

---

AF Game Predictions

Posted by Gunk - 2008/01/30 13:59

---

I think we win this one tonight, but it will be a close, low scoring game, 57 to 53.

Trent will do well on the boards and at D but gets fouled a lot so isn't able to contribute as much on offense. Cumard has his 19 pts, JT goes for 50 percent from the arc, Burgess plays solid and Jimmer provides the extra spark off the bench.

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/01/30 14:20

---

Ugh...this one is rough with Trent being sick and perhaps not even playing.

Hopefully our defensive energy of late translates to Clune Arena, and Miles and Lloyd Jr. give us quality time and don't hurt us.

I like BYU (of course) in a nail biter

61-58

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by Mars - 2008/01/30 14:37

---

I doubt Trent plays much, if at all, let alone well. Come on Collinsworth/Miles!

Air Force defends vigorously, but leaves the 3 open. Can we shoot better than 35%?

My prediction- we win the rebounding game, and beat the Falcons 59-58.

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by AFCOUG83 - 2008/01/30 14:39

---

i see sam having a career game. Bougs win 67-62

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by LegendsNeverDie - 2008/01/30 14:53

---

Where did everyone hear that Trent is sick and won't play?????? I want details. All he needs to do is rebound and defend.

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by lovelldog - 2008/01/30 15:26

---

Trent went to the doctors and got some IVs because he was throwing up on Monday. He didn't practice on Tuesday but is travelling with the team. I believe the symptoms on Monday were flu-like symptoms and a doctors visit probably wasn't necessary. I don't know how he is doing today but I expect him to play. Trent played very well I believe the last two times against AF so I think he will still have a decent game just in reduced minutes. Besides maybe if he throws up on some of those guys when they triple team him, they will give him a little more space.

---

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/01/30 17:08

---

From Rhiannon Potkey's Blog posted at 12:40ish today:

Rhiannon wrote

Plaisted looking worse

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - The BYU men's basketball team just got done with its shootaround at Clune Arena and it's not looking as good for Trent Plaisted. The junior is feeling a little bit worse and still suffering from his flu-like symptoms. His status is now likely a game-time decision.

And from Greg Wrubell's Cougar Tracks:

Greg Wrubell wrote

As of noon on gameday, it doesn't look like Trent Plaisted will be starting tonight, and he may not play at all. He went through light running and shooting drills during this morning's shootaround at Clune Arena (as he recovers from a case of the stomach flu he came down with on Sunday night), but he was kept out of the team's scout work sessions to save his energy.

Plaisted received 8 litres of intravenous fluids Monday and Tuesday, and is taking anti-nausea pills to stave off symptoms. He was able to keep some food down yesterday, but he threw up again this morning, and looked pale and weak at shootaround as he sat on the sidelines.

Dave Rose will see how Trent looks tonight during pregame warmups, and he could pull off a surprise and play a few minutes, but right now, it appears as if Chris Miles will start in Plaisted's place, as the team is preparing to play without Plaisted.

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by sjcougfan - 2008/01/30 17:15

---

If there is one game where the Cougs may be able to survive without Trent, it may be this one, due to the relatively small size of AF.

52-47 BYU

=====

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by sjcougfan - 2008/01/30 17:23

---

snoscythe wrote:

From Rhiannon Potkey's Blog posted at 12:40ish today:

Rhiannon wrote

Plaisted looking worse

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - The BYU men's basketball team just got done with its shootaround at Clune Arena and it's not looking as good for Trent Plaisted. The junior is feeling a little bit worse and still suffering from his flu-like symptoms. His status is now likely a game-time decision.

And from Greg Wrubell's Cougar Tracks:

Greg Wrubell wrote

As of noon on gameday, it doesn't look like Trent Plaisted will be starting tonight, and he may not play at all. He went through light running and shooting drills during this morning's shootaround at Clune Arena (as he recovers from a case of the stomach flu he came down with on Sunday night), but he was kept out of the team's scout work sessions to save his energy.

Plaisted received 8 litres of intravenous fluids Monday and Tuesday, and is taking anti-nausea pills to stave off symptoms. He was able to keep some food down yesterday, but he threw up again this morning, and looked pale and weak at shootaround as he sat on the sidelines.

Dave Rose will see how Trent looks tonight during pregame warmups, and he could pull off a surprise and play a few minutes, but right now, it appears as if Chris Miles will start in Plaisted's place, as the team is preparing to play without Plaisted.

I remember a game in the 96 NBA finals when Jordan had the flu and still came out and scored 40 something points against the Jazz. I'm just sayin'.;)

---

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by Raul - 2008/01/30 17:24

I think if BYU can play defense like they have the last three games, this will turn into a surprisingly easy win (double digit win). Over the last three games, BYU has defended the three-point line really well as their opponents have gone:

Yewts: 3-14 (.214) For the year, they are .414

SDSU: 4-17 (.235) For the year, they are .337

NMU: 6-18 (.333) For the year, they are .464

For a combined 13-49 (.267) against BYU and combined for the year these teams are 443-1130 (.392)

Air Force is coming in at .389 for the year, and averaging 7.9 3-Pointers a game. BYU needs to keep Air Force below .333 for the game and I have a feeling they will win by 10.

---

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by AFCOUG83 - 2008/01/30 17:27

sjcougfan wrote:

I remember a game in the 96 NBA finals when Jordan had the flu and still came out and scored 40 something points against the Jazz. I'm just sayin'.;)

That wasn't the flu Jordan had, it was a hangover and I hope Trent doesn't have one of those.

---

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/01/30 18:32

Just announced on the radio that Trent will not be playing tonight.

Go Chris, go small-ball, and go Cougs.

---

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by GolfDiveNCougs - 2008/01/30 18:41

AFCOUG83 wrote:

sjcougfan wrote:

I remember a game in the 96 NBA finals when Jordan had the flu and still came out and scored 40 something points against the Jazz. I'm just sayin'.;)

---

That wasn't the flu Jordan had, it was a hangover and I hope Trent doesn't have one of those. Hi-freakin-LARIOUS! Best laugh all night. Props and Karma!
P.S. I dunno tho, his wife DID get a DUI :laugh:

---

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by kitic77 - 2008/01/30 19:03

---

Trent is going to play.

I'll call

BYU 59
AF 52

---

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by Mars - 2008/01/30 19:08

---

GolfDiveNCougs wrote:

P.S. I dunno tho, his wife DID get a DUI :laugh:
Haha. I dinged your karma.

---

Re:AF Game Predictions

Posted by sjcougfan - 2008/01/30 22:04

---

sjcougfan wrote:

snoscythe wrote:

From Rhiannon Potkey's Blog posted at 12:40ish today:

Rhiannon wrote

Plaisted looking worse

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - The BYU men's basketball team just got done with its shootaround at Clune Arena and it's not looking as good for Trent Plaisted. The junior is feeling a little bit worse and still suffering from his flu-like symptoms. His status is now likely a game-time decision.

And from Greg Wrubell's Cougar Tracks:

Greg Wrubell wrote

As of noon on gameday, it doesn't look like Trent Plaisted will be starting tonight, and he may not play at all. He went through light running and shooting drills during this morning's shootaround at Clune Arena (as he recovers from a case of the stomach flu he came down with on Sunday night), but he was kept out of the team's scout work sessions to save his energy.

Plaisted received 8 litres of intravenous fluids Monday and Tuesday, and is taking anti-nausea pills to stave off symptoms. He was able to keep some food down yesterday, but he threw up again this morning, and looked pale and weak at shootaround as he sat on the sidelines.

Dave Rose will see how Trent looks tonight during pregame warmups, and he could pull off a surprise and play a few minutes, but right now, it appears as if Chris Miles will start in Plaisted's place, as the team is preparing to play without Plaisted.

I remember a game in the 96 NBA finals when Jordan had the flu and still came out and scored 40 something points against the Jazz. I'm just sayin'.:)

OK, so maybe it wasn't quite Jordanesque, but that was a nice game by TP.

---

He really showed me something playing through the flu tonight.

=====