
Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't win..

Posted by domanater - 2008/02/03 20:18

I'm waiting for Airwolf to come on and minimize what just happened at the Super Bowl.

After this Super Bowl, don't ever tell me that there's a team next year we couldn't beat on a neutral field.

And give the Giants some credit.....

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by detmer4prez - 2008/02/03 20:21

domanater wrote:

I'm waiting for Airwolf to come on and minimize what just happened at the Super Bowl.

After this Super Bowl, don't ever tell me that there's a team next year we couldn't beat on a neutral field.

And give the Giants some credit.....

Way to feed the trolls. We get mad that these dorks are still on here but people continue to egg them on. Thanks. :huh:

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by sjcougfam - 2008/02/03 20:27

What a game, wow! I'm so happy to see those cocky cheaters go down.

Eli Manning = superbowl MVP? What?

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/02/03 20:37

Everyone knows the Patriots didn't really want to be there playing the Giants. If it had been Green Bay they would have brought their "A" game. They had a hard time getting psyched to play such a mediocre team as the Giants and they come from a loser (you might call it a "mid-major") conference. :S

How am I doing??? This is hard. Where's airhead when we need him???

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Hengst - 2008/02/03 21:07

sjcougfam wrote:

What a game, wow! I'm so happy to see those cocky cheaters go down.

Eli Manning = superbowl MVP? What?

I don't know, I think maybe the guy who made that catch with his helmet should be the MVP! can't remember his name though.

Either that or someone on the defense!

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by sjcougfam - 2008/02/03 21:19

Hengst wrote:
sjcougfan wrote:
What a game, wow! I'm so happy to see those cocky cheaters go down.
Eli Manning = superbowl MVP? What?

I don't know, I think maybe the guy who made that catch with his helmet should be the MVP! can't remember his name though.

Either that or someone on the defense!

That was an incredible catch, probably one of the best in superbowl history, really.
Manning did throw 2 td passes in the 4th, including the game winner.
I just never thought Eli Manning would ever win a superbowl, much less a MVP.

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by njcoug - 2008/02/03 21:31

domanater wrote:
I'm waiting for Airwolf to come on and minimize what just happened at the Super Bowl.

After this Super Bowl, don't ever tell me that there's a team next year we couldn't beat on a neutral field.

And give the Giants some credit.....
He's on conference call with Donald Trump and Ron Paul about what really happened on 9/11

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by PO_POcoug - 2008/02/03 23:02

And Wolfie thought hot dogs were expensive at LES!!!

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by nuk13 - 2008/02/04 00:10

Hengst wrote:
sjcougfan wrote:
What a game, wow! I'm so happy to see those cocky cheaters go down.
Eli Manning = superbowl MVP? What?

I don't know, I think maybe the guy who made that catch with his helmet should be the MVP! can't remember his name though.

Either that or someone on the defense!

His name is David Tyree and I could vote for him. If the Pats had won I think the little darter Welker #83 should have got it. Moss gets all the publicity but Welker I think broke a Super Bowl record with 11 catches. He looked like Nate Meikel.

I appreciate the Giants for cleaning the pats clocks, now I can go back to disliking them.

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by iShowsToGo.com - 2008/02/04 00:58

I am so glad the Giants won. I am not a fan of them, but I was cheering for them today. I just don't like watching New England win all the time. I think it is time for someone else to win. Congratulations to the Giants! And I am still shocked that the patriots lost their last game of the season, to let the 72' Dolphins still hold that record! Wow.

Go Cougars!

=====

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Hawkwing - 2008/02/04 09:08

What do you expect, this was the first Super Bowl that the Patriots were not allowed to video tape the opposing teams signals and plays. Of course they were caught off guard, and ironically completely unable to stop the Giant defense (coincidence?).

Congratulations to the Giants who played with the heart of a champion and ended up going home with the Prom Queen.

=====

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Airwolf84 - 2008/02/04 16:27

Actually, I was going to come on here and predict a Giants win, but I got too busy and pre-occupied to worry about it. All you had to do was look at what the Giants had done in their last 4 games... almost beat the Pats in week 17 and then won 3 straight on the road, two of them against the NFC's best, while their defense was playing great. The Patriots, on the other hand, started to slump a little after their 38-35 win against NY in week 17 and looked like they had lost their 'swagger' going into the Super Bowl. NY's win should have been no surprise.

=====

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/02/04 16:36

Airwolf84 wrote:

Actually, I was going to come on here and predict a Giants win, but I got too busy and pre-occupied to worry about it.

:dry: Yeah, like you're ever too busy to make predictions. :dry:

=====

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by BlueTrue - 2008/02/04 16:47

Airwolf84 wrote:

Actually, I was going to come on here and predict a Giants win :laugh: , but I got too busy and pre-occupied to worry about it :laugh: . All you had to do was look at what the Giants had done in their last 4 games... almost beat the Pats in week 17 and then won 3 straight on the road, two of them against the NFC's best, while their defense was playing great. The Patriots, on the other hand, started to slump a little after their 38-35 win against NY in week 17 and looked like they had lost their 'swagger' going into the Super Bowl. NY's win should have been no surprise.

Hey now here is a shocker Wolfie is spouting more of his BS. Just like had the Patriots won he would be telling us how he was going to predict that and compare the Giants to BYU in the BCS and how BYU doesn't stand a chance against the odds and "superior" talent and bla bla bla bla bla.

Thanks for the laugh Wolfie :lol:

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Airwolf84 - 2008/02/04 16:57

snoscythe wrote:

Airwolf84 wrote:

Actually, I was going to come on here and predict a Giants win, but I got too busy and pre-occupied to worry about it.

:dry: Yeah, like you're ever too busy to make predictions. :dry:

During BYU football season, that's true, but this was an NFL game.

=====

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Airwolf84 - 2008/02/04 17:00

BlueTrue wrote:

Airwolf84 wrote:

Actually, I was going to come on here and predict a Giants win :laugh: , but I got too busy and pre-occupied to worry about it :laugh: . All you had to do was look at what the Giants had done in their last 4 games... almost beat the Pats in week 17 and then won 3 straight on the road, two of them against the NFC's best, while their defense was playing great. The Patriots, on the other hand, started to slump a little after their 38-35 win against NY in week 17 and looked like they had lost their 'swagger' going into the Super Bowl. NY's win should have been no surprise.

Hey now here is a shocker Wolfie is spouting more of his BS. Just like had the Patriots won he would be telling us how he was going to predict that and compare the Giants to BYU in the BCS and how BYU doesn't stand a chance against the odds and "superior" talent and bla bla bla bla bla.

Thanks for the laugh Wolfie :lol:

There is a smaller gap in overall talent in the NFL than there is on the college level.

=====

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/02/04 18:33

Airwolf84 wrote:

BlueTrue wrote:

Airwolf84 wrote:

Actually, I was going to come on here and predict a Giants win :laugh: , but I got too busy and pre-occupied to worry about it :laugh: . All you had to do was look at what the Giants had done in their last 4 games... almost beat the Pats in week 17 and then won 3 straight on the road, two of them against the NFC's best, while their defense was playing great. The Patriots, on the other hand, started to slump a little after their 38-35 win against NY in week 17 and looked like they had lost their 'swagger' going into the Super Bowl. NY's win should have been no surprise.

Hey now here is a shocker Wolfie is spouting more of his BS. Just like had the Patriots won he would be telling us how he was going to predict that and compare the Giants to BYU in the BCS and how BYU doesn't stand a chance against the odds and "superior" talent and bla bla bla bla bla.

Thanks for the laugh Wolfie :lol:

There is a smaller gap in overall talent in the NFL than there is on the college level.

Tell that to Miami.

You should have quit while you were ahead. Your hindsight analysis of the Giants and Patriots is fairly accurate but then that is to be expected with hindsight.

Actually, you shouldn't have taken the bait on this one Wolfie. This thread really was an unnecessary jab at you and I apologize for my participation - not one of my better moments.

=====

Re:Where's Airwolf to tell us the Giants didn't wi

Posted by Airwolf84 - 2008/02/04 22:57

Conosticator wrote:

Airwolf84 wrote:

BlueTrue wrote:

Airwolf84 wrote:

Actually, I was going to come on here and predict a Giants win :laugh: , but I got too busy and pre-occupied to worry about it :laugh: . All you had to do was look at what the Giants had done in their last 4 games... almost beat the Pats in week 17 and then won 3 straight on the road, two of them against the NFC's best, while their defense was playing great. The Patriots, on the other hand, started to slump a little after their 38-35 win against NY in week 17 and looked like they had lost their 'swagger' going into the Super Bowl. NY's win should have been no surprise.

Hey now here is a shocker Wolfie is spouting more of his BS. Just like had the Patriots won he would be telling us how he was going to predict that and compare the Giants to BYU in the BCS and how BYU doesn't stand a chance against the odds and "superior" talent and bla bla bla bla bla.

Thanks for the laugh Wolfie :lol:

There is a smaller gap in overall talent in the NFL than there is on the college level.

Tell that to Miami.

You should have quit while you were ahead. Your hindsight analysis of the Giants and Patriots is fairly accurate but then that is to be expected with hindsight.

Actually, you shouldn't have taken the bait on this one Wolfie. This thread really was an unnecessary jab at you and I apologize for my participation - not one of my better moments.

Hey, we're in the off-season now... gotta keep things fun and interesting.;

=====