
If Kaveinga sticks and Stevens signs...

Posted by mithrandir - 2008/01/17 12:50

is this the best recruiting class BYU has ever had?

FWIW, I think it is. We've had some great (if not a little topheavy) groups in the past, but, I think this is the deepest class I can remember.

=====

Re:If Kaveinga sticks and Stevens signs...

Posted by stuckinbig10country - 2008/01/17 12:57

I think it will be the best class that sees the field. Crowton had some really deep classes, but a lot of them never played, and others played just a little bit. The class with Olson and Mohetou would probably be more highly regarded (those two were 5 star recruits). That was also the class that decided to party a little too hard.

=====

Agreed...

Posted by mithrandir - 2008/01/17 13:04

Ultimately, the quality of any class can only be judged by the contributions made on the field. Here's to hoping these guys live up to their potential.

=====

Re:Agreed...

Posted by THEmb - 2008/01/17 13:32

2002 at the top definitely gives 2008 a run for its money at the top. But I think with the depth and assuming the majority of the kids make it into school, that would probably be the best recruiting class I can remember.

=====

Re:If Kaveinga sticks and Stevens signs...

Posted by Uncle Iroh - 2008/01/17 16:01

I like how you basically answered your own question Gandalf Stormcrow.

Recruiting is such a crap shoot, the only reason I pay any attention to it is because I'm a football junkie, and it gives me the fix I need. Getting excited about recruiting is like getting excited because you threw for 10 touchdowns and no interceptions against whomever in Madden. :dry:

=====