2 pt conversion covered the spread?:unsure:

I'm not saying anything shady is up, but it does make one wonder.

Shake n' Bake are you completely recovered from Saturday? I know this is off topic but I wasn't able too read enough posts to find out? And ya it was really stupid that they went for two, but they didn't go for an onside kick? Sanford is a real genius. It as a good game and I can't wait to go to the game on Saturday. I hope we beat them by forty points.In the "tackle football photos" thread he addressed his health. IIRC he said one HUGE headache on Saturday but is doing fine now.

Edit: found link to thread and attached it.

http://www.cougarblue.com/component/option,com\_fireboard/Itemid,26/func,view/id,142735/catid,2/

Alright. Thanks man. I just haven't been able to check if Shake was ok. It was kind of scary. And it was a really good takedown. It's a lot of fun. Harline is still open got a good take down on me when I juggled an interception and ran with it. But it's a dang good time.

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by imuakahuku - 2007/10/16 22:21

---

Hengst wrote:

they have fans? who'da'thunk

Don't all visiting teams have a designated section? So I would have to assume that UNLV has a section there at LES south. :lol:

=====

Re:UNLV Fans hahah

Posted by stgeorgefan - 2007/10/16 22:44

---

Hmm I didn't know they lifted the ban on betting on UNLV. Thanks for the update.. Maybe now that UNLV has a good B-Ball team they do it, with all the crappy teams the've had recently I could see why they never pressed the issue.:laugh:

=====