His D is the difference in the game right now, even if he isn't scoring.

That's the nice thing about BYU is they can win even if he isn't scoring.

This game is starting to feel a bit like that last game against the yoots where we just never could pull away. Hopefully that changes in the second half.

=====

Re:CSU vs. BYU MWC tourney thread

Posted by Phillip_Morgan - 2008/03/13 13:52

BYU can obviously player better (Trent 1 point) not rebounding very well. CSU has to keep the hot 3-point shooting 54.5% in the second half to stay close.

=====

Re:CSU vs. BYU MWC tourney thread

Posted by timmyboy - 2008/03/13 13:52

Trent is actually playing really well. He's passing like a fiend and his defense has been phenomenal. Scoring is struggling, but that has to do with a little bit of a poor shooting streak and some really bad no-calls.

With about 2 minutes left, Trent was called with an offensive foul on one of the worst calls I have ever seen.

=====

Re:CSU vs. BYU MWC tourney thread

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/03/13 13:53

BYU is shooting 56% in the first half

CSU is 54% behind the arc. Both teams have 6 3s in the half.

BYU is 8/12 from the free throw line. CSU is 4/4

Both teams have 14 boards and 4 turnovers.

I'm pretty sure that the MTN commentators want to make love with the whole CSU team. All half they talk about CSU's "great tournament run." It has been 1 game!!! Thats not a tournament run. Thats one win against the other worst team in the division.

Re:CSU vs. BYU MWC tourney thread

CSU CANNOT continue their hot shooting, by the sounds of it, the way they're just throwing crap up. We need to keep to our game and blow these guys out.

=====

Re:CSU vs. BYU MWC tourney thread

Posted by timmyboy - 2008/03/13 13:55

CSU has no chance of continuing their insane outside shooting. The best part is - this CSU team isn't very intelligent, so I bet they will keep trying. Maybe that isn't stupid though - because it is their best shot of winning, even though its small.

I bet CSU shoots like 25% in the second half and BYU wins it easily.

I love Mark Durrant. I'd love to have him take Plaisted aside right before the second half and give him a titty twister. Durrant can't believe how poorly he's done thus far, because he should be dominating.

I have no doubt that Rose is giving them some serious talk. I'm sure he's more ticked than any of us (and that's saying something)....woohoo:

For once, I think the mtn commentators are correct, not the KSL commentators. Trent is struggling shooting, but he is playing for the win and doing what he needs for that. He's only taken 2 shots, because the shots haven't been there.

BTW - CSU's gone over his back twice already this game, negating 2 rebounds he would have had.

He's also getting zoned and one without the ball and getting doubled with the ball. That's a big part of the reason everyone else is scoring.

I tell you, it's a zone and one - you have a guy on you and a guy zoning directed at you. That means you are basically double teamed before the ball comes. I don't care how tall you are, its difficult for a big man to play out of a double.

CSU should have skipped the halftime break. Clearly that was the best defense we applied to them all day.

I predicted a comfortable 15 point win. I don't mind being wrong on the short side.

CSU misses again.

BYU ball.

Miles is fouled, makes the basket, but it is waved off before the shot.

See, here's where Plaisted has huge value... double-teamed and does a sweet pass to a wide open Fredette who nails a 3. Sometimes it's just your presence on the court that controls the game (though he wasn't in for a lot of this most recent run).

All right, I'll stop talking up Plaisted.

I LOVE the coaching adjustment at half time. On offense, BYU's playing four guys on the perimeter well-spaced, Plaisted's playing underneath baseline. Can't zone that - it's impossible. Plaisted takes it on the baseline sometimes, sometimes he posts. One player cuts at a time. The spacing is absolutely phenomenal. Props to the coaches.

He's played well without the ball. I would say it's because the team hs played great and CSU thought if they shut out PLaisted they stood a chance, hence all the double teams on Trent. That didn't work for CSU and PLaisted started to get open and his shot was falling.

Cummard is now on the bend. less than 4 mins remain.

Our RPI dropped because our Strength of Schedule dropped from 98 to 110 or something. That's what happens when you play CSU three times. It should go right back up though after playing SDSU/Air Force and then in the title game.

The quote of the day from the article:

When the buzzer sounded, Miles turned to his assistant and said, "Ding dong, the witch is dead."

His was actually +1.54 - which still stinks.

7 turnovers is pretty bad. Not only does it cost us 7 possessions (who knows how many points) it also gives them 7 extra possessions (again who knows how many points).

Trent needs to get it together by tomorrow.
