
Utah fan attacked

Posted by idahocougarfan - 2007/11/25 17:03

Did anybody else hear/see this??

<http://www.ksl.com/?nid=148&sid=2214010>

GO COUGARS!!!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by BYUROCKS - 2007/11/25 17:07

LOL he look like an UTE FAN AKA MORON

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by sonsofmattmontague - 2007/11/25 17:09

I heard about it last night and my only thought was that it was pretty lame. I hate it when one out of control fan makes the rest of us look bad. This is when sports goes too far.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by BYUROCKS - 2007/11/25 17:09

I bet he is not telling the whole story

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by utehater33 - 2007/11/25 17:12

could somebody copy and paste it.. my computer is being weird.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by sonsofmattmontague - 2007/11/25 17:13

Ute Fan Gets Attacked at Game
November 25th, 2007 @ 4:00pm
Whit Johnson reporting

At the BYU-Utah rivalry game, one Ute fan was head-butted in the face, his nose is broken, and now the he says he's never going back to Lavell Edwards stadium.

The 'duel in the desert' provided plenty of excitement on the field, but in the stands the emotions took a violent turn.

Brett Johnson missed all the action at the end of the game. He was busy trying to track down police and someone to help him with his broken nose. As a Utah fan, Brett has been going to these games for years but never thought he would be the victim of a violent assault. For this die hard Ute, the end of the game came with something more painful than the loss.

Brett Johnson, Assaulted at Football Game: "I've never had a broken nose, but I knew something was definitely wrong. I couldn't breathe out of it and there was blood gushing all over my face."

Johnson was punched and then head-butted in the face by an angry BYU fan.

"He said,

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by sonsofmattmontague - 2007/11/25 17:14

"He said,

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by yutka - 2007/11/25 17:16

I don't believe this for an instant...

I would believe that he said or did something inappropriate to the attacker's daughter and the attacker "took care of things" I would do the same thing if someone was inappropriate to one of my children... and to blanket blame a BYU fan...? hmmm... sour grapes? Stupidity... shaky story? Like I said... I don't believe this for an instant...

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by ColoradoBlueZone - 2007/11/25 17:30

Boo Hoo! I am positive that is exactly how it went down. There are other types on lies. they are called lies of omission. I want to know what this guy left out of the story. I don't care how much of a low life you are, including Ute fans, you don't just head butt someone for no reason. :unsure:

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by a1247 - 2007/11/25 18:46

So when it happens to a Ute fan its wrong but when it happens to a cougar fan everyone just turns there head. Poor poor baby can someone please get him a tissue.:(

As far as I care all I see is this is one less Utah that will be entering LES in two years. So KSL was actually reporting good news.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by frdbtr - 2007/11/25 18:52

BYUROCKS wrote:

I bet he is not telling the whole story

My thoughts exactly. There is no way he was attacked for something so stupid. Not even a ute fan would do something so classless. This guy is lying.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by dylster88 - 2007/11/25 18:53

I saw this guy after the game, just walking around. A girl with me said, "hey, that guy looks like he has a cut on his head" and I looked, but it didn't look that bad. I think the article exaggerated with the blood gushing out of his nose, because there was neither any on his face nor on his shirt. Oh well, there was still a little gash on his head, too bad it had to happen. I can guarantee though, that I've heard a lot more stories from this past game about Ute fans being obnoxious and crass than the cougar fans. Too bad we had the only violent story I've heard of.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/25 21:04

Yeah. I mean that is totally impossible for anyone rooting for BYU to do that. He is such a liar! I think he will go to hell and that guy that hit him will go to heaven for hitting a Ute. Wow...sometimes you guys on this board disappoint. No wonder the Utes are always grumpy, not only do they produce mediocre teams, they also never get the benefit of the doubt.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by uofusux - 2007/11/25 21:36

Finally! Shoot I was almost mugged in Tuscaloosa a few years ago. A broken nose don't hurt that bad.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Hengst - 2007/11/25 21:43

Doesn't matter what the guy said. Head butting the guy was way out of line. I'm pretty disappointed in that fan.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by a1247 - 2007/11/25 21:55

Hengst wrote:

Doesn't matter what the guy said. Head butting the guy was way out of line. I'm pretty disappointed in that fan.

So no matter what happened if you are a cougar fan you are just suppose to stand down and be walked over no matter what?:unsure:

Hell no this is exactly what they expect cougar fans to do. And when one does stand up for himself not only does it make the news but cougar fans even act appalled by it.:huh:

No offense Hengst but I'm pretty sure that this Utah fan got what he deserved and he's pissed that it was done to him by a stone cold sober 85 year old grandma. I know what happened is wrong but I am not going to condone someone for sticking up for himself.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by sjcougfan - 2007/11/25 21:59

This guy will be on chanel 5 news tonight.

Does anyone know where this happened? I sit in the west stands and saw a bunch of the crowd looking over towards the north stands right in the middle of a play, I never did find out what they were looking at.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by MajorCougar - 2007/11/25 22:30

What is strange is that not only he, but his brother-in-law and 2 nephews will "never go down to Provo again". Boy. 1 guy screws up and it's as if he blames the entire BYU fan base and the city of Provo for the incident. Talk about exaggerating a grudge...

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by WhatWouldBroncoDo - 2007/11/25 22:37

I think its hilarious!
Channel 5 way over did the story.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/25 23:32

a1247 wrote:

Hengst wrote:

Doesn't matter what the guy said. Head butting the guy was way out of line. I'm pretty disappointed in that fan.

So no matter what happened if you are a cougar fan you are just suppose to stand down and be walked over no matter what?:unsure:

Hell no this is exactly what they expect cougar fans to do. And when one does stand up for himself not only does it make the news but cougar fans even act appalled by it.:huh:

No offense Hengst but I'm pretty sure that this Utah fan got what he deserved and he's pissed that it was done to him by a stone cold sober 85 year old grandma. I know what happened is wrong but I am not going to condone someone for sticking up for himself.

I would not be appalled if the "attack" was warranted (because I do believe in standing up for oneself physically in the right situation) but you are (as I pointed out earlier) jumping to the conclusion that he must have "deserved" it. How do you know that? Answer: Because you are "pretty sure he got what he deserved". Nice. Also, a BYU fan saw him after the game and his injuries "didn't look that bad". Its not like he is a human being or anything - he's just a Ute!

Before I am a cougar, I am a Brother to every person out there. Go ahead, ding my karma (I really couldn't care less) but if you "enjoy" somebody getting physically assaulted because of the team they root for you got problems, and no argument will justify your foolish rancor.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by cougarfurr - 2007/11/25 23:49

Dude, look at you, do you just believe everything you hear on the news? This is a ONE-sided story. We'll never know what really happened. For all we know, the Utah fan had it coming...which is my guess as to what happened. Of course from the dirty Utes' mouth, the story will make the BYU fan look bad.

Nobody should judge the byu fan because we don't know what the Ute fan did to provoke it. I'm sure just telling this guy's daughter to "Get out of my seat" wasn't enough to push the byu fan over the top. The drunken Ute probably called her a Bitch or something, in which case he any father should punch him in the face, unless he was a coward.

Dirty, blasted Ute, deserves the broken nose.

GO COUGS!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by cougarfurr - 2007/11/25 23:56

DevilPuncher wrote:

Yeah. I mean that is totally impossible for anyone rooting for BYU to do that. He is such a liar! I think he will go to hell and that guy that hit him will go to heaven for hitting a Ute. Wow...sometimes you guys on this board disappoint. No wonder the Utes are always grumpy, not only do they produce mediocre teams, they also never get the benefit of the doubt.

Dude, if you can't handle hatred for Utes, than keep your ass off this website.

"Sometimes you guys on this board disappoint"

Disappoint who? You? Screw off

YOU disappoint me, this is a fan page.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by byufbrulz - 2007/11/26 00:18

i think this guy is related to Steve Tate :laugh:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by iShowsToGo.com - 2007/11/26 00:39

You can tell the guy is leaving stuff out of the story. He didn't say anything else he said the whole game. I have a question for him "What were your comments like the rest of the game? Any "Cougs suck?" or "Utah is better?" or "BYU is a joke?" Did you use any of those comments the whole game or anything like those?" Notice how the news failed to include that part of information of the story? Wonder why? He is an obnoxious Ute fan, and got beat for it, and went to call the Wham-bulence! HA! Sorry it happened to you, but that is one less ute in LES for 2009!

And I have heard of way worse things happening to BYU fans, so I don't really think this is such a bad case. He needs to suck it up and just admit he got owned on and off the field. Now, I may sound mercy-less, but I play rugby! That is how I am trained to feel! I've broken my nose twice! Just keep going! Go Cougars!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by jadaba31 - 2007/11/26 01:01

Wow what a baby,I have seen several fights at the Byu-Utah games i never saw them on KSL.You want your mommy to sew up the 1 inch cut on your forehead.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by jadaba31 - 2007/11/26 01:01

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by a1247 - 2007/11/26 01:32

MajorCougar wrote:

What is strange is that not only he, but his brother-in-law and 2 nephews will "never go down to Provo again". Boy. 1 guy screws up and it's as if he blames the entire BYU fan base and the city of Provo for the incident. Talk about exaggerating a grudge...

Again I only see this as a positive story by KSL. Now not only is he never going to a Y game again but he and 3 others are never going again. This is good news if you ask me. :laugh:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Tyler1830 - 2007/11/26 05:23

I can't believe anyone's trying to defend the attack or make jokes about it. Assuming that the article accurately describes the events this type of behavior is absolutely unconscionable. I can't understand how anyone -- based on the facts in the article -- would try to make light a fan getting his nose broken at a football game.

That being said, the article only presented one side of the story and I'm sure there is much more to this story than the Ute fan is letting on. Hopefully some other people who sat in the section will come forward with more details. There had to have been dozens of witnesses. I'm sure we'll have more details soon.

Anyways, my guess is, and again this is only my guess, but if the Ute fan knew he were 100% innocent here he could fairly easily find the attacker. All he would have to do is go to the police with the seat numbers for the attacker and his daughter. Assuming that he's a season ticket holder it should be easy enough to track him down. Of course, there may be reasons why he doesn't want to do that.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Cougy_Monster - 2007/11/26 07:21

Tyler1830 wrote:

Assuming that the article accurately describes the events....

Assuming that any one-sided news source accurately describes anything is always a mistake.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bluebrotha - 2007/11/26 08:42

I went to the 2006 BYU-Utah in SLC. Several times I saw Ute fans challenging BYU fans to fight. I personally saw a drunken Ute fan punch a BYU fan in the face and the Ute fan got dragged off by the campus police. That never got mentioned in the news. The difference is it's expected when a Ute fan gets intoxicated and disorderly, but if a BYU fan does anything questionable then it's like a major news story - what does that tell you about who the better fans are?

I would love to hear the BYU fan's side of the story to this incident. Probably more accurate.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by FullyInvested - 2007/11/26 08:54

Dude, if you can't handle hatred for Utes, than keep your a@@@ off this website.

"Sometimes you guys on this board disappoint"

Disappoint who? You? Screw off

YOU disappoint me, this is a fan page.

My friend, there are good fans and there are bad fans. You have a right here as much as anyone else. But when Bronco mendenhall asks us to be Fully Invested Fans I believe he is asking us to be stand-up individuals as well and treat our opponents with respect...as well as our fellow fans. I have a hard time believing that Bronco would have the same tone as you and many other people on this board in regards to this situation.

Bronco has asked his own players to realize that as football players they represent Brigham Young University. And in representing BYU, they also represent the LDS church in the eyes of many people. So he encourages them to be "emissaries of Jesus Christ". I think Bronco also hopes that the fans will be the same.

I would hope that BYU fans would be considered the most gracious of any fans in America. Regardless of what provoked him, it is never right to head-butt another person. We live in a society with order and laws. A real man and a real fan would have the character and self esteem to withhold violence no matter what the provocation. Does the rivalry game make us completely forget what BYU stands for? Man, I hope we can wake up and realize that football is not more important than people. Treating others with respect and kindness, even when they don't do the same, this is one of the things BYU should be all about. Let's not only cheer hard for BYU, but also maintain our dignity and be examples to everyone else.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Slugger - 2007/11/26 09:11

BYUROCKS wrote:

I bet he is not telling the whole story

I agree completely. I have a feeling he is spinning this his way but withholding other details. Besides, if he was gushing blood from his nose wouldn't someone around have notified security or emergency services to get some help? Besides, he probably instigated the entire thing with more than a "get out of my seat" comment. He probably called the guy's daughter (if it really happened as he says) a disgusting word or something. If somebody did that to one of my daughters I'd do the same thing, and it wouldn't have anything to do with a football game. :angry:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by stjohmsmythe - 2007/11/26 09:40

a guy called in to the 1280 morning show just now claiming to be in the row behind this guy. He also claimed to be a seventh day Adventist who happened to get some free tickets and is not a fan of either team. I'm not sure how believable his story is, but he claims that the yoot fan had "a beer in one hand and a cigarette in the other" and a 70 year old man with radio earpiece, asked him to put out his cigarette. He claims that the yoot then got in the guys face calling his wife an "old bag" and other expletives, and the next thing he knew the yoot was bleeding. Who knows if this is true, but since KSL didn't bother trying to verify their version we're all just left to speculate.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by OLB - 2007/11/26 09:52

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2007/11/26 10:02

DevilPuncher wrote:

a1247 wrote:

Hengst wrote:

Doesn't matter what the guy said. Head butting the guy was way out of line. I'm pretty disappointed in that fan.

So no matter what happened if you are a cougar fan you are just suppose to stand down and be walked over no matter what?:unsure:

Hell no this is exactly what they expect coug fans to do. And when one does stand up for himself not only does it make the news but cougar fans even act appalled by it.:huh:

No offense Hengst but I'm pretty sure that this Utah fan got what he deserved and he's pissed that it was done to him by a stone cold sober 85 year old grandma. I know what happened is wrong but I am not going to condone someone for sticking up for himself.

I would not be appalled if the "attack" was warranted (because I do belive in standing up for oneself physically in the right situatino) but you are (as I pointed out earlier) jumping to the conclusion that he must have "deserved" it. How do you know that? Answer: Because you are "pretty sure he got what he desereved". Nice. Also,a BYU fan saw him after the game and his injuries "didn't look that bad". Its not like he is a human being or anything - he's just a Ute!

Before I am a cougar, I am a Brother to every person out there. Go ahead, ding my karma (I really couldn't care less) but if you "enjoy" somebody getting physically assaulted because of the team they root for you got problems, and no argument will justify your foolish rancor.

its called logic, you should try it out sometime. If it was a BYU fan that got his nose broken, I would say the same thing, he probably deserved it. People just don't head butt people for no reason! its like a 90% chance that he did something to deserve it. 9% that he did something stupid, but didn't deserve a broken nose. and a 1% that he was doing nothing, when a rilled BYU fan decided that he just had to break some ute nose.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Hengst - 2007/11/26 10:12

harlinestillopen wrote:

DevilPuncher wrote:

a1247 wrote:

Hengst wrote:

Doesn't matter what the guy said. Head butting the guy was way out of line. I'm pretty disappointed in that fan.

So no matter what happened if you are a cougar fan you are just suppose to stand down and be walked over no matter what?:unsure:

Hell no this is exactly what they expect coug fans to do. And when one does stand up for himself not only does it make the news but cougar fans even act appalled by it.:huh:

No offense Hengst but I'm pretty sure that this Utah fan got what he deserved and he's pissed that it was done to him by a stone cold sober 85 year old grandma. I know what happened is wrong but I am not going to condone someone for sticking up for himself.

I would not be appalled if the "attack" was warranted (because I do believe in standing up for oneself physically in the right situation) but you are (as I pointed out earlier) jumping to the conclusion that he must have "deserved" it. How do you know that? Answer: Because you are "pretty sure he got what he deserved". Nice. Also, a BYU fan saw him after the game and his injuries "didn't look that bad". Its not like he is a human being or anything - he's just a Ute!

Before I am a cougar, I am a Brother to every person out there. Go ahead, ding my karma (I really couldn't care less) but if you "enjoy" somebody getting physically assaulted because of the team they root for you got problems, and no argument will justify your foolish rancor.

its called logic, you should try it out sometime. If it was a BYU fan that got his nose broken, I would say the same thing, he probably deserved it. People just don't head butt people for no reason! its like a 90% chance that he did something to deserve it. 9% that he did something stupid, but didn't deserve a broken nose. and a 1% that he was doing nothing, when a rilled BYU fan decided that he just had to break some ute nose.

The only time that would be an acceptable reaction is if it was self defense (i.e. the ute fan was punching him or his daughter). I just think we all should be bigger than that. Its pretty juvenile to start a physical confrontation with someone. By doing so the Ute fan got exactly what he wanted. He got under a cougar fan's skin, and made us look like idiots.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/26 10:26

harlinestillopen wrote:

DevilPuncher wrote:

a1247 wrote:

Hengst wrote:

Doesn't matter what the guy said. Head butting the guy was way out of line. I'm pretty disappointed in that fan.

So no matter what happened if you are a cougar fan you are just suppose to stand down and be walked over no matter what?:unsure:

Hell no this is exactly what they expect cougar fans to do. And when one does stand up for himself not only does it make the news but cougar fans even act appalled by it.:huh:

No offense Hengst but I'm pretty sure that this Utah fan got what he deserved and he's pissed that it was done to him by a stone cold sober 85 year old grandma. I know what happened is wrong but I am not going to condone someone for sticking up for himself.

I would not be appalled if the "attack" was warranted (because I do believe in standing up for oneself physically in the right situation) but you are (as I pointed out earlier) jumping to the conclusion that he must have "deserved" it. How do you know that? Answer: Because you are "pretty sure he got what he deserved". Nice. Also, a BYU fan saw him after the game and his injuries "didn't look that bad". Its not like he is a human being or anything - he's just a Ute!

Before I am a cougar, I am a Brother to every person out there. Go ahead, ding my karma (I really couldn't care less) but if you "enjoy" somebody getting physically assaulted because of the team they root for you got problems, and no argument will justify your foolish rancor.

its called logic, you should try it out sometime. If it was a BYU fan that got his nose broken, I would say the same thing, he probably deserved it. People just don't head butt people for no reason! its like a 90% chance that he did something to deserve it. 9% that he did something stupid, but didn't deserve a broken nose. and a 1% that he was doing nothing, when a rilled BYU fan decided that he just had to break some ute nose.

Sorry, what I used was logic what you are using is reasoning. It is illogical to assume he deserved it when you don't know that for a fact. However, I agree with you that it is reasonable (probably very reasonable) that there was some provocation. But you obviously know little about logic, and to then throw out you percentages that you made up makes you look even more illogical (and foolish). Good try.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/26 10:31

cougarfurr wrote:

DevilPuncher wrote:

Yeah. I mean that is totally impossible for anyone rooting for BYU to do that. He is such a liar! I think he will go to hell and that guy that hit him will go to heaven for hitting a Ute. Wow...sometimes you guys on this board disappoint. No wonder the Utes are always grumpy, not only do they produce mediocre teams, they also never get the benefit of the doubt.

Dude, if you can't handle hatred for Utes, than keep your ass off this website.

"Sometimes you guys on this board disappoint"

Disappoint who? You? Screw off

YOU disappoint me, this is a fan page.

Wow. I pity you. Thank you for giving even more substance to my sentiment that sometimes some people on this board disappoint.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Slugger - 2007/11/26 10:36

stjohnsmythe wrote:

a guy called in to the 1280 morning show just now claiming to be in the row behind this guy. He also claimed to be a seventh day Adventist who happened to get some free tickets and is not a fan of either team. I'm not sure how believable his story is, but he claims that the yoot fan had "a beer in one hand and a cigarette in the other" and a 70 year old man with radio earpiece, asked him to put out his cigarette. He claims that the yoot then got in the guys face calling his wife an "old bag" and other expletives, and the next thing he knew the yoot was bleeding. Who knows if this is true, but since KSL didn't bother trying to verify their version we're all just left to speculate.

If this guy's story is true, it seems more fitting to what actually happened. A beer in one hand and a cigarette in another? Obviously neither is allowed in the stadium and anyone has a right to ask that they be removed, without resorting to physical violence. But I feel pretty confident that this Ute fans was behaving worse than he is leading on. He seems like a complete wuss to me. The Ute fan was probably intoxicated which would explain why he wasn't able to "find" any security or e-med to help him out. Dude, you're not going to find them in the stall of the bathroom! I would have done the same thing. I'm sick of tolerating people with bad habits that affect my health and life experience. He got what he deserved!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by snoscythe - 2007/11/26 10:44

stjohnsmythe wrote:

a guy called in to the 1280 morning show just now claiming to be in the row behind this guy. He also claimed to be a seventh day Adventist who happened to get some free tickets and is not a fan of either team.

What the deuce is a Seventh Day Adventist doing at a sporting event on a Saturday??

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bluefanguy - 2007/11/26 10:49

This whole story is a joke, and the headlines point that out. "Die Hard Ute Fan Attacked". The guy is TRYING to find a way to distract from the victory and find even more ways to rile up Ute fans to hate BYU.

This is getting ridiculous...We should invent fan helmets with little nose guards or face guards for rivalry games.

Who wants to get in on it with me?

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2007/11/26 10:55

DevilPuncher wrote:

harlinestillopen wrote:

DevilPuncher wrote:

a1247 wrote:

Hengst wrote:

Doesn't matter what the guy said. Head butting the guy was way out of line. I'm pretty disappointed in that fan.

So no matter what happened if you are a cougar fan you are just suppose to stand down and be walked over no matter what?:unsure:

Hell no this is exactly what they expect coug fans to do. And when one does stand up for himself not only does it make the news but cougar fans even act appalled by it.:huh:

No offense Hengst but I'm pretty sure that this Utah fan got what he deserved and he's pissed that it was done to him by a stone cold sober 85 year old grandma. I know what happened is wrong but I am not going to condone someone for sticking up for himself.

I would not be appalled if the "attack" was warranted (because I do belive in standing up for oneself physically in the right situatino) but you are (as I pointed out earlier) jumping to the conclusion that he must have "deserved" it. How do you know that? Answer: Because you are "pretty sure he got what he desereved". Nice. Also,a BYU fan saw him after the game and his injuries "didn't look that bad". Its not like he is a human being or anything - he's just a Ute!

Before I am a cougar, I am a Brother to every person out there. Go ahead, ding my karma (I really couldn't care less) but if you "enjoy" somebody getting physically assaulted because of the team they root for you got problems, and no argument will justify your foolish rancor.

its called logic, you should try it out sometime. If it was a BYU fan that got his nose broken, I would say the same thing, he probably deserved it. People just don't head butt people for no reason! its like a 90% chance that he did something to deserve it. 9% that he did something stupid, but didn't deserve a broken nose. and a 1% that he was doing nothing, when a rilled BYU fan decided that he just had to break some ute nose.

Sorry, what I used was logic what you are using is reasoning. It is illogical to assume he deserved it when you don't know that for a fact. However, I agree with you that it is reasonable (probably very reasonable) that there was some provocation. But you obviously know little about logic, and to then throw out you percentages that you made up makes you look even more illogical (and foolish). Good try.

haha! come on, so this guy tells his daughter to move, and the other guy decides that is to far, and so he head butts him??? BULL! People don't just go around head butting other people (even if they are ute fans!) come on, you can't seriously buy that.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Hengst - 2007/11/26 10:56

snoscythe wrote:

stjohnsmythe wrote:

a guy called in to the 1280 morning show just now claiming to be in the row behind this guy. He also claimed to be a seventh day Adventist who happened to get some free tickets and is not a fan of either team.

What the deuce is a Seventh Day Adventist doing at a sporting event on a Saturday??

Good point, probably not a completely honest account egh.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Sammich - 2007/11/26 11:00

Would this do the trick?

<http://i37.photobucket.com/albums/e66/nielsons/UteGuard.jpg>

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by stjohmsmythe - 2007/11/26 11:05

Hengst wrote:

snoscythe wrote:

stjohmsmythe wrote:

a guy called in to the 1280 morning show just now claiming to be in the row behind this guy. He also claimed to be a seventh day Adventist who happened to get some free tickets and is not a fan of either team.

What the deuce is a Seventh Day Adventist doing at a sporting event on a Saturday??

Good point, probably not a completely honest account egh.

Is there such thing as a jack-seventh day Adventist? doesn't really roll off the tongue like jack-mormon.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by jrclone - 2007/11/26 11:08

Hengst wrote:

The only time that would be an acceptable reaction is if it was self defense (i.e. the ute fan was punching him or his daughter). I just think we all should be bigger than that. It's pretty juvenile to start a physical confrontation with someone. By doing so the Ute fan got exactly what he wanted. He got under a cougar fan's skin, and made us look like idiots.

I don't feel like an idiot for the action of one byu fan. I agree that it is a shame that there was a physical altercation, but the guy didn't die. He barely even looked hurt. He also said himself that the ute's loss hurt more than his broken nose. This is just a story that has been blown way out of proportion, but again, I don't feel like I look like an idiot based on what happened.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Mozart - 2007/11/26 11:15

I'll put it this way: Every fanbase has their yewts.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by shakeNbake - 2007/11/26 11:16

I would defend myself if physically assaulted - or if my child were for that matter. That policy is the same regardless of whether I'm at a game or at the grocery store.

You can count on this - there is always 3 sides to every story: 1) your side, 2) their side, and 3) the entire truth.

Too bad that this happened, ultimately.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/26 11:22

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tongue in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of a sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voice changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by OLB - 2007/11/26 11:32

Redrules wrote:

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

There is a part of me that finds it totally disgraceful. There is a part of me that finds the story amusing.

If you read this entire thread, you'll hear about BYU fans that were assaulted at Rice-Eccles after the Cougs won last year. But were those stories reported in the MSM? No, they weren't.

The fact that the guy and his family are complaining about this on a SLC TV station, compared with the injuries he received, is comical. It is a joke. Be a man. Smack the guy back. Don't run to KSL, and complain that you got your pretty face got an "owie".

I think that the Vlade Divac label is appropriate. Divac always got touched when he fell to the floor, but it didn't mean that it was actually a foul. Same thing with this guy. Ya, the guy got hit, but it doesn't look like it was much of a hit. I don't believe his nose was broken, and the little scrape on his face looks like one of his kids got a little too rough during some horse play.

I was expecting to see some guy with bruises or a blood shot eye. If I didn't know that the guy had been hit in the face, I wouldn't be able to tell that he had been assaulted. The guy is a sissy.

If a BYU fan had been assaulted in the same fashion, I'd tell the guy to man up and hit the Ute fan back or to move on with their life.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by rackem - 2007/11/26 11:35

Totally owning your transgressions is the "only way" to handle this situation. If you're the perp, take care of business, turn your self in, and turn a new leaf. If you're the victom, figure out why you brought this into your space and own it. No lies, no omissions...just deal with it and forgive. No judgement, no excuses, just do and learn and move forward. Carrying crap around from either position doesn't make this go away. Deal.

Rackem'

I know...a little preachy, oh well. :dry: Deal with it.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/26 11:57

stjohnsmythe wrote:

a guy called in to the 1280 morning show just now claiming to be in the row behind this guy. He also claimed to be a seventh day Adventist who happened to get some free tickets and is not a fan of either team. I'm not sure how believable his story is, but he claims that the yoot fan had "a beer in one hand and a cigarette in the other" and a 70 year old man with radio earpiece, asked him to put out his cigarette. He claims that the yoot then got in the guys face calling his wife an "old bag" and other expletives, and the next thing he knew the yoot was bleeding. Who knows if this is true, but since KSL didn't bother trying to verify their version we're all just left to speculate.

I heard the same thing. I don't believe for a second that the guy was what he claimed. He also talked about being in prison for a while. He was very funny and I truly hope it happened as he described, but I don't believe it for a second.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/26 12:00

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by idahocougarfan - 2007/11/26 12:11

I was just looking at the comments on the KSL page and somebody posted a picture of the ute fan.
<http://i4.photobucket.com/albums/y134/adamparkcity/DSC02419.jpg>

It looks a lot of blood gushing there :laugh: and looks like he was able to find a cop too, stupid ute fan

GO COUGARS!!!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by swingcat - 2007/11/26 12:18

I love how in the picture there are some BYU fans above him just laughing at him. That is such a little wound! It looks like he just popped a huge pimple! Hahahahaha

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/11/26 12:21

idahocougarfan wrote:

I was just looking at the comments on the KSL page and somebody posted a picture of the ute fan.
<http://i4.photobucket.com/albums/y134/adamparkcity/DSC02419.jpg>

It looks a lot of blood gushing there :laugh: and looks like he was able to find a cop too, stupid ute fan

GO COUGARS!!!

Oh my gosh. What a freaking baby. I can see it now. "I'm telling on you."

p.s. Those are not the results of a real headbut, maybe more like a headbrush or headsrape. If he were to take a real headbut to the nose he would look a lot more messed up.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

snoscythe wrote:

stjohnsmythe wrote:

a guy called in to the 1280 morning show just now claiming to be in the row behind this guy. He also claimed to be a seventh day Adventist who happened to get some free tickets and is not a fan of either team.

What the deuce is a Seventh Day Adventist doing at a sporting event on a Saturday??

Good point sno! Let's see, a Seventh Day Adventist attending a rivalry football game on Saturday with free tickets? Sounds fishy to me! ;)

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by UnderRated_Cougars - 2007/11/26 12:33

Thanks for the photo link. This is now my wallpaper at work!

In my opinion, nobody physically hurts someone unless they really get riled up. My bet is this guy was being offensive the entire game, said a rude or crude comment to this a BYU fan's daughter, and finally got what was coming to him.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/26 13:04

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of a sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means lets hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then lets look at it.
a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.
b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.
c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.
d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.
Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by BYUROCKS - 2007/11/26 13:04

Sammich wrote:
Would this do the trick?
<http://i37.photobucket.com/albums/e66/nielsons/UteGuard.jpg>

:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by AF_Puma - 2007/11/26 13:04

shakeNbake wrote:
I would defend myself if physically assaulted - or if my child were for that matter. That policy is the same regardless of whether I'm at a game or at the grocery store.

You can count on this - there is always 3 sides to every story: 1) your side, 2) their side, and 3) the entire truth.

Too bad that this happened, ultimately.

This is my feeling exactly.

When I attended the 2004 game in Salt Lake City, my daughter had a small sign with her that said, "Feel Our Payne". A middle-age man sitting two rows behind yelled at her that if she lifted the sign up above her head he'd ram it down her throat. Being totally surrounded by Yewts as I had purchased the tickets of a Yewt season ticket holder, I didn't head-butt the individual. I probably wouldn't have done it if surrounded by BYU fans either, but I might have said more back to him. Had he touched her whatsoever, I would have attempted to knock the guy senseless (whether I succeeded or not) and then proceed to find a police officer. She didn't lift the sign too far up the whole game and I didn't feel the need to edge the guy on by doing that either as he had a point if she were to lift the sign up often it would have obstructed his view. It's hard for a real fan of either team to handle being surrounded by opposing team fans in a game. Saturday I had two Yewt fans on my right, but other than clap when Utah did well and B&M when they were hit with the two 15-yard penalties on BYU's last drive, they were just average fans and not offensive at all.

I will admit that I was sore tempted to throw something at the Yewt fan two rows ahead of me though that didn't remove his hat for either the prayer or the singing of the national anthem, but my calmer side luckily prevailed. I noticed a BYU fan doing the same a few rows ahead of him. I have a problem with people showing that kind of disrespect, but I always have to wonder if they just don't forget and they are not actually trying to make a statement.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by x_rugger - 2007/11/26 14:09

in most cases a physical responce in neither appropriate nor required. you can deflect most with a smile, a kind word, and choosing not to let them get to you no matter what.

last year at res i sat in the crimson club and had a great time with the ute fans that i sat by. only one time did anyone say anything to me, and the people around me took care of it. i know that is not always the case, and there are knuckle heads everywhere, but most of the time trouble can be avoided.

in this situation there has to be more than what was reported. a broken nose for asking a little girl to move doesn't compute. to make it worse, i have heard the he is thinking about suing the byu police for taking too long to respond. it doesn't pass the smell test, at least for now.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by kiwibacon - 2007/11/26 14:34

Quote from the article Brett Johnson, assaulted at football game: "I've never had a broken nose, but I knew something was definitely wrong. I couldn't breathe out of it and there was blood gushing all over my face." Picture of U fan with the gushing blood all over his face.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by kiwibacon - 2007/11/26 14:47

Sorry, here is pic. http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/rsz_GUSHING.jpg Really weak to be calling gushing. With that his story to KSL has lost credibility with me. His half story after seeing that picture seems now half baked.:side:

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/26 15:00

I agree that the whole story doesn't quite add up. The whole story may not justify a punch in the nose, but it would be nice to know.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/26 15:13

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tongue in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of a sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voice changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means lets hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then lets look at it.

a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.

b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.

c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.

d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.

Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

My intent with my post, was in part to hit a nerve. Looks like I did. Kinda raw right now huh?

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/26 16:01

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry.

But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means lets hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then lets look at it.

a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.

b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.

c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.

d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.

Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

My intent with my post, was in part to hit a nerve. Looks like I did. Kinda raw right now huh?

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. Thats not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It take a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often then not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Hengst - 2007/11/26 16:15

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of a sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means lets hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then lets look at it.
a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.
b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.
c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.
d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.
Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

My intent with my post, was in part to hit a nerve. Looks like I did. Kinda raw right now huh?

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. Thats not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It take a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often then not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Was it luck, or divine intervention ;-)

I'm totally kidding :-) Just wanted to get your face to turn red (pun intended :-))

You're right, BYU was incredibly lucky in some instances in that game (they were also unlucky in some as well), but I'm not complaining. Luck or no luck, a W is a W. This has got to be the craziest rivalry on the planet. I can't think of another one where it comes down to the last play so often.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Slugger - 2007/11/26 16:16

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means lets hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then lets look at it.

a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.

b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.

c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.

d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.

Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

My intent with my post, was in part to hit a nerve. Looks like I did. Kinda raw right now huh?

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. Thats not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It take a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often then not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Actually, "lucky" would be great defensive coverage and the ball somehow slipping through the defender's hands and into Collie's lap. This was more an issue of the Utes forgetting how to play defense, like they do in the last two minutes of every game against the Cougars. Hal; scrambled, found an open guy and got the ball to him. No luck there. It was a great play and the expense of a defensive breakdown.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/26 16:19

Hengst wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur.

Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means lets hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then lets look at it.

a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.

b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.

c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.

d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.

Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

My intent with my post, was in part to hit a nerve. Looks like I did. Kinda raw right now huh?

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. Thats not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It take a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often then not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Was it luck, or divine intervention ;-)

I'm totally kidding :-)) Just wanted to get your face to turn red (pun intended :-))

You're right, BYU was incredibly lucky in some instances in that game (they were also unlucky in some as well), but I'm not complaining. Luck or no luck, a W is a W. This has got to be the craziest rivalry on the planet. I can't think of another one where it comes down to the last play so often.

Dang right a W is a W. I would have taken a lucky win. It could be divine intervention, but if it was the last two years then it was when the U one also:). We all get our day in the barrel.

My face is already red!!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/26 16:21

Slugger wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tounge in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry.

But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voiced changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But lets ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means lets hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then lets look at it.

a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.

b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.

c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.

d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.

Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

My intent with my post, was in part to hit a nerve. Looks like I did. Kinda raw right now huh?

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. Thats not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It take a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often then not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Actually, "lucky" would be great defensive coverage and the ball somehow slipping through the defender's hands and into Collie's lap. This was more an issue of the Utes forgetting how to play defense, like they do in the last two minutes of every game against the Cougars. Hal; scrambled, found an open guy and got the ball to him. No luck there. It was a great play and the expense of a defensive breakdown.

Can't argue here either. We stunk this play up.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by ABYUFAN - 2007/11/26 17:30

Redrules wrote:

Slugger wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

OLB wrote:

Here are some of my thoughts on this:

1. I think that it is disgraceful for any BYU fan to assault an opposing team's fan, unless the opposing team said something (i.e. "your daughter is a bitch") that would justify an altercation. From the news story (albeit one sided) it seems like that it was a rather unprovoked attack.

Having said that, I point back to a previous post concerning bloodshed and rivalries. I wrote earlier that it isn't a real rivalry unless someone gets killed. Obviously I wrote it as a tongue in cheek commentary on the Missouri-Kansas rivalry. But I think unless you have a little bit of pure, diabolical hatred, you can't have a real rivalry. There is a part of me that is glad someone got "hurt" on Saturday. This will only add to the lore of the rivalry.

2. The Ute fan is a sissy. The cut looks more like a nasty pimple and I couldn't tell that his nose was broken. The guy is like the Vlade Divac of Ute Fans. You smack them a little bit and they go off in the corner and cry. Pathetic.

3. The brother in law is even more of a sissy. He didn't want to give his name? Well, I guess if I was a Ute fan, I wouldn't want to give out my name either. I'm surprised the guy didn't request to be filmed with a hat and glasses on, or have his voice changed. I'm glad that you don't want to come down to Provo any more. There is already too much traffic.

Try this approach and it might have a more truthful ring to it. It is disgraceful for ANY fan to assault an opposing fan for any reason.

Then just end it there. When you try to minimize the injury and therefore the assault you just come off as a hypocrite. Go dig into your law book a little and you'll find that there doesn't even have to be injury or contact for assault to occur. Clearly there was injury here so the assault took place. Maybe the Ute fan was out of line I don't know. If he was then HE should just chalk it up to the rivalry getting out of hand. But I'm pretty sure that if the table were turned, we'd be hearing an outcry of disgust against the Ute assaulter regardless of the injury.

I agree with the assault description. But to say that the outcry would be the same if it happened the opposite way means that you are ignorant or an idiot. But let's ask my sister-in-law. She was attacked by a Utah fan at RES during a BYU/Utah game while she was wearing her blue. The only thing that saved her was that some other fans got in the way. She said she was petrified but that didn't seem to make the news.

At least we have men fighting men at LES. At RES a man will attack a woman. Nice.

Yes by all means let's hide behind the skirt of your sister in law. But if you must then let's look at it.

a- where's the proof? You saying it happened.

b- Most Utah fans would protect her as well. Maybe some did.

c- Assault is not dependant on sex of victim.

d- If we use your logic or the logic of some on this board, she must have done something to deserve it, and they would have only given her a minor broken nose.

Your own justification is more than a little hollow.

My intent with my post, was in part to hit a nerve. Looks like I did. Kinda raw right now huh?

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. That's not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It takes a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often than not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Actually, "lucky" would be great defensive coverage and the ball somehow slipping through the defender's hands and into Collie's lap. This was more an issue of the Utes forgetting how to play defense, like they do in the last two minutes of every game against the Cougars. Hal; scrambled, found an open guy and got the ball to him. No luck there. It was a great play and the expense of a defensive breakdown.

Can't argue here either. We stunk this play up.

Actually Utah was lucky that BYU needed "luck" to win the game

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by LoyalCougar - 2007/11/26 19:13

kiwibacon wrote:

Forum - Cougarblue

FireBoard Forum Component version: 1.0.4

Generated: 8 January, 2009, 19:07

Sorry, here is pic. http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/rsz_GUSHING.jpg Really weak to be calling gushing. With that his story to KSL has lost credibility with me. His half story after seeing that picture seems now half baked.:side:

Thanks for sharing the pic. I didn't really believe him when I saw the news last night and now I'm not even sure it even happened at all.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by idahocougarfan - 2007/11/26 20:41

I usually believe KSL pretty good, but they are encouraging this story way too much. Now they are saying it is generating security concerns at BYU. I know that this would probably happen on any other incident at the stadium, but there is not enough evidence yet. It seems like the BYU cops believe it as well the way they talk about it. I would like to have the BYU fan come out and give his side of the story.

Here is the link to the latest story, personally I think KSL is taking it to far with out real proof.

<http://www.ksl.com/?nid=148&sid=2221690>

GO COUGARS!!!!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by MajorCougar - 2007/11/26 22:03

I'm not a doctor, but if a guy got his nose broken like he said he did, wouldn't:

- 1) it be crooked, bent, and/or bleeding?
- 2) In the interview, wouldn't he have 2 black eyes - that sure liked like "quick recovery" for a concave nose...

"I'm not getting it..."

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Hengst - 2007/11/26 22:12

I've seen people with broken noses, and that guy doesn't have one. I just saw the report and he looks like he cut his forehead shaving his eyebrows. If he had broken his nose he would be swollen, and he'd have dark circles under his eyes. I'm starting to think he just made up the story.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/26 22:34

Redrules wrote:

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. That's not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It take a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often then not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Actually that really makes me laugh. I just commented that the outrage wouldn't be at the same level if it happened at RES because it hasn't been when it happened in the past. You then got upset and accused me of lying. Kind of reminds me of 3rd grade when your argument doesn't hold up you resort to name calling. Your inability to accept what I said doesn't change the facts.

Assault is horrible no matter how it happened. Too bad that he didn't get the names of the person who did it. But I find it interesting that it would have been easy to tell security that the person who did this to him was sitting in a specific seat. They could have easily checked records and gone from there. Seems kind of suspicious that they are not doing that.

I am glad that my comments about a Ute fan assaulting a woman bothers you, but I would hope that what bothers you is that it would happen. That doesn't seem to bother you. You seem to be upset that someone would make the accusation. Sad.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by SaltLakeCoug - 2007/11/26 23:25

Rumor has it that this fool was poppin off at some polys. If this is true he is lucky he got away with only a headbutt. :laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by SaltLakeCoug - 2007/11/26 23:27

Rumor has it that this fool was poppin off at some polys. If this is true he is lucky he got away with only a headbutt. :laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by carolina_cougar - 2007/11/26 23:55

Hengst wrote:

I've seen people with broken noses, and that guy doesn't have one. I just saw the report and he looks like he cut his forehead shaving his eyebrows. If he had broken his nose he would be swollen, and he'd have dark circles under his eyes. I'm starting to think he just made up the story.

THAT was funny, Hengst! I just missed the excitement myself. It happened at the south end of the east bleachers about section RR and just after the fans in large numbers stormed the field. I had turned to go down the ramp and out of the corner of my eye I saw what looked like a BYU fan restraining the guy in the photo from diving over the railing to get to someone in the bleachers. The Ute was angry and someone in the crowd around us said, "Hey, they're fighting...that guy's bleeding." People nearby were trying to get past the meelee without getting roughed up or knocked over by what was going on. I thought to myself that the Ute was probably mad they lost and let his temper get the best of him. Honestly, I didn't see any blood because there was so little.

CC

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by JaredCowley - 2007/11/27 00:04

My goodness. I only read the first three or four pages of this thread, but I've got to say, I'm a little disgusted by how some BYU fans are acting. You say we're hearing the story one-sided, so you automatically assume that he did something horrible to this little girl and deserved what he got. That's ridiculous. The guy looks like a solid, upstanding guy and even though appearances can be deceiving, I'm inclined to believe the guy, Ute or not, until I hear something concrete to refute his story. If it comes out that he called the girl a bitch or something, then I'll change my stance. But it's absolute immaturity to automatically denounce this guy's story because he roots for Utah. Just imagine for a second that what this guy is saying is what happened. If so, then the BYU fan that did it is an ass. A total loser. A disgrace to BYU fans everywhere.

Jared Cowley

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by iShowsToGo.com - 2007/11/27 00:50

Point 1) Some people have said that "A BYU fan should not act that way. We should act with dignity and class" I think it was Elder Ballard who said "The best reaction to outrageous behavior is outrage!" If a man is smoking and drinking in our stadium, which has a No smoking and drinking policy, and a man asks him to obey that policy, I think that is outrageous that the ute fan wouldn't follow it. Outragous behavior might have been necessary.

Point 2) If he was messing with some poly's, he is way lucky! Everyone heard about what happened at Hawaii a couple weeks ago. All this guy got was a head butt.

Point 3) There are some missing points to this story. I doubt a fan would just head butt him for asking someone to get out of his seat. That happens all the time. Notice that he is not too clear as to the exact details of the whole story. I bet that guy on the radio actually spoke some true words there. Would not surprise me. If a ute fan was sitting in my section and was smoking and drinking, and after I asked him to stop, he cussed at me, I might head butt him too!

Go Cougars!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by iShowsToGo.com - 2007/11/27 00:52

JaredCowley wrote:

My goodness. I only read the first three or four pages of this thread, but I've got to say, I'm a little disgusted by how some BYU fans are acting. You say we're hearing the story one-sided, so you automatically assume that he did something horrible to this little girl and deserved what he got. That's ridiculous. The guy looks like a solid, upstanding guy and even though appearances can be deceiving, I'm inclined to believe the guy, Ute or not, until I hear something concrete to refute his story. If it comes out that he called the girl a bitch or something, then I'll change my stance. But it's absolute immaturity to automatically denounce this guy's story because he roots for Utah. Just imagine for a second that what this guy is saying is what happened. If so, then the BYU fan that did it is an ass. A total loser. A disgrace to BYU fans everywhere.

Jared Cowley

We have the guy who reported this morning on 1280 that said he was drinking and smoking, and when asked to stop, he wouldn't, and swore at the people around him. Deliberate disobedience to stadium policy, and religious standards of the fans and the school. Everyone knows that BYU doesn't smoke or drink, but he brought it into the stadium. I'm not saying he deserved it, but again, the best response to outrageous behavior is outrage.

GO Cougars!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by poppa - 2007/11/27 01:18

JaredCowley wrote:

My goodness. I only read the first three or four pages of this thread, but I've got to say, I'm a little disgusted by how some BYU fans are acting. You say we're hearing the story one-sided, so you automatically assume that he did something horrible to this little girl and deserved what he got. That's ridiculous. The guy looks like a solid, upstanding guy and even though appearances can be deceiving, I'm inclined to believe the guy, Ute or not, until I hear something concrete to refute his story. If it comes out that he called the girl a bitch or something, then I'll change my stance. But it's absolute immaturity to automatically denounce this guy's story because he roots for Utah. Just imagine for a second that what this guy is saying is what happened. If so, then the BYU fan that did it is an ass. A total loser. A disgrace to BYU fans everywhere.

Jared Cowley

I have got to go with Jared on this one. We are susceptible to Ute like behavior from time to time and I hope we fans don't let things get out of hand. I don't know everything that happened and until I do I will not prematurely make a judgement about who was wrong and who deserves what. Hopefully we as fans can make sure that none of this stuff happens at LES regardless of the rudeness of the opposing fan!!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2007/11/27 04:25

Man you BYU fans are worst then Hawaii fans and you're not even drunk!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Slugger - 2007/11/27 04:48

JaredCowley wrote:

My goodness. I only read the first three or four pages of this thread, but I've got to say, I'm a little disgusted by how some BYU fans are acting. You say we're hearing the story one-sided, so you automatically assume that he did something horrible to this little girl and deserved what he got. That's ridiculous. The guy looks like a solid, upstanding guy and even though appearances can be deceiving, I'm inclined to believe the guy, Ute or not, until I hear something concrete to refute his story. If it comes out that he called the girl a bitch or something, then I'll change my stance. But it's absolute immaturity to automatically denounce this guy's story because he roots for Utah. Just imagine for a second that what this guy is saying is what happened. If so, then the BYU fan that did it is an ass. A total loser. A disgrace to BYU fans everywhere.

Jared Cowley

Of course he looks like and solid, upstanding guy, he cleaned himself up before he went on camera. Doesn't everybody dress up before they go before the judge? I think this guy is a sleezeball that is trying to portray something in a different light. Until I hear the other side's story I will wonder and doubt.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2007/11/27 08:22

JaredCowley wrote:

My goodness. I only read the first three or four pages of this thread, but I've got to say, I'm a little disgusted by how some BYU fans are acting. You say we're hearing the story one-sided, so you automatically assume that he did something horrible to this little girl and deserved what he got. That's ridiculous. The guy looks like a solid, upstanding guy and even though appearances can be deceiving, I'm inclined to believe the guy, Ute or not, until I hear something concrete to refute his story.

ok, so your judging him on how he looks

I am judging him on the odds that he didn't get a head to the nose for nothing. Don't take this hollier than thou approach when your doing the same thing that a lot of us are doing.

I don't see what the big deal is. Either he said something/did something so that he deserved it, or he didn't. If he did, then no biggie. If he didn't, then one.... COUNT IT ONE BYU fan did something stupid. REALLY stupid. Why does it really matter what we think

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/27 09:00

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. That's not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It takes a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often than not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Actually that really makes me laugh. I just commented that the outrage wouldn't be at the same level if it happened at RES because it hasn't been when it happened in the past. You then got upset and accused me of lying. Kind of reminds me of 3rd grade when your argument doesn't hold up you resort to name calling. Your inability to accept what I said doesn't change the facts.

Assault is horrible no matter how it happened. Too bad that he didn't get the names of the person who did it. But I find it interesting that it would have been easy to tell security that the person who did this to him was sitting in a specific seat. They could have easily checked records and gone from there. Seems kind of suspicious that they are not doing that.

I am glad that my comments about a Ute fan assaulting a woman bothers you, but I would hope that what bothers you is that it would happen. That doesn't seem to bother you. You seem to be upset that someone would make the accusation. Sad.

OK you need to either go back and read what was written or enroll in a comprehension class. You are putting words in my mouth that I didn't say.

I didn't say you were lying, I suggested that the proof had to be more than just your say so. If there was less outrage about the incident that you say occurred at RES then perhaps it's because the press didn't report it. If they had I'm pretty sure there would be equal outrage. I'm not sure how you decided that I wouldn't be upset about a woman or anyone else being assaulted. Didn't I say wrong is wrong? This would imply that I would believe it to be wrong regardless of location, etc.

As for finding who did it. Most people who commit a crime don't just hang around and wait for the police to show up. I don't know this happened but it is possible that he realized what he had done and left the stadium. What records would you like them to check. I bought my ticket but I'm quite sure they have no record of me. And finally when you go back and read the post, I think you'll find who resorted to name calling, which is often what happens when you choose to defend the wrong side of an issue.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by JaredCowley - 2007/11/27 10:09

harlinestillopen wrote:

JaredCowley wrote:

My goodness. I only read the first three or four pages of this thread, but I've got to say, I'm a little disgusted by how some BYU fans are acting. You say we're hearing the story one-sided, so you automatically assume that he did something horrible to this little girl and deserved what he got. That's ridiculous. The guy looks like a solid, upstanding guy and even though appearances can be deceiving, I'm inclined to believe the guy, Ute or not, until I hear something concrete to refute his story.

ok, so your judging him on how he looks

I am judging him on the odds that he didn't get a head to the nose for nothing. Don't take this holier than thou approach when your doing the same thing that a lot of us are doing.

I don't see what the big deal is. Either he said something/did something so that he deserved it, or he didn't. If he did, then no biggie. If he didn't, then one.... COUNT IT ONE BYU fan did something stupid. REALLY stupid. Why does it really matter what we think

Sorry, but I just have to say, if thinking it's not OK for a fan to headbutt another fan during a sporting event is being "holier than thou," then I'm guilty as charged. There's no reasonable justification for what this guy did. Even if this Utah fan was being as horrible as the majority of you are thinking, then stadium security should have been alerted and it should have been left at that.

Seriously guys, we're not European soccer fans.

Jared Cowley

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bengel - 2007/11/27 10:34

I'm with Jared Cowley. I am not aware of anything that comes close to justifying a headbutt to the Ute fan. The only thing that would justify the use of that kind of force would be the threat or application of similar force. Words simply will not cut it as a justification, whatever they may have been.

For those of you who take the position that Utah fan got what he deserved, may you get what you deserve by the standard you are applying, and may you get it immediately, without recourse of any kind.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/27 10:53

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. That's not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It takes a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often than not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Actually that really makes me laugh. I just commented that the outrage wouldn't be at the same level if it happened at RES because it hasn't been when it happened in the past. You then got upset and accused me of lying. Kind of reminds me of 3rd grade when your argument doesn't hold up you resort to name calling. Your inability to accept what I said doesn't change the facts.

Assault is horrible no matter how it happened. Too bad that he didn't get the names of the person who did it. But I find it interesting that it would have been easy to tell security that the person who did this to him was sitting in a specific seat. They could have easily checked records and gone from there. Seems kind of suspicious that they are not doing that.

I am glad that my comments about a Ute fan assaulting a woman bothers you, but I would hope that what bothers you is that it would happen. That doesn't seem to bother you. You seem to be upset that someone would make the accusation. Sad.

OK you need to either go back and read what was written or enroll in a comprehension class. You are putting words in my mouth that I didn't say.

I didn't say you were lying, I suggested that the proof had to be more than just your say so. If there was less outrage about the incident that you say occurred at RES then perhaps it's because the press didn't report it. If they had I'm pretty sure there would be equal outrage. I'm not sure how you decided that I wouldn't be upset about a woman or anyone else being assaulted. Didn't I say wrong is wrong? This would imply that I would believe it to be wrong regardless of location, etc.

As for finding who did it. Most people who commit a crime don't just hang around and wait for the police to show up. I don't know this happened but it is possible that he realized what he had done and left the stadium. What records would you like them to check. I bought my ticket but I'm quite sure they have no record of me. And finally when you go back and read the post, I think you'll find who resorted to name calling, which is often what happens when you choose to defend the wrong side of an issue.

Instead of expressing outrage that my sister-in-law was attacked you accused me of hiding behind her skirt and asked for proof. Some Ute fans jump on the guy and he was removed. No one reported it because that is looked on as normal behavior there. You seemed quite defensive. I made a simple statement that pissed you off and you responded emotionally.

As far as tracking down the person I will use small words and speak slowly. This seems very simple to me but I sometimes forget my audience. You first show the officer what seat the person was sitting in. They check the school records to determine if it is a season ticket holder. Then they check with that person and the victim could identify if that was the right one. It is possible that someone else used their tickets. They might or might not tell them who used them. They could always be subpoenaed and find out under oath who used the tickets. It is possible that this would be a dead end but should be checked. It might have been already. I know this is hard to understand for you but have someone explain it if I used too many big words.

And BYU wasn't lucky to win. We had divine intervention. Didn't you hear Austin Collie's statements? ;)

BTW, it must be nice to know that our QB beat you guys with the same shoulder injury that Johnson suffered and was out for three weeks. Must be nice knowing you have him for another year.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/27 11:08

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

Not raw at all. This incident means nothing to me personally. I watched a hard fought game, rooted for my team, threw a little SH!% at the other team, took a little as well and had fun. BYU was lucky to win. That's not a slam. Sometime a little luck is what it takes. Now before I get slammed with stats and other BS telling me how dominant the Cougs were think about this. 4th and 18. It takes a little luck to convert this or it would happen more often than not and punters would not get any play time. So back to the assault. I think what really may have happened is that you read your post, realized how stupid it was (or maybe it was ignorant and idiotic) and decided to bail. You can put any twist on any action you would like but wrong is wrong.

Actually that really makes me laugh. I just commented that the outrage wouldn't be at the same level if it happened at RES because it hasn't been when it happened in the past. You then got upset and accused me of lying. Kind of reminds me of 3rd grade when your argument doesn't hold up you resort to name calling. Your inability to accept what I said doesn't change the facts.

Assault is horrible no matter how it happened. Too bad that he didn't get the names of the person who did it. But I find it interesting that it would have been easy to tell security that the person who did this to him was sitting in a specific seat. They could have easily checked records and gone from there. Seems kind of suspicious that they are not doing that.

I am glad that my comments about a Ute fan assaulting a woman bothers you, but I would hope that what bothers you is that it would happen. That doesn't seem to bother you. You seem to be upset that someone would make the accusation. Sad.

OK you need to either go back and read what was written or enroll in a comprehension class. You are putting words in my mouth that I didn't say.

I didn't say you were lying, I suggested that the proof had to be more than just your say so. If there was less outrage about the incident that you say occurred at RES then perhaps it's because the press didn't report it. If they had I'm pretty sure there would be equal outrage. I'm not sure how you decided that I wouldn't be upset about a woman or anyone else being assaulted. Didn't I say wrong is wrong? This would imply that I would believe it to be wrong regardless of location, etc.

As for finding who did it. Most people who commit a crime don't just hang around and wait for the police to show up. I don't know this happened but it is possible that he realized what he had done and left the stadium. What records would you like them to check. I bought my ticket but I'm quite sure they have no record of me. And finally when you go back and read the post, I think you'll find who resorted to name calling, which is often what happens when you choose to defend the wrong side of an issue.

Instead of expressing outrage that my sister-in-law was attacked you accused me of hiding behind her skirt and asked for proof. Some Ute fans jump on the guy and he was removed. No one reported it because that is looked on as normal behavior there. You seemed quite defensive. I made a simple statement that pissed you off and you responded emotionally.

As far as tracking down the person I will use small words and speak slowly. This seems very simple to me but I sometimes forget my audience. You first show the officer what seat the person was sitting in. They check the school records to determine if it is a season ticket holder. Then they check with that person and the victim could identify if that was the right one. It is possible that someone else used their tickets. They might or might not tell them who used them. They could always be subpoenaed and find out under oath who used the tickets. It is possible that this would be a dead end but should be checked. It might have been already. I know this is hard to understand for you but have someone explain it if I used too many big words.

And BYU wasn't lucky to win. We had divine intervention. Didn't you hear Austin Collie's statements? ;)

BTW, it must be nice to know that our QB beat you guys with the same shoulder injury that Johnson suffered and was out for three weeks. Must be nice knowing you have him for another year.

I didn't know the people involved were season ticket holders. Were they?
I didn't express outrage at either incident, I did state that it was wrong, regardless of who, where, etc.
I am neither pissed or emotional. I really don't care, but I do think it is an unfortunate incident. I would think that regardless of who was injured. As far as that type of behaviour tolerated as normal at the U, you are full of shit, and it shows. Luckily for you sister in law some Ute fans jumped in and helped. Too bad the Y fans didn't step in and help this guy. That divine intervention is a good thing to have on your side. I guess when the U beat the Y four years in a row you guys must have been sinning more. Thanks for cleaning up your behavior!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/27 11:12

JaredCowley wrote:

My goodness. I only read the first three or four pages of this thread, but I've got to say, I'm a little disgusted by how some BYU fans are acting. You say we're hearing the story one-sided, so you automatically assume that he did something horrible to this little girl and deserved what he got. That's ridiculous. The guy looks like a solid, upstanding guy and even though appearances can be deceiving, I'm inclined to believe the guy, Ute or not, until I hear something concrete to refute his story. If it comes out that he called the girl a bitch or something, then I'll change my stance. But it's absolute immaturity to automatically denounce this guy's story because he roots for Utah. Just imagine for a second that what this guy is saying is what happened. If so, then the BYU fan that did it is an ass. A total loser. A disgrace to BYU fans everywhere.

Jared Cowley

Thank you Jared. I appreciate having another person on my side. I said this in the first few pages of the thread and got ridiculed because of it. This is a simple case of right and wrong - which cannot be determined without knowing both sides.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/27 11:23

Redrules wrote:

I didn't know the people involved were season ticket holders. Were they?

Um, okay I'll speak slower this time. That is why you ticket office records to find out. I am not sure how to make this any easier for you to understand.

I didn't express outrage at either incident, I did state that it was wrong, regardless of who, where, etc.

I agree with you on that.

I am neither pissed or emotional. I really don't care, but I do think it is an unfortunate incident. I would think that regardless of who was injured. As far as that type of behaviour tolerated as normal at the U, you are full of shit, and it shows.

Is this how you respond when you not upset? I would love to see you when you are emotionally charged about something.

Luckily for you sister in law some Ute fans jumped in and helped. Too bad the Y fans didn't step in and help this guy.

I was very grateful that some did. How do you know they didn't at the Y?

That divine intervention is a good thing to have on your side. I guess when the U beat the Y four years in a row you guys must have been sinning more. Thanks for cleaning up your behavior!

I sin everyday and hopefully can repent. I suspect the whole team and school was under pure damnation for quite some time. I am pretty sure that Collie was sinning too when he sprained his ankle earlier this year. That is why I laugh at how upset Ute fans are at that statement. It is so laughably silly that people would be upset by it. Glad to see that you are not choosing to be bothered by it.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/27 11:49

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

I didn't know the people involved were season ticket holders. Were they?

Um, okay I'll speak slower this time. That is why you ticket office records to find out. I am not sure how to make this any easier for you to understand.

I didn't express outrage at either incident, I did state that it was wrong, regardless of who, where, etc.

I agree with you on that.

I am neither pissed or emotional. I really don't care, but I do think it is an unfortunatate incident. I would think that regardless of who was injured. As far as that type of behaviour tolerated as normal at the U, you are full of shit, and it shows.

Is this how you respond when you not upset? I would love to see you when you are emotionally charged about something.

Luckily for you sister in law some Ute fans jumped in and helped. Too bad the Y fans didn't step in and help this guy.

I was very grateful that some did. How do you know they didn't at the Y?

That divine intervention is a good thing to have on your side. I guess when the U beat the Y four years in a row you guys must have been sinning more. Thanks for cleaning up your behavior!

I sin everyday and hopefully can repent. I suspect the whole team and school was under pure damnation for quite some time. I am pretty sure that Collie was sinning too when he sprained his ankle earlier this year. That is why I laugh at how upset Ute fans are at that statement. It is so laughably silly that people would be upset by it. Glad to see that you are not choosing to be bothered by it.

You said pissed, I said shit, so by that standard we must both be outraged. I agree it is ridiculous to assume and get upset over the whole sinning process.

Um, okay I'll speak slower this time. That is why you ticket office records to find out. I am not sure how to make this any easier for you to understand.

How about writing it so that it makes sense. You want me to ticket the office records. OK, what shall I ticket them for and how will this help. I think you assumed they were season ticket holders. Forgive me for not making this quantom leap with you.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/27 11:53

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

Redrules wrote:

I didn't know the people involved were season ticket holders. Were they?

Um, okay I'll speak slower this time. That is why you ticket office records to find out. I am not sure how to make this any easier for you to understand.

I didn't express outrage at either incident, I did state that it was wrong, regardless of who, where, etc.

I agree with you on that.

I am neither pissed or emotional. I really don't care, but I do think it is an unfortunat incident. I would think that regardless of who was injured. As far as that type of behaviour tolerated as normal at the U, you are full of shit, and it shows.

Is this how you respond when you not upset? I would love to see you when you are emotionally charged about something.

Luckily for you sister in law some Ute fans jumped in and helped. Too bad the Y fans didn't step in and help this guy.

I was very grateful that some did. How do you know they didn't at the Y?

That divine intervention is a good thing to have on your side. I guess when the U beat the Y four years in a row you guys must have been sinning more. Thanks for cleaning up your behavior!

I sin everyday and hopefully can repent. I suspect the whole team and school was under pure damnation for quite some time. I am pretty sure that Collie was sinning too when he sprained his ankle earlier this year. That is why I laugh at how upset Ute fans are at that statement. It is so laughably silly that people would be upset by it. Glad to see that you are not choosing to be bothered by it.

You said pissed, I said shit, so by that standard we must both be outraged. I agree it is ridiculous to assume and get upset over the whole sinning process.

Um, okay I'll speak slower this time. That is why you ticket office records to find out. I am not sure how to make this any easier for you to understand.

How about writing it so that it makes sense. You want me to ticket the office records. OK, what shall I ticket them for and how will this help. I think you assumed they were season ticket holders. Forgive me for not making this quantum leap with you.

Good point. I meant check with the ticket office (left off the word) and I didn't mean you, though you are welcome to if you want. The police should be doing this.

I am outraged. I think it is horrible that is happens anywhere. I am also all emotionally charged because of the win on Saturday. I freely admit it. I am doing everything I can to get you to respond accordingly. Most of the crap I have posted has been just to get you upset. I have really enjoyed how hard you have tried to prove you aren't.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/27 11:55

The problem is that now I have to go home and repent again for purposefully pushing someone's buttons. I suck. I now apologize to all BYU fans for all of our losses next year!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by cougarfurr - 2007/11/27 11:56

So...all of you taking Cowley's and others' holier than thou stance...What's the motive?

Does it just make you feel more righteous by making others feel that they are wrong or unholy?

Does it make you feel more worthy of taking your sacrament?

Do you think maybe it will help you get called to the Bishopric, LOL (who would actually want that!)

Ok, don't get too worked up over this. My point is, why do you feel the need to tell other people that you're "ashamed" or "appalled" by certain reactions to this incident.

People come here to talk football, not to be judged, or talk about right and wrong. This thread is ridiculous...I can understand how anyone who reads these types of threads think that BYU fans are self-righteous losers. Let's get rid of this thread!!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Redrules - 2007/11/27 11:59

NorthernCougar wrote:

The problem is that now I have to go home and repent again for purposefully pushing someone's buttons. I suck. I now apologize to all BYU fans for all of our losses next year!

No need to apologize, you guys will go undefeated.
You're morally superior:)

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/27 12:01

Redrules wrote:

NorthernCougar wrote:

The problem is that now I have to go home and repent again for purposefully pushing someone's buttons. I suck. I now apologize to all BYU fans for all of our losses next year!

No need to apologize, you guys will go undefeated.
You're morally superior:)

I like to think I am but then I have to repent again. :laugh:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/27 12:10

cougarfurr wrote:

So...all of you taking Cowley's and others' holier than thou stance...What's the motive?

Does it just make you feel more righteous by making others feel that they are wrong or unholy?

Does it make you feel more worthy of taking your sacrament?

Do you think maybe it will help you get called to the Bishopric, LOL (who would actually want that!)

Ok, don't get too worked up over this. My point is, why do you feel the need to tell other people that you're "ashamed" or "appalled" by certain reactions to this incident.

People come here to talk football, not to be judged, or talk about right and wrong. This thread is ridiculous...I can understand how anyone who reads these types of threads think that BYU fans are self-righteous losers. Let's get rid of this thread!!

The funny thing about you is that it is YOUR comments and those who take your side that that you are criticizing - for those are the comments that are "holier than thou". So yes, you are right - people reading this thread will get the impression that BYU fans have that attitude because of comments that "he deserved it because he was a Ute" and "there is no way the BYU fan acted out of line". Then you say people come here to talk football and not be judged and in the same breath you judge everybody opposed to your position by calling them self-righteous. But you were at least right about one thing...I really do post my comments in hopes of getting called to the bishopric. :S I now pity you even more.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Metallicat - 2007/11/27 12:17

Well said DP. Well Said.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by cougarfurr - 2007/11/27 12:27

Ok, MOST of us are not saying "he deserved it because he was a Ute" and "there is no way the BYU fan acted out of line" (and if they are, they've been mostly sarcastic...if you can't handle that, I'm sorry)

What we ARE saying is that we're not going to be so gullible as to believe every part of this story. And, rather than condemning some unknown BYU fan for their actions, we'd rather wait to hear the real facts...which apparently, will never happen!

My personal opinion is that this story sounds phony. If someone got punched and headbutted during an argument...it's probable that multiple people would have seen it. In other words, I don't BELIEVE that the story is TRUE!! There! Now tell me devil puncher or Cowley, how is this so "DISGUSTING" to you?

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by BleedsBlue55 - 2007/11/27 12:32

I don't think you can be on either side in this case.

This dude obviously fabricated so much information and in return has had a lot of info fabricated about him, who knows what REALLY went down.

And I want all y'all to take a look at YOUR emotions during the game. You don't think or act your best when your thinking and acting through your adrenaline (or drunken, for the team up North) ridden emotions.

Yes, violence happened! No, you cannot decided just because violence happened that it wasn't justified given the emotional stakes of the situation. We simply do not know enough information to decide for or against the violence taken.

I'm not a big supporter of violence AT ALL (I don't like wars, I don't support guns, I'm all about the Amish point of view on that, etc) but I'm not going to sit there and not say I've never wanted to full out punch a dude in the face especially when I'm emotional and he's obnoxious and ridiculous. And I'm a girl! I can only imagine that testosterone overload messes up the dudes even more.

I do not see the initial problem of the guy getting head butted as a blue and red issue. An idiot fan is an idiot fan. Even if it were the other way around. This ute guy was an idiot, the BYU fan that couldn't keep his emotions in check was an idiot. This stuff happens. Move on.

BUT...Because this Ute did go public about this event and he did get to express his side, lying was not the right thing to do. His face wasn't gushing. His nose wasn't broken. His ridiculous brother getting his little boy to sadly announce

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by BleedsBlue55 - 2007/11/27 12:38

Whoa, didn't post my whole thing :dry: . You know what I was saying at the end there anyway. All in all:

I want to head butt myself in the face when I hear how much of a sob story this turned out to be.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/27 12:55

Okay, I will make this easy for you. Lets begin:

cougarfurr wrote:

Ok, MOST of us are not saying "he deserved it because he was a Ute"

Maybe true, but not for you...

cougarfurr wrote:

Dirty, blasted Ute, deserves the broken nose.

Continuing...

cougarfurr wrote:

Ok, MOST of us are not saying..."there is no way the BYU fan acted out of line" (and if they are, they've been mostly sarcastic...if you can't hand that, I'm sorry)

Read the thread again, there is no sarcasm (except for mine when I state that sentiment).

cougarfurr wrote:

What we ARE saying is that we're not going to be so gullible as to believe every part of this story. And, rather than condemning some unknown BYU fan for their actions, we'd rather wait to hear the real facts...which apparently, will never happen!

Actually that is not what YOU are saying, instead you say...

cougarfurr wrote:

For all we know, the Utah fan had it coming...which is my guess as to what happened.

Now here is where you bring in the double standard...

cougarfurr wrote:

Nobody should judge the byu fan because we don't know what the Ute fan did to provoke it.

So, you judge the Ute fan and say he deserves it on half a story and yet recommned that nobody should judge the BYU fan on half a story.

cougarfurr wrote:

There! Now tell me devil puncher or Cowley, how is this so "DISGUSTING" to you?

Done. I now pity you EVEN more (don't worry I have lots more pity for you).

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by JaredCowley - 2007/11/27 13:05

cougarfurr wrote:

Ok, MOST of us are not saying "he deserved it because he was a Ute" and "there is no way the BYU fan acted out of line" (and if they are, they've been mostly sarcastic...if you can't handle that, I'm sorry)

What we ARE saying is that we're not going to be so gullible as to believe every part of this story. And, rather than condemning some unknown BYU fan for their actions, we'd rather wait to hear the real facts...which apparently, will never happen!

My personal opinion is that this story sounds phony. If someone got punched and headbutted during an argument...it's probable that multiple people would have seen it. In other words, I don't BELIEVE that the story is TRUE!! There! Now tell me devil puncher or Cowley, how is this so "DISGUSTING" to you?

If all you're saying is you don't believe his story, OK. I can live with that.

I was more disgusted by those who took the stance that he's a Utah fan so he got what he deserved.

Jared Cowley

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by JaredCowley - 2007/11/27 13:07

DevilPuncher wrote:

Okay, I will make this easy for you. Lets begin:

cougarfurr wrote:

Ok, MOST of us are not saying "he deserved it because he was a Ute"

Maybe true, but not for you...

cougarfurr wrote:

Dirty, blasted Ute, deserves the broken nose.

Continuing...

cougarfurr wrote:

Ok, MOST of us are not saying..."there is no way the BYU fan acted out of line" (and if they are, they've been mostly sarcastic...if you can't hand that, I'm sorry)

Read the thread again, there is no sarcasm (except for mine when I state that sentiment).

cougarfurr wrote:

What we ARE saying is that we're not going to be so gullible as to believe every part of this story. And, rather than condemning some unknown BYU fan for their actions, we'd rather wait to hear the real facts...which apparently, will never happen!

Actaully that is not what YOU are saying, instead you say...

cougarfurr wrote:

For all we know, the Utah fan had it coming...which is my guess as to what happened.

Now here is where you bring in the double standard...

cougarfurr wrote:

Nobody should judge the byu fan because we don't know what the Ute fan did to provoke it.

So, you judge the Ute fan and say he deserves it on half a story and yet recommned that nobody should judge the BYU fan on half a story.

cougarfurr wrote:

There! Now tell me devil puncher or Cowley, how is this so "DISGUSTING" to you?

Done. I now pity you EVEN more (don't worry I have lots more pity for you).

Good job breaking it down. Anyone who thought at any point "this guy was a dirty Ute so he deserved it" needs to rethink their priorities. If the BYU-Utah rivalry gets you that worked up that you would condone violence, there's something wrong with your line of thinking.

Jared Cowley

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by njcoug - 2007/11/27 13:12

JaredCowley wrote:

DevilPuncher wrote:

Okay, I will make this easy for you. Lets begin:

cougarfurr wrote:

Ok, MOST of us are not saying "he deserved it because he was a Ute"

Maybe true, but not for you...

cougarfurr wrote:

Dirty, blasted Ute, deserves the broken nose.

Continuing...

cougarfurr wrote:

Ok, MOST of us are not saying..."there is no way the BYU fan acted out of line" (and if they are, they've been mostly sarcastic...if you can't hand that, I'm sorry)

Read the thread again, there is no sarcasm (except for mine when I state that sentiment).

cougarfurr wrote:

What we ARE saying is that we're not going to be so gullible as to believe every part of this story. And, rather than condemning some unknown BYU fan for their actions, we'd rather wait to hear the real facts...which apparently, will never happen!

Actually that is not what YOU are saying, instead you say...

cougarfurr wrote:

For all we know, the Utah fan had it coming...which is my guess as to what happened.

Now here is where you bring in the double standard...

cougarfurr wrote:

Nobody should judge the byu fan because we don't know what the Ute fan did to provoke it.

So, you judge the Ute fan and say he deserves it on half a story and yet recommned that nobody should judge the BYU fan on half a story.

cougarfurr wrote:

There! Now tell me devil puncher or Cowley, how is this so "DISGUSTING" to you?

Done. I now pity you EVEN more (don't worry I have lots more pity for you).

Good job breaking it down. Anyone who thought at any point "this guy was a dirty Ute so he deserved it" needs to rethink their priorities. If the BYU-Utah rivalry gets you that worked up that you would condone violence, there's something wrong with your line of thinking.

Jared Cowley

I won't listen to anything you say. Look at your picture, your wearing a RED SWEATER. You're just a dirty Ute in disguise and probably deserve to have your nose broken as well (TIC). This is probably the greatest proof of the Cowley=Airwolf theory. ;)

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by cougarfurr - 2007/11/27 13:16

Wow, a line-by-line break down of every word I say. That's pretty creative. Lawyer, shrink?

I'd love to do the same but I'd rather educate myself on BYU sports...the real purpose for which I'm a member here-not to have my words analyzed by some Peter Priesthood who "pity" my sinful opinions.

You pity me even more? Man, I feel so bad about myself now. I'm so blind, and you are so enlightened! Funny.:laugh:

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2007/11/27 13:16

njcoug wrote:

JaredCowley wrote:

Good job breaking it down. Anyone who thought at any point "this guy was a dirty Ute so he deserved it" needs to rethink their priorities. If the BYU-Utah rivalry gets you that worked up that you would condone violence, there's something wrong with your line of thinking.

Jared Cowley

I won't listen to anything you say. Look at your picture, your wearing a RED SWEATER. You're just a dirty Ute in disguise and probably deserve to have your nose broken as well (TIC). This is probably the greatest proof of the Cowley=Airwolf theory. ;)

Jared, I can see you are a redsox fan, but certainly you can wear a BYU blue redsox hoodie for your avatar. ;) Better still, you can don a Cougar cap too. B) Until then, the conspiracy lives!!!:P

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by DevilPuncher - 2007/11/27 13:25

cougarfurr wrote:

I'm so blind, and you are so enlightened!

Now we are getting somewhere. ;)

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by njcoug - 2007/11/27 13:29

CougarPeasant wrote:

Jared, I can see you are a redsox fan, but certainly you can wear a BYU blue redsox hoodie for your avatar. ;) Better still, you can don a Cougar cap too. B) Until then, the conspiracy lives!!!:P
That's no excuse. My wife and I both have blue Red Sox Apparel. :evil:

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by kugerblu - 2007/11/27 13:36

I think we really need to watch our behavior. It's publicity like this that get some of the brethren to think that the athletic programs at b.y.u. should be dropped. I for one don't want to end up kike b.y.u. idaho.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2007/11/27 13:59

kugerblu wrote:

I think we really need to watch our behavior. It's publicity like this that get some of the brethren to think that the athletic programs at b.y.u. should be dropped. I for one don't want to end up kike b.y.u. idaho.

Kokay. You're right.;

Go Cougs!!!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/11/27 14:23

My thoughts:

1. This is all just ridiculous.

2. I can't fully believe this guys story. Why?... Not because he is a dirty Yewt, but because the things he said don't add up with the one piece of evidence we have on this subject: THIS PHOTO.

Evidence from photo:

a) "blood was gushing" Umm, No a very small amount of blood yes, gushing no way. It actually looks like he went out of his way to not wipe the blood off of his face just so he could go show someone.

b) "Couldn't find security" Looks like you found them to me.

c) Broken nose? Just my opinion on this one but that doesn't look like a broken nose, let alone an injury sustained by a head-butt.

Summation: Was there a physical altercation. It looks like it. Was it as bad as this guys makes out? I doubt it. To me it looks like he is stretching the story a bit and that is why I can't believe that all he said (or did) was "get out of my seat." Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by idahocougarfan - 2007/11/27 16:53

detmer4prez wrote:

My thoughts:

1. This is all just ridiculous.

2. I can't fully believe this guys story. Why?... Not because he is a dirty Yewt, but because the things he said don't add up with the one piece of evidence we have on this subject: THIS PHOTO.

Evidence from photo:

a) "blood was gushing" Umm, No a very small amount of blood yes, gushing no way. It actually looks like he went out of his way to not wipe the blood off of his face just so he could go show someone.

b) "Couldn't find security" Looks like you found them to me.

c) Broken nose? Just my opinion on this one but that doesn't look like a broken nose, let alone an injury sustained by a head-butt.

Summation: Was there a physical altercation. It looks like it. Was it as bad as this guys makes out? I doubt it. To me it looks like he is stretching the story a bit and that is why I can't believe that all he said (or did) was "get out of my seat." Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted.

Detmer4prez,

I couldn't agree with you more. I wanted to ask Mr. Cowley if he had seen the picture? and if he did I wanted to get his explanation of it and how it all makes sense?

Mr. Cowley if you do have an explanation, I would like to hear it.

GO COUGARS!!!

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by JaredCowley - 2007/11/27 21:59

idahocougarfan wrote:

detmer4prez wrote:

My thoughts:

1. This is all just ridiculous.

2. I can't fully believe this guys story. Why?... Not because he is a dirty Yewt, but because the things he said don't add up with the one piece of evidence we have on this subject: THIS PHOTO.

Evidence from photo:

a) "blood was gushing" Umm, No a very small amount of blood yes, gushing no way. It actually looks like he went out of his way to not wipe the blood off of his face just so he could go show someone.

b) "Couldn't find security" Looks like you found them to me.

c) Broken nose? Just my opinion on this one but that doesn't look like a broken nose, let alone an injury sustained by a head-butt.

Summation: Was there a physical altercation. It looks like it. Was it as bad as this guys makes out? I doubt it. To me it looks like he is stretching the story a bit and that is why I can't believe that all he said (or did) was "get out of my seat." Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted.

Detmer4prez,

I couldn't agree with you more. I wanted to ask Mr. Cowley if he had seen the picture? and if he did I wanted to get his explanation of it and how it all makes sense?

Mr. Cowley if you do have an explanation, I would like to hear it.

GO COUGARS!!!

While it appears this guy's story has more holes in it than a slice of swiss cheese, the validity of his story is not the issue I've been addressing. Go back and read what I wrote when I first responded to this post. I read the first three or four pages of this thread in which the man's story had not been legitimately called into question yet. And the majority of the BYU fans' opinions that had been posted to that point were along the lines of, "Stupid dirty Ute. Deserved what he got!" So, this was the information I had at that point:

1) Via a news report, we were informed a Utah fan had been assaulted at the BYU game.

2) He had not done anything to instigate the attack except ask a little girl to move out of his seat.

And the fact that up to that point, many BYU fans were not only OK with this, but celebrating the action ... I'm sorry, that goes against what I believe to be decent and appropriate.

Since that point, I've obviously read the information that puts into question the validity of this guy's story. If he's lying (which I admit it look like he is) then he's a wank. But that doesn't change the fact that before that information was available, BYU fans were cheering on an act of violence at a sporting event for no justifiable reason.

So if you want to label me sanctimonious for that, that's your right.

Jared Cowley

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by SaltLakeCoug - 2007/11/27 22:00

Island Pipeline wrote:

Man you BYU fans are worst then Hawaii fans and you're not even drunk!

:laugh:

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by JaredCowley - 2007/11/27 22:00

And to the rest of you, you're right. I need to get a picture in some BYU gear on my avatar. No doubt about it.

As for the red Red Sox sweatshirt, it was a gift so I will continue to wear it with pride.

After all, there's a HUGE difference between Red Sox red and Utah red.

Jared Cowley

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by UliUli79 - 2007/11/27 22:11

I'm not going to pick at anything that anybody has been saying, but this whole thread is out of wack. There is a ridiculous amount of heresay that's been stated and a lot of ass-u-ming going on. Everyone has an opinion, but it's no reason to belittle others. Supporting or encouraging acts of violence is wrong according to my belief window. Jared and the Devil :lol: ;) feel the same as I do. Koreans eat dogs, so are you going to say something bad about them for it? Cause if you do... I'll head-butt you in the face.:silly:

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bengel - 2007/11/27 22:14

Detmer4prez said, "Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted."

I used to be a prosecutor. I would just love to introduce that statement at a trial for assault. I'd love to see you repeat it to the judge after you were found guilty.

If the assault resulted in serious bodily injury, and the conviction were for a felony, I'd love to see you repeat it to the parole board when it considered whether to parole you.

As someone who is now in private practice, I'd love to represent the plaintiff suing you, put you on the stand and have you repeat that statement to a jury.

I've seen comments like Detmer4prez's on this board repeatedly. There is no legal or moral justification for them. For those of you who think people deserve to be assaulted, I repeat what I said in an earlier post in this thread. May you get what you deserve, by the standard of deservedness you apply to others, may you get it immediately, and may you get it without any recourse. Let's see how long you maintain your macho position.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by dccrid - 2007/11/27 22:34

My brother-in-law sat close to the man. He alleged that the man was sitting among a group of BYU fans and that he was being obnoxious throughout the game. As I understand, as he descended from his seat, he was being pushed by BYU fans and was, according to him, shoved into the young girl. I don't know if he called her expletive name, or otherwise insulted her vocally, but I was told by my Brother-in-Law that he physically and purposefully pushed the girl, knocked her down after he was pushed into her.

If it were such a physical retaliation to a physical assault, it would seem more understandable, but would still NOT justified, neither legally nor in a general social sense. Screaming in his face, pushing him back, reporting him to security, etc.; I think any of these would be appropriate; but a head butt? I don't think so.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by cougarfurr - 2007/11/28 00:22

bengel wrote:

Detmer4prez said, "Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted."

I used to be a prosecutor. I would just love to introduce that statement at a trial for assault. I'd love to see you repeat it to the judge after you were found guilty.

If the assault resulted in serious bodily injury, and the conviction were for a felony, I'd love to see you repeat it to the parole board when it considered whether to parole you.

As someone who is now in private practice, I'd love to represent the plaintiff suing you, put you on the stand and have you repeat that statement to a jury.

I've seen comments like Detmer4prez's on this board repeatedly. There is no legal or moral justification for them. For those of you who think people deserve to be assaulted, I repeat what I said in an earlier post in this thread. May you get what you deserve, by the standard of deservedness you apply to others, may you get it immediately, and may you get it without any recourse. Let's see how long you maintain your macho position.

Oooo, all hail the mighty lawyer and his wisdom. "Id love to do this, I'd love to see that, blah blah blah. I'd love to head-butt a big-headed lawyer like yourself.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by detmer4prez - 2007/11/28 00:30

bengel wrote:

Detmer4prez said, "Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted."

I used to be a prosecutor. I would just love to introduce that statement at a trial for assault. I'd love to see you repeat it to the judge after you were found guilty.

If the assault resulted in serious bodily injury, and the conviction were for a felony, I'd love to see you repeat it to the parole board when it considered whether to parole you.

As someone who is now in private practice, I'd love to represent the plaintiff suing you, put you on the stand and have you repeat that statement to a jury.

I've seen comments like Detmer4prez's on this board repeatedly. There is no legal or moral justification for them. For those of you who think people deserve to be assaulted, I repeat what I said in an earlier post in this thread. May you get what you deserve, by the standard of deservedness you apply to others, may you get it immediately, and may you get it without any recourse. Let's see how long you maintain your macho position.

1. And I would take what ever penalty I was given. (p.s. I am no lawyer but wouldn't that be called battery and not assault?)

2. I don't think I am a macho guy. I am a small dude (5'9") and I would probably get my butt kicked, I am just pretty protective of people that are close to me especially the gals.

3. I know, I am probably just young and dumb.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by jeremygeorge - 2007/11/28 11:45

bengel wrote:

Detmer4prez said, "Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted."

I used to be a prosecutor. I would just love to introduce that statement at a trial for assault. I'd love to see you repeat it to the judge after you were found guilty.

If the assault resulted in serious bodily injury, and the conviction were for a felony, I'd love to see you repeat it to the parole board when it considered whether to parole you.

As someone who is now in private practice, I'd love to represent the plaintiff suing you, put you on the stand and have you repeat that statement to a jury.

I've seen comments like Detmer4prez's on this board repeatedly. There is no legal or moral justification for them. For those of you who think people deserve to be assaulted, I repeat what I said in an earlier post in this thread. May you get what you deserve, by the standard of deservedness you apply to others, may you get it immediately, and may you get it without any recourse. Let's see how long you maintain your macho position.

I would like to see you represent this guy's story in court only to have the defendent show the picture where his nose is clearly not broken and blood is not gushing. The guy is obviously lying about some, could he be lying about the whole story?

The guy should not have been hit. You're right that there is not a good excuse, but we don't know if he really was!! It was said that it occurred after a touchdown and everybody was going crazy. It could have been an accident.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by cougarblue.com - 2007/11/28 11:48

jeremygeorge wrote:

bengel wrote:

Detmer4prez said, "Don't know what he said and I am not implying he said this word but if anyone calls my girl, daughter, sister, mother, acquaintance, a "bitch" to their face, he is going to get head-butted."

I used to be a prosecutor. I would just love to introduce that statement at a trial for assault. I'd love to see you repeat it to the judge after you were found guilty.

If the assault resulted in serious bodily injury, and the conviction were for a felony, I'd love to see you repeat it to the parole board when it considered whether to parole you.

As someone who is now in private practice, I'd love to represent the plaintiff suing you, put you on the stand and have you repeat that statement to a jury.

I've seen comments like Detmer4prez's on this board repeatedly. There is no legal or moral justification for them. For those of you who think people deserve to be assaulted, I repeat what I said in an earlier post in this thread. May you get what you deserve, by the standard of deservedness you apply to others, may you get it immediately, and may you get it without any recourse. Let's see how long you maintain your macho position.

I would like to see you represent this guy's story in court only to have the defendant show the picture where his nose is clearly not broken and blood is not gushing. The guy is obviously lying about some, could he be lying about the whole story?

The guy should not have been hit. You're right that there is not a good excuse, but we don't know if he really was!! It was said that it occurred after a touchdown and everybody was going crazy. It could have been an accident.

I think they guy knicked his eyebrow with his pocket knife as soon as he saw that Utah was going to lose, and then he made the whole thing up to try to make BYU fans look bad.

Just the humble opinion of a non-organic sentient being :woohoo:

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by NorthernCougar - 2007/11/28 13:02

dcrcid wrote:

My brother-in-law sat close to the man. He alleged that the man was sitting among a group of BYU fans and that he was being obnoxious throughout the game. As I understand, as he descended from his seat, he was being pushed by BYU fans and was, according to him, shoved into the young girl. I don't know if he called her expletive name, or otherwise insulted her vocally, but I was told by my Brother-in-Law that he physically and purposefully pushed the girl, knocked her down after he was pushed into her.

If it were such a physical retaliation to a physical assault, it would seem more understandable, but would still NOT justified, neither legally nor in a general social sense. Screaming in his face, pushing him back, reporting him to security, etc.; I think any of these would be appropriate; but a head butt? I don't think so.

Let's assume that your brother-in-law would testify under oath to this in court. For those much smarter than I wouldn't his purposefully pushing the girl down constitute assault? And would the father, brother, grandfather (whomever was with the girl) have a right to retaliate to protect her?

Can bengel and others who understand the law expound on this?

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Short_Changed - 2007/11/28 13:06

NorthernCougar wrote:

dcrcid wrote:

My brother-in-law sat close to the man. He alleged that the man was sitting among a group of BYU fans and that he was being obnoxious throughout the game. As I understand, as he descended from his seat, he was being pushed by BYU fans and was, according to him, shoved into the young girl. I don't know if he called her expletive name, or otherwise insulted her vocally, but I was told by my Brother-in-Law that he physically and purposefully pushed the girl, knocked her down after he was pushed into her.

If it were such a physical retaliation to a physical assault, it would seem more understandable, but would still NOT justified, neither legally nor in a general social sense. Screaming in his face, pushing him back, reporting him to security, etc.; I think any of these would be appropriate; but a head butt? I don't think so.

Let's assume that your brother-in-law would testify under oath to this in court. For those much smarter than I wouldn't his purposefully pushing the girl down constitute assault? And would the father, brother, grandfather (whomever was with the girl) have a right to retaliate to protect her?

Can bengel and others who understand the law expound on this?

From what I understand it would be a judgement call. Self-defense allows you to use a reasonable amount of force to protect yourself/others and it has to be immediately, it can't be after the fact. So the jury/judge would have to decide if a head butt was reasonable.

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by rackem - 2007/11/28 13:22

Where was this guy sitting when this occurred? Where ever it was, that area will always be known as the "nose bleed section." :lol:

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bengel - 2007/11/28 13:24

Since we don't know what happened here, it's probably best to provide the statute that would be at issue if the matter were to go to court.

I don't know how the smiley face ended up in what I pasted from the Utah Code. I didn't put it there.

76-2-402. Force in defense of person -- Forcible felony defined.

(1) A person is justified in threatening or using force against another when and to the extent that he or she reasonably believes that force is necessary to defend himself or a third person against such other's imminent use of unlawful force. However, that person is justified in using force intended or likely to cause death or serious bodily injury only if he or she reasonably believes that force is necessary to prevent death or serious bodily injury to himself or a third person as a result of the other's imminent use of unlawful force, or to prevent the commission of a forcible felony.

(2) A person is not justified in using force under the circumstances specified in Subsection (1) if he or she:

(a) initially provokes the use of force against himself with the intent to use force as an excuse to inflict bodily harm upon the assailant;

(b) is attempting to commit, committing, or fleeing after the commission or attempted commission of a felony; or

(c) (i) was the aggressor or was engaged in a combat by agreement, unless he withdraws from the encounter and effectively communicates to the other person his intent to do so and, notwithstanding, the other person continues or threatens to continue the use of unlawful force; and

(ii) for purposes of Subsection (i) the following do not, by themselves, constitute "combat by agreement":

(A) voluntarily entering into or remaining in an ongoing relationship; or

(B) entering or remaining in a place where one has a legal right to be.

(3) A person does not have a duty to retreat from the force or threatened force described in Subsection (1) in a place where that person has lawfully entered or remained, except as provided in Subsection (2)(c).

(4) For purposes of this section, a forcible felony includes aggravated assault, mayhem, aggravated murder, murder, manslaughter, kidnapping, and aggravated kidnapping, rape, forcible sodomy, rape of a child, object rape, object rape of a child, sexual abuse of a child, aggravated sexual abuse of a child, and aggravated sexual assault as defined in Title 76, Chapter 5, and arson, robbery, and burglary as defined in Title 76, Chapter 6. Any other felony offense which involves the use of force or violence against a person so as to create a substantial danger of death or serious bodily injury also constitutes a forcible felony. Burglary of a vehicle, defined in Section 76-6-204, does not constitute a forcible felony except when the vehicle is occupied at the time unlawful entry is made or attempted.

(5) In determining imminence or reasonableness under Subsection (1), the trier of fact may consider, but is not limited to, any of the following factors:

(a) the nature of the danger;

(b) the immediacy of the danger;

(c) the probability that the unlawful force would result in death or serious bodily injury;

(d) the other's prior violent acts or violent propensities; and

(e) any patterns of abuse or violence in the parties' relationship.

By the way cougarfurr, if after reading this statute, you really meant what you said about headbutting lawyers, print my earlier post and take it to lawyers. If they agree with me, headbutt them. Keep doing this until you are in jail.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by rackem - 2007/11/28 13:43

Wow...this has turned into BYU vs Utah lawyer central...

I got a joke for all you lawyer fanatics...sense your not talking football.

Q: How do you get a lawyer out of a tree?

A: Cut the rope.

Rackem'

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bengel - 2007/11/28 13:44

How many lawyer jokes are there?

Only three. The rest are true.

To bring this back to football, go read Hackbart v. Cincinnati Bengals, Inc., 435 F. Supp. 352 (D. Colo. 1977), rev'd, 601 F.2d 516 (10th Cir. 1979)

If Hackbart had a cause of action for use of force outside the rules of the game, a fan has one under the law.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by sjcougfan - 2007/11/28 13:46

It's all fun and games until the lawyer's join the thread.:dry:

17 pages on this lame ass topic? Wow!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bengel - 2007/11/28 13:49

sjcougfan wrote:

It's all fun and games until the lawyer's join the thread.:dry:

17 pages on this lame ass topic? Wow!

Thanks for your contribution.

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by UnderRated_Cougars - 2007/11/28 13:56

rackem wrote:

Where was this guy sitting when this occurred? Where ever it was, that area will always be known as the "nose bleed section." :lol:

Now that's comedy!

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by Mars - 2007/11/28 15:33

http://www.1280thezone.com/persons/manlymorningshow/uploaded_images/HEADBUTTGUY-780202.jpg

"...And as soon as Austin Collie caught that ball, I couldn't help it, I just smashed my face into the cement wall right here!"

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by bengel - 2007/11/28 17:19

If that's the case, why didn't BYU Security cite him for criminal mischief for damaging the wall?

=====

Re:Utah fan attacked

Posted by sjcougfan - 2007/11/28 20:12

bengel wrote:

sjcougfan wrote:

It's all fun and games until the lawyer's join the thread.:dry:

17 pages on this lame ass topic? Wow!

Thanks for your contribution.

You're welcome.

Have you been able to track this guy down yet, so you can represent him?

=====