
Tackel Football this Spring

Posted by coug81 - 2008/03/05 17:02

I am dying for some football, And wanted to see if we could get enough people to start our saturday morning football.

With your subject line, are you trying to irritate Mars?

I'd love to play, but I'm so big that I'm afraid I'd hurt someone if we play tackle (and by "big" I mean "fat/lazy/slow" and by "someone" I mean "me and my joints".) I'm all for heavy contact flag, however.

P.S. I've got flags.

I can't play because I don't think my wife would let me buy a plane ticket from TX to SLC to play one game, but my brother lives near Lehi and would love to play as long as it is flag (a little old to play tackle). Where can I tell him to go?

I would love to play again, and the sooner the better.

We are moving to Texas at the beginning of May, so I need to get some licks in before then.

However, I will be in Texas house-hunting the 15th, so I'll have to see you on the 29th.

I'll be there, but please let's play tackle still, that's most of the fun :-).

Yeah, I'll be there. And for anyone who is against the tackle.... its all clean, it really is, Nobody is trying to prove anything, everyone is just there to have fun. So don't let the tackle aspect of it turn you away

I would do it in a heartbeat. Let me know when its happening (someone send me an email or boardmail.) I will be out of state a couple times in the coming weeks so I might not be able to make it.

I would love to play again as well. But because of prior commitments on alternating weekends I may not be able to play. My open weekends are March 8th, 22nd...April 5th, 19th, and so on. I don't expect everyone to work around my schedule but hopefully we can work it to fall on those weekends so I can keep playing. If not, then best of luck to you all and have fun! B)

I'll have to check with the "boss," but if we do it early enough (ie 8-9 am) shouldn't be a problem.

I might be able to, we'll see if the bottom of my foot is healed by then (I had a nasty run in with our bed frame and lost a hole bunch of skin on the bottom of my foot, I've been limping around for the last week), or maybe i'll just play qb . . .

You mean the ground won't feel like concrete anymore? :) Well, that ground will probably still feel like concrete. :laugh:

What time? I got the green light. Earlier the better (within reason. My bishop in high school was a construction project manager and slated our turkey bowl, which he didn't come to, at 6:30 on year. right....)

I am going to make a good effort to be there for the first time... I work very late at night, so it will all depend on if I sleep through the 7am wake up call or not...)

By the way how long do the games usally last? Can you leave at anytime without your Karma getting dinged the next day??

8:00 sounds good to me. We usually play for, between 90 minutes and two hours, depending on how many show up. It will still be on the chilly side but by 8:00 the sun will be peaking over the mtn tops...oops, did I say "The mtn."? My bad!! Better go wash my mouth out now....

I just got a call this morning that the tires I ordered two weeks ago are finally here so I may be late getting there. I can either be at the tire shop when they open (at 8:00) and be in and out in 30 minutes or go later and risk spending 2-3 hours. Not sure yet, but since I have a full slate of things planned tomorrow I may get that out of the way first so it doesn't screw up my whole day. But I am totally pumped to get out and play some football again!!! Looking forward to seeing everyone again.

Yeah, I was checking the temps on the way to work this morning and at 8:00 it was 30 degrees. With the sun out it should feel a touch warmer but may not get over 32 degrees until around 9:00. Although the field there is in a bit of a "pocket" in the valley that seems to attract stronger winds and colder temps. Hopefully it isn't too bad.
