I'll believe it when I see the channel on my TV in my living room. Until then, I don't think I can handle the emotional let down if it's not true, so I am choosing not to believe it.

At long last, The Mtn. has a deal with DirecTV.

No, really.

Advertisement

The network devoted to the Mountain West Conference has not been available on any satellite service since its inception in September 2006. But Jeff Schemmel, San Diego State director of athletics, said today DirecTV will offer The Mtn. beginning Aug. 1.

An official announcement is expected later today or tomorrow.

SAY IT IS SO!!!!

You know the thing that pisses me off is that they wait until Aug. 1st. Let's hope our commish doesn't do anything to ruin the deal between then and now....

Interesting, but if it's true, why is this not being shouted from the rooftops? There is nothing mentioned anywhere else, including at The Mtn web site.

I hope it's true, but there needs to be some corroboration from another source.

Nothing is being announced until DirecTV or the MTN makes an official announcement. I don't know why the SDSU athletic director went and ran his mouth before it was official. That is just bad form! Hopefully it is true and actually gets done.

Re:The MTN is on DirecTV??!!

Posted by Pwide - 2008/02/21 16:27

Trib just posted it.

I'm a little hesitant to call it a done deal. Seems strange that only SDSU has heard it (Locke says his sources at DirecTV confirmed it though.)

I can't help but think that Kevin Hart just chose Cal again.

Re:The MTN is on DirecTV??!!

I don't know why only the SDSU AD announced it, but it looks like the real deal. It wouldn't surprise me in the least if the reps didn't have a clue about it. I don't want to get burned, but it was an AD. Still I really want to read it someplace else.

=====

Re:The MTN is on DirecTV??!!

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/02/21 16:33

All that BYU and Utah have said is that they will wait for everything to be signed to make statements. They have not said that the rumors are false or that there is no deal being signed today.

My take, in the absence of denials from persons in the know, is that the SDSU AD jumped the gun in talking about a deal that is in the process of being finalized (you'd think he would have learned from the Mavs/Nets fiasco), and that BYU and Utah will confirm upon official notice that the deal is finalized.

As for a rep denying the deal, the reps would likely be the last to know about a deal getting done. Most fans will know before the Pakistani phone banks find out.

More negativity being reported:

Update on Reported DirecTV Deal

Nobody at BYU or at the Mountain West Conference office said they have heard anything about the supposed deal being reached between The Mtn. and DirecTV.

Javan Hedlund, the Mountain West Conference's Associate Commissioner for Communications, said if he or Commissioner Craig Thompson knew about a deal there would be a press release issued. Duff Tittle, BYU's Associate Athletic Director for Communications, said nobody at BYU has been contacted by anyone.

With Utah and BYU leading the charge to get the network on satellite, you would think those two schools would have been told.

San Diego State director of athletics Jeff Schemmel is apparently the only one that got the memo, or had the gumption to spill the beans on the big secret.

As more information is uncovered, we will let you know.

<http://blogs.sltrib.com/byu/>

A source at BYU did tell 1320 KFAN that, 'I will believe it when the email crosses my desk.'

It looks like the MWC is trying to cover for Shemmel's publicity stunt now. Kfan is reporting this:

According to a BYU and Mountain West Conference source, the Mountain West office and there is no signed contract, and they are perplexed why Jeff Schemmel has made a public announcement when there is no signed contract.

I'm just hoping that, provided this pans out to fruition, that Dish Network will follow suit before mid-July. I have done DirecTV before, and I have to say that the Dish DVR is light years ahead of the DirecTV offering, and I would hate to part ways with my Dish Internet, which has simply been BLAZING. Here's hoping the deal is non-exclusive and that Dish jumps on the bandwagon.

As someone who has DirecTV I am thrilled.

Also, on the DVR issue, DirecTV's DVR is better now than it used to be. I believe that Dish's is better, but only marginally. I have used both, and really don't feel like I'm missing out by having DirecTV and I prefer their channel lineups and services.

The MTN will be a great cherry on top.

Potkey also confirms. <http://blogs.sltrib.com/byu/>

Sources at The Mtn. have confirmed there is an agreement in place with DirecTV in principle, but the deal has not been signed at this time.

There is no time frame on when the signatures will be on the agreement, according to the source. But it looks promising something will be officially released soon.

BYU basketball coach Dave Rose was excited about the prospect of having BYU's games available to more of the country, and Jonathan Tavernari said his parents in Brazil have DirecTV and could get access.

The Daily Herald confirms. <http://www.cougarblue.com/content/view/11397/90/>

Satellite provider DirecTV could make a whole bunch of new friends in the next 24-48 hours.

Hayne Ellis, public relations and marketing manager for The Mtn. television network, said Thursday evening there was an agreement "in principal" for a carriage deal between The Mtn. and satellite provider DirecTV. "I wish I had something to say officially, but it still hasn't been signed," Ellis said. "The outlook is very positive, but we've been here before so we want to be careful. Until the ink is dry on the paper, we won't know for sure." MORE TO COME ...

IF this goes through (call me a skeptic) the next question is what tier of packaging is going to be required to get access? How long until there is an 'outcry' over how much we have to pay to get the mtn. :S

I hate to be pessimistic, but I doubt this is going on their basic packages.

Believe it, having spoke with Hayne Ellis, I can say that this is true.

The deal is done on the DirecTv side but for WHATEVER reason that I can't fathom the powers that be on the MTN. side have not put their signatures to the deal while Directv has.

Tonight we were HOPING to have a done deal, but the finishing touches will have to wait for tomorrow.

In response to a couple of questions on the board.

1. MTN packaging. Between Potkey and Harmon, they have both reported, if a deal were to get done the MTN would be included in a basic DTV package within the conference footprint (I don't know how exactly that works with cali.) For everyone else it would be a part of a sports tier package.

2. Dish on next? Probably not-- This is mostly Harmon, but Dish hasn't been in the negotiations for months. Probably, exclusivity was a necessary prerequisite for DTV to get this thing done. If you want to see the MTN, it's going to have to be DTV or Comcast. Thankfully, now everyone will have the opportunity to get the MTN.

I have not read the 8 pages of this thread so pardon me if this has already been mentioned, but this deal still doesn't guarantee that every game will be televised on CSTV or the MTN does it? With the occasional exception when playing out of conference that we get a game on ESPN or TBS we could still miss some games couldn't we? It still isn't KSL or BYU-TV.

The question was, will BYU be televised. I think with the Direct tv deal, the Mtn can televise more games and make money on advertising. It might require stagger start times maybe even replays. I look forward to a slate of games each Saturday just like ESPN does. The most attractive games would get the best time slots. BYU would most likely be that choice.

I am looking forward to getting the Direct tv system. I will wait to see if the Dish is in too (I hope so).

BYU will definatley get the great exposure from this deal. The Mtn. would be stupid not to broadcast BYU football and basketball first. Now, I can watch every single BYU game next fall.

I think I will reiterate Brother Collie's inspired words,"when you are doing whats right on and off the field, the Lord steps in and magic happens." Amen, Brother Collie, Amen! The suffering of the Lord's people will be no more.

More BYU games might be broadcast, but let's not forget - even KSL didn't broadcast all of the games back in the day! They would skip a few here and there every single season. I imagine the mtn. will continue at a similar number of broadcasts.

In fact, I just looked back at some past schedules and some years KSL / SportsWest broadcast several less BYU games than the mtn / CSTV / Versus combo show!
