
Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Short_Changed - 2007/12/20 12:12

Chow has taken himself out of the hunt for a new HC at UCLA.

<http://sports.espn.go.com/nfc/news/story?id=3161587>

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by HoosierCougar - 2007/12/20 12:16

The cynic in me says that way he won't have to get turned down by UCLA...

I really don't think Chow is HC material. Not in this media/PR age.

on a related note:

S-A-T-U-R-D-A-Y Night! (in a thick scottish brogue with Mike Meyers dancing around the living room)

Can't wait for LV!

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by ND/BYU - 2007/12/20 12:20

Short_Changed wrote:

Chow has taken himself out of the hunt for a new HC at UCLA.

<http://sports.espn.go.com/nfc/news/story?id=3161587>

My guess is it was to save face since he was not going to get it any way, he did not want to be a back up plan. I really hope he gets a HC job one of these days, the issue is he is getting old.

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Uncle Iroh - 2007/12/20 12:35

Not to go off subject here. But since Normie is out and Rickie is the leader in the clubhouse for the job as head coach of the Bruins, I say we bring back Chris Hale for one game.....just for old times sake. ;)

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by stjohmsmythe - 2007/12/20 12:48

From what I've read over at bruingold.com, a lot of their fans wanted Chow, mostly to stick it to USC. It looks like they're going to hire Rick Neuheisel, and not many bruin fans are too happy about it. Now if only he can implement the same high powered offense he's running in Baltimore. I like our chances a lot more next year against Neuheisel than I would agaist Chow.

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Pikoi - 2007/12/20 12:54

Uncle Iroh wrote:

Not to go off subject here. But since Normie is out and Rickie is the leader in the clubhouse for the job as head coach of the Bruins, I say we bring back Chris Hale for one game.....just for old times sake. ;)

As long as he is playing WR and not DB! Sorry Chris...love you man...

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Mingjai - 2007/12/20 12:56

I'm surprised Steve Sarkisian's name wasn't mentioned. I think he'd be a better HC than Chow. Sark is currently at USC as the assistant head coach and he basically gave the Raiders the finger last year when they were looking for a head coach. Hiring him would have been a real coup for the Bruins.

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2007/12/20 12:56

stjohnsmythe wrote:

From what I've read over at bruingold.com, a lot of their fans wanted Chow, mostly to stick it to USC. It looks like they're going to hire Rick Neuheisel, and not many bruin fans are too happy about it. Now if only he can implement the same high powered offense he's running in Baltimore. I like our chances a lot more next year against Neuheisel than I would against Chow.

Ya Chow has a really high powered offense in Tennessee! Right! I'm not worried about Ucla this time around. Nor am I worried when they come to provo next year! No matter who their coach is! :evil:

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Uncle Iroh - 2007/12/20 12:56

Pikoi wrote:

Uncle Iroh wrote:

Not to go off subject here. But since Normie is out and Rickie is the leader in the clubhouse for the job as head coach of the Bruins, I say we bring back Chris Hale for one game.....just for old times sake. ;)

As long as he is playing WR and not DB! Sorry Chris...love you man...

Oh yeah, I just want him to catch another game winning touchdown against Lil' Rickie. Strictly wide receiver.

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2007/12/20 13:35

Mingjai wrote:

I'm surprised Steve Sarkisian's name wasn't mentioned. I think he'd be a better HC than Chow. Sark is currently at USC as the assistant head coach and he basically gave the Raiders the finger last year when they were looking for a head coach. Hiring him would have been a real coup for the Bruins.

You gotta be kidding me! Sark isn't half the coach that Chow is and he'll never accomplish what Coach Chow did and is yet to do in the future. Sark didn't take the Raider job because he knows he's inexperienced and lacks the confidence to talk to Professional players who are older and been in the league more years then him coaching.

Chow taught Sark all he knows so to say that Sark is better then Chow?

YOU MUST BE CRAZY!:laugh:

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by MajorCougar - 2007/12/20 13:52

Island Pipeline wrote:

Mingjai wrote:

I'm surprised Steve Sarkisian's name wasn't mentioned. I think he'd be a better HC than Chow. Sark is currently at USC as the assistant head coach and he basically gave the Raiders the finger last year when they were looking for a head coach. Hiring him would have been a real coup for the Bruins.

You gotta be kidding me! Sark isn't half the coach that Chow is and he'll never accomplish what Coach Chow did and is yet to do in the future. Sark didn't take the Raider job because he knows he's inexperienced and lacks the confidence to talk to Professional players who are older and been in the league more years than him coaching.

Chow taught Sark all he knows so to say that Sark is better than Chow?

YOU MUST BE CRAZY!:laugh:

I know that Chow is a great OC, but I also believe Sark has caught on quite a bit as OC, as well. Pete Carroll obviously thinks so - because that's what he's doing at USC... :S

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by stjohnsmythe - 2007/12/20 13:52

Gymcoug318 wrote:

stjohnsmythe wrote:

From what I've read over at bruingold.com, a lot of their fans wanted Chow, mostly to stick it to USC. It looks like they're going to hire Rick Neuheisel, and not many bruin fans are too happy about it. Now if only he can implement the same high powered offense he's running in Baltimore. I like our chances a lot more next year against Neuheisel than I would against Chow.

Ya Chow has a really high powered offense in Tennessee! Right! I'm not worried about Ucla this time around. Nor am I worried when they come to provo next year! No matter who their coach is! :evil:

I really wouldn't be too worried either way, but Chow would at least have that chip on his shoulder about being jilted by BYU. Chow has won everywhere he's been, and would make me more nervous than Rick Neuheisel.

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by craigocarson - 2007/12/20 14:12

Chow has never been offered an NFL head coaching job, Sarkisian has....and was under the age of 35 when he did.

Re:Chow withdraws from UCLA HC consideration

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2007/12/21 22:07

MajorCougar wrote:

I know that Chow is a great OC, but I also believe Sark has caught on quite a bit as OC, as well. Pete Carroll obviously thinks so - because that's what he's doing at USC... :S

Pete Carroll and Sark were the reason for Chow leaving USC. Norm was in the spotlight/media and Pete Carroll couldn't handle it. Sark then started to gain favor with Carroll who in turn gave Norm a lesser role and resulted in Norm taking the Titans job.

NORM IS AND WILL ALWAYS BE DA MAN!;)

