

---

Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by NikeFootball - 2007/11/12 17:14

---

I am getting so sick of 1280 the zone. I was listening to the post game show on Saturday with John and Hans, and they made me sick. With DJ and PK in the morning and anyone other than Jake and Jim in the afternoon, I have to go with 1320. The Big Show is still pretty good, by David Locke is coming on strong. Anyway, just wanted your thoughts.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by yutka - 2007/11/12 17:24

---

I switch between the two... they are both lame... I want a BYU Sports station... One that looks at things from a BYU fan perspective.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Airwolf84 - 2007/11/12 17:38

---

I like DJ in the mornings, but PK is so full of himself, it's sickening. Locke in the afternoons on 1320 has been a welcome change and breath of fresh air after his stint with KJR in Seattle for several years. 1320 is the better of the stations right now... for some reason, all the talent at 1280 jumped to 1320 months ago. The guy I miss as a sports talk radio host is Chris Tunis. Sure, the guy looks like a computer nerd, but he knows his stuff, is unbiased and professional. He actually does sideline work right now for KALL 700 during Utah games.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/11/12 17:52

---

I have never been able to get a great signal for 1320 in Provo. Once I get closer to work in Midway it comes in better. I usually listen to 1280 (960 in Provo) because I get a good signal but when I have been able to get 1320, I have liked it.

Am I the only one that gets poor reception in Provo? I wonder if I am having a problem with my antenna on my car.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Florwood - 2007/11/12 18:25

---

I get bad reception from University parkway south for 1320. Maybe they need to buy another radio station like 1280 did.

I like having both stations, since it gives a choice of who to listen to, and they thoughtfully seem to stagger their commercial breaks. I prefer DJ and PK in the morning, unless they are going overboard with their dig at each other schtick. I like Locke a lot, but still like Graham and Monson in the afternoon unless Graham is too far into his whiny schtick.

I used to like Chris Tunis, when I first moved to Utah in 1995, but in his latest incarnations he seems to be too much of a Ute puppet.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by stuckatwork - 2007/11/12 18:38

---

detmer4prez wrote:

I have never been able to get a great signal for 1320 in Provo. Once I get closer to work in Midway it comes in better. I usually listen to 1280 (960 in Provo) because I get a good signal but when I have been able to get 1320, I have liked it.

---

Am I the only one that gets poor reception in Provo? I wonder if I am having a problem with my antenna on my car.

That's the biggest reason I started listening to 1280 in the first place. I couldn't pick anything else up worth a darn. I live in Orem now so I pick up 1320 better but I still switch back and forth out of habit.

I don't think your car antenna is the problem. I never could pick up 1320 in Provo.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by cougfan1 - 2007/11/12 20:04

---

I used to be a P1. When Graham came on, Hatch left, and the they lost everyone to 1320, I quickly made the switch to 1320. Even Hans sounds like a idiot...I know that is probably his intent, but it is horrible in some ways to think that he is a BYU alum.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by gordito - 2007/11/12 20:31

---

Airwolf84 wrote:

I like DJ in the mornings, but PK is so full of himself, it's sickening. Locke in the afternoons on 1320 has been a welcome change and breath of fresh air after his stint with KJR in Seattle for several years. 1320 is the better of the stations right now... for some reason, all the talent at 1280 jumped to 1320 months ago. The guy I miss as a sports talk radio host is Chris Tunis. Sure, the guy looks like a computer nerd, but he knows his stuff, is ubiased and professional. He actually does sideline work right now for KALL 700 during Utah games.

I agree. I used to be a big DJ & PK fan but PK is holding DJ back. I get tired of PK's "I am god" schtick. I used to enjoy 1280 until Graham and his "I look up babes online and then talk about them instead of demonstrating any sports knowledge" came to town. 1320 is definitely the better of the two (when I choose to listen online).

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by seanyc17 - 2007/11/13 07:25

---

I listen to both, I used to hate PK, until I heard him just flat out mock some Utah fans when they call in with ridiculous takes. When one guy said, "we would beat byu, because we beat ucla and they lost", when it was mentioned that they lost to UNLV, the guy could not even comprehend his idiotic lack of logic. It was hilarious to hear PK just mock him and the guy had no clue.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Gfunkcougar - 2007/11/13 08:02

---

The only ones worth listening to on 1280 are Jake and Jim. I can't stand Hans and John Lund. Every time I try to listen to them I get sick. Their opera man segment is Ridiculous. David Locke is the best choice for unbiased opinions and he actually talks about sports.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2007/11/13 08:15

---

After DJ and PK left, I continued to listen to 1280, I was a p1. But it just went down hill. All the guys that I did like, left. So, one day, I decided to try and figure out where they all went. Thats when I found 1320. I LOVE 1320! I really do. I love DJ and PK, sometimes they get a little off topic trying to zing eachother, but I can't help but laugh. I don't listen to who ever their national person is at 10. I can't listen to A game or what ever its called with alema and fox, though I wish I could, and Locke is a man! He seriously does the best interviews I've heard. He doesn't take crap, and won't move onto the next question until the one he asked is answered.

---

Graham and Monsen are idiots, all they do is talk about things that happened to them over the weekend. they very rarely talk sports. 1280 died the day that Hatch left. I loved Hatch in the afternoon! every time 1320 announces that there is someone new, I pray its Hatch, it has yet to be.....

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by stjohnsmythe - 2007/11/13 08:42

Gfunkcougar wrote:

The only ones worth listening to on 1280 are Jake and Jim.
Jake and Jim?...Yikes!! That's the worst sports show in the market!!

I actually prefer 1320, but I can't get it in my office in east bay, so it's usually more convenient to just listen to the zone on the radio rather than stream 1320 online.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by rjcougar - 2007/11/13 08:48

I switched! DJ and PK are great to listen to, and their chemistry is great.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Airwolf84 - 2007/11/13 10:06

harlinestilopen wrote:

After DJ and PK left, I continued to listen to 1280, I was a p1. But it just went down hill. All the guys that I did like, left. So, one day, I decided to try and figure out where they all went. Thats when I found 1320. I LOVE 1320! I really do. I love DJ and PK, sometimes they get a little off topic trying to zing eachother, but I can't help but laugh. I don't listen to who ever their national person is at 10. I can't listen to A game or what ever its called with alema and fox, though I wish I could, and Locke is a man! He seriously does the best interviews I've heard. He doesn't take crap, and won't move onto the next question until the one he asked is answered.

Graham and Monsen are idiots, all they do is talk about things that happened to them over the weekend. they very rarely talk sports. 1280 died the day that Hatch left. I loved Hatch in the afternoon! every time 1320 announces that there is someone new, I pray its Hatch, it has yet to be.....

1280 died the day that Hatch left.

You got that right! I loved Hatch... he was about one notch below Locke in terms of sports knowledge and insight. I also have to say... Jim Rome isn't a bad listen either. He seems to tell it like it is and some of his takes, sports related or not, are hilarious!

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by dantley - 2007/11/13 10:24

1320; 1280 talks about everything but sports.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Gfunkcougar - 2007/11/13 10:38

---

stjohnsmythe wrote:

Gfunkcougar wrote:

The only ones worth listening to on 1280 are Jake and Jim.
Jake and Jim?...Yikes!! That's the worst sports show in the market!!

I actually prefer 1320, but I can't get it in my office in east bay, so it's usually more convenient to just listen to the zone on the radio rather than stream 1320 online. My point exactly. Every show on the zone sucks. If I had to listen to 1280, I would listen to Jake and Jim. They are the only ones that don't argue and fight like they are married.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2007/11/13 10:39

---

Airwolf84 wrote:

harlinestillopen wrote:

After DJ and PK left, I continued to listen to 1280, I was a p1. But it just went down hill. All the guys that I did like, left. So, one day, I decided to try and figure out where they all went. That's when I found 1320. I LOVE 1320! I really do. I love DJ and PK, sometimes they get a little off topic trying to zing each other, but I can't help but laugh. I don't listen to who ever their national person is at 10. I can't listen to A game or what ever its called with alema and fox, though I wish I could, and Locke is a man! He seriously does the best interviews I've heard. He doesn't take crap, and won't move onto the next question until the one he asked is answered.

Graham and Monsen are idiots, all they do is talk about things that happened to them over the weekend. they very rarely talk sports. 1280 died the day that Hatch left. I loved Hatch in the afternoon! every time 1320 announces that there is someone new, I pray its Hatch, it has yet to be.....

1280 died the day that Hatch left.

You got that right! I loved Hatch... he was about one notch below Locke in terms of sports knowledge and insight. I also have to say... Jim Rome isn't a bad listen either. He seems to tell it like it is and some of his takes, sports related or not, are hilarious!

I listened to Rome for awhile, I liked him, but I don't really like national sports shows. They don't talk enough Jazz or BYU! lol, so I usually don't listen to national shows anymore

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Gfunkcougar - 2007/11/13 10:40

---

I am not saying that is what you do when your married, I am going to have to dig myself out of a hole if my wife reads this.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by OremMan - 2007/11/13 10:41

---

1320 is better in every time slot except the 10-1. Rome is better than whoever ESPN throws out there. I miss Gordon Chiesa at that time. DJ/PK can be very funny at times, John and Hans are just goobers. I have really been enjoying David Locke this time around. Monson and Graham occasionally have good discussions, but generally their show just spirals downward as they get off-topic. Alema and Fox are a little goofy, but much better than the junior high level analysis of Jake and Jim. Unfortunately, I am one of those who has a lot of trouble tuning into 1320 because their AM signal is so weak. They really ought to get a hold of a repeater in Utah County or set up shop on FM.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Ys_One - 2007/11/13 11:21

---

Am I the only one who can't stand to listen to Gordon Monson? I enjoy his columns, and I think he is a very good writer. I even think that he usually has decent takes on the radio. The problem is that he seems to feel like it is his duty to be the moral authority on EVERY issue, and he seems to feel like he has to sound like some sort of literary genius all the time. Combine his self-inflated ego with Graham's short-man complex and you get a show that is completely unlistenable. I would rather listen to three hours of somebody scraping their fingernails down a chalkboard! Thank heavens for David Locke's return.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Slugger - 2007/11/13 11:25

---

I haven't listened to 1280 in two months. I hate Monson and Graham, and even Hans was a disappointment (he creeped me out with some of his comments and behavior). I like David Locke and DJ and PK. I don't listen to anyone else and often flip between music and sports talk anyway. If it isn't Jazz or Cougars, I don't listen.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by Slugger - 2007/11/13 11:27

---

Ys_One wrote:

Am I the only one who can't stand to listen to Gordon Monson? I enjoy his columns, and I think he is a very good writer. I even think that he usually has decent takes on the radio. The problem is that he seems to feel like it is his duty to be the moral authority on EVERY issue, and he seems to feel like he has to sound like some sort of literary genius all the time. Combine his self-inflated ego with Graham's short-man complex and you get a show that is completely unlistenable. I would rather listen to three hours of somebody scraping their fingernails down a chalkboard! Thank heavens for David Locke's return.

No, you're not the only one. I can't stand Monson. He is always right and as you said, he pretends to be the moral compass for the sports world. 1280 went bye-bye for me months ago.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by treck - 2007/11/13 11:58

---

Making the switch was easy. I moved back to the state after being away for 6 years and it wasn't too tough landing on 1320. DJ has always been the best in the morning no matter who he is paired with...and PK grows on you pretty quick.

Alema is not bad, a huge improvement over the years and on the radio, at least you never have to see his funky-smooth clothes. This is despite his counterpart who is the most arrogant personality anywhere.

Locke is a Lock in the afternoon. His insight and guest/regular interviews and head & shoulders above the rest. Anyone that chooses to listen to Monson & Graham has the IQ of an apple. The mumbling and whining on that show sounds more like "The View" than a sports show.

And as far as the morning, those two (Hanz and Franz) with crushes on themselves are unbearable and 1280 is not even an option in the morning. Laura Ingram is much more interesting...and relevant.

Lastly, I have hated the whole "P1" from the beginning. It makes me throw up in my mouth everytime I am surfing my radio and happen on 1280 for a few seconds and they say it...I think they say it about 130 times an hour.

Off Topic...

---

Does anyone know if Phil Hendrie is on any radio station in Utah anymore? For those of you who are familiar with him, he is the most entertaining of all but I can't find him anywhere.

Back on topic...

I think Cougs win big this week. The Cowboys will come out with big emotion but will soon realize that they are overmatched and give up by the third quarter. And we will do it by pounding them on offense and getting to their quarterback on defense...no trickery or classless antics will be needed.:cheer:

BYU 34 Wyoming 13.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by iShowsToGo.com - 2007/11/13 12:04

---

I was listening to 1320 yesterday, and I will tell you one thing: they are the biggest band wagon sports talk show in the state! PK especially was all over Utah, and he was confident taht the utes are going to beat the cougs this weekend? Because Utah has one blow-out win, they believe they are such a better team?! If you would have listened to the show back at teh end of september, nobody would have picks the utes, especially after BYU killed Air Force 31-6, and Utah lost to them the previous week! 1280 is ok. I will switch between the two, but on game days, i'm not listening to either, i'm on 1160, because they get the players and the coach on there to talk.

Go Cougars!

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by jrclone - 2007/11/13 12:15

---

treck wrote:

Off Topic...

Does anyone know if Phil Hendrie is on any radio station in Utah anymore? For those of you who are familiar with him, he is the most entertaining of all but I can't find him anywhere.

Phil Hendrie hasn't been on the Radio in Utah for 3 or 4 years, possibly longer. Whenever 700 switched from talk radio to sports radio is when he stopped.

I can't stand 1280 the zone, except for the Jim Rome show. But, living smack dab in the middle of provo, I don't get 1320. I used to have my alarm wake me up to 1280, but I can't stand Hans Olsen. I can't stand any sports show where they laugh at themselves more than they talk.

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2007/11/13 13:13

---

I just got 1320 to work on my computer at work! I'm so happy! I'm listening to fox and alema right now! haha, I love it!

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by dYrtbYkerYder - 2007/11/13 16:20

---

They are both bad although 1320 is head and shoulders above 1280. As a Jazz fan, I enjoy their access to the team and the various interviews during the week.

That said, I'd love for there to be an all BYU station. I think the demand is there (Utah has one and there are more BYU fans). I think Reno Mahe was trying to put something together before he got re-signed. Speaking of Mahe, he seems like he'd be a great host as his weekly write-ups in the Daily Herald are usually very interesting and insightful.

---

=====

Re:Who has made the switch to 1320?

Posted by NC-Puma - 2007/11/13 17:09

---

dYrtbYkerYder wrote:

They are both bad although 1320 is head and shoulders above 1280. As a Jazz fan, I enjoy their access to the team and the various interviews during the week.

That said, I'd love for there to be an all BYU station. I think the demand is there (Utah has one and there are more BYU fans). I think Reno Mahe was trying to put something together before he got re-signed. Speaking of Mahe, he seems like he'd be a great host as his weekly write-ups in the Daily Herald are usually very interesting and insightful.

This is one thing I never understood when I lived in Utah. Why is there no BYU sports radio station?? Even better from a marketing standpoint would be a BYU/Jazz station.. that would pretty much cover everyone in Utah. When 1280 first went on the air, it was clear they were trying to target BYU fans with their coverage of the Y and I think that really helped them out. I used to listen to KSL when they had that guy (I forget his name but he switched to 700) on for an hour or so a night. From what I could tell, that was a very popular show even at a bad time (I think it was on at 7). Why doesn't 1160 branch into 2 stations.. one that sticks to news and another that does purely BYU sports. The other stations would be left to fight for the 300 or so Ute fans in the area.

=====