Me too! I've already watched Tradition, Spirit, Honor, and listened to the podcasts for the better of the 2006 and 2007 games. I still need to go through the football highlight DVDs, Cosmo Reloaded and download the 2007 Vegas Bowl highlights, but then what?! A padded cell?!

It's only going to get worse...I've watched all the highlights too, and listened to everything I can find.

Yeah, and I'm already tired of pounding on the hapless ewets in NCAA '08 (XBox). Guess I'll have to connect it to the Internet so I can play around the country and do some recruiting.

C'mon, get on the basketball bandwagon!!!!!!! I'll admit that it isn't as exciting as football, but its better than nothing and we're having a great year so far. And remember, only 7 months and 24 days until the next game! (Whoever it may be against).

Basketball is okay, but it's so...not football. I don't know what it is, it's too much not football...I do support the b-ball cougs though, but it's different. It's just not football

To help the time go by faster I like to sit in front of my kitchen sink and count how many times the faucet drips in an hour. Then I make myself bets on whether or not it will be more drips or less in the next hour. It seems to help and I am already closer to fall camp then I was just 11 hours ago. :laugh: Anyway hope that helps. ;)

Go Cougs!

I agree! Yes- football IS exciting, but the basketball team IS doing well this yr, and if you can at least make it to a home game against one of the quality teams in the conf. (San Diego St, or New Mexico, or UNLV, and Utah all the time), the intensity and excitement are just AWESOME. They get loud, and when they're passing, playing good D and hitting shots.....look OUT. They can be deadly. Just give basketball a chance and it CAN be really fun, especially if alot of people come.

I like basketball. But I really like talking about football better! I don't know why?! But I really like the team the cougs have! They are exciting! And I love watching up tempo basketball. I haven't been too a game yet!! But I at least want to go to the Utah game! Hopefully more! Depending on our money situation. I'm just glad that both football and basketball are relevant again! Unlike when I was on my mission in 04! And both football and basketball had horrible seasons! :(Hooray for cougar sports! I like how more people are wearing blue too everything! :woohoo: Go cougs!
