Butler got a 7.....

Butler was top 15 RPI and 29-3 and got a 7 seed. I'm trying to wrap my head around what that means for us as far as seeding. I'm stumped

UNLV just got an 8 so I'm guessing we get screwed with a 9 :angry:

I doubt we are even in the way things are going. We'll get no better than a 10 seed.

I'm guessing we end up in the 8/9 matchup in Anaheim with the winner playing UCLA

I'd rather have a 10 than an 8 or 9.

Me too but its not gonna happen cuz I think the 10 seed is on Fri/Sun whereas the 8/9 is Thu/Sat

Agreed, I would definately take a 10 over 8 or 9. Heck, I'll take a 12 or 13...it would mean a better change at the sweet 16 in my opinion

Good ole' Mt West Conference is gonna screw us again. I think its funny that UNLV jumped clear up to an 8 seed for winning the conference tourney on their home court.

I think they're going to get the Omaha 7.

Does anyone know which sites are still remaining open (ie don't have all their spots filled). BYU can only play in Denver, Omaha, Anaheim, DC

All 4 still have spots.

8, against Texas A&M in Omaha. I like it!

I knew it! Does winning the conference regular season by 2 games mean anything???

A+M has underperformed all season (they were top 15 to start the season)-it's not the worst 1st round matchup ever but they have a lot of talent.

Could be worse, west virginia at 7 got 10 arizona. The real punishment isn't having to play A+M, it's being forced into playing UCLA in Cali if we manage to win the 1st.

As long as the tournament champion gets the automatic NCAA bid--winning the conference is not going to mean much--if anything. If BYU had won the conference with say a 20-10 record, they would not even be in the tournament. I don't like the idea of the conf tournament champion getting the automatic bid, it totally disses the conference play. The conference play means way more and is a better indication of the quality of the team. Getting hot and winning a couple of games in the tournament doesn't really tell you much.

Uhhh. this is gonna be tough. I've seen them play and they're a talented team. Remember, this is the same team that upset 2-seeded texas. But at least its gonna be close to home.
