
BYU Playing in the West

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/03/16 16:35

BYU is going to be playing in the West Region on the 20th.

As an 8 seed playing Texas A&M in Anaheim.

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by timmyboy - 2008/03/16 16:38

Anaheim, actually.

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/03/16 16:39

My bad...

Mississippi Valley State is going to be a tough draw in the second round. ;)

Playing UCLA in LA is not going to be fun, and is a nightmare matchup for us at ALL positions if we make it out of the first round.

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2008/03/16 16:41

The Ncaa sucks! An eight seed again! We had seven losses all year! But whatever I think we can take out A and M. UCLA has shown that they can be vulnerable. But I wouldn't expect us too be them. But oh well. I'm glad we are in the tournament. At least it's not a 12 seed like in 03. Go Cougs!

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by timmyboy - 2008/03/16 16:43

I like that Texas A&M has no superstars - that always seems to be dangerous to BYU (Macnamara will forever be my nemesis).

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by wannaberockstar - 2008/03/16 16:49

Argh!!! You had to bring up memories of McNamara. He was shooting lights out that game. What drove me crazy was that after they barely beat us he shot a horrible percentage during his next game in the second round and they lost. Ah well, life goes on...

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by connecticutcougar - 2008/03/16 16:51

Plaisted better come to play against A&M. They have a big guy, think his name is Jones, who is a beast inside. He goes hard on the glass. They also have a 7 footer who plays well. We better be ready to hit the boards hard! However, A&M doesn't really have a player that can take over the game on offense like the teams we usually have a hard time with.

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by GolfDiveNCougs - 2008/03/16 17:04

wannaberockstar wrote:

Argh!!! You had to bring up memories of McNamara. He was shooting lights out that game. What drove me crazy was that after they barely beat us he shot a horrible percentage during his next game in the second round and they lost. Ah well, life goes on...Sorry, rockstar, Syracuse took out Maryland in the second round. The game you're probably thinking of is the Sweet 16 game against a 'Bama team that surprised EVERYBODY by beating 1 seed Stanford in the 2nd round, and Syracuse got overconfident when they saw an "8" to the left of their opponent's name. I was annoyed because I thought if we could take it to Syracuse, and 'Cuse pulled it out against a 4 seed, we could've had a shot at the Sweet 16 that year! I mean, we beat one of the Final Four teams on a neutral court!!!

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by decloucog - 2008/03/16 17:53

GolfDiveNCougs wrote:

wannaberockstar wrote:

Argh!!! You had to bring up memories of McNamara. He was shooting lights out that game. What drove me crazy was that after they barely beat us he shot a horrible percentage during his next game in the second round and they lost. Ah well, life goes on...Sorry, rockstar, Syracuse took out Maryland in the second round. The game you're probably thinking of is the Sweet 16 game against a 'Bama team that surprised EVERYBODY by beating 1 seed Stanford in the 2nd round, and Syracuse got overconfident when they saw an "8" to the left of their opponent's name. I was annoyed because I thought if we could take it to Syracuse, and 'Cuse pulled it out against a 4 seed, we could've had a shot at the Sweet 16 that year! I mean, we beat one of the Final Four teams on a neutral court!!!

I was there when BYU beat OSU and that was about as unneutral as they come. But it was a great game.

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by cougarfurr - 2008/03/16 18:10

Didn't take but an hour for the blasphemous threads to begin...

http://www.texags.com/main/forum.reply.asp?topic_id=1113429&forum_id=7

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by GolfDiveNCougs - 2008/03/16 18:27

decloucog wrote:

GolfDiveNCougs wrote:

wannaberockstar wrote:

Argh!!! You had to bring up memories of McNamara. He was shooting lights out that game. What drove me crazy was that after they barely beat us he shot a horrible percentage during his next game in the second round and they lost. Ah well, life goes on...Sorry, rockstar, Syracuse took out Maryland in the second round. The game you're probably thinking of is the Sweet 16 game against a 'Bama team that surprised EVERYBODY by beating 1 seed Stanford in the 2nd round, and Syracuse got overconfident when they saw an "8" to the left of their opponent's name. I was annoyed because I thought if we could take it to Syracuse, and 'Cuse pulled it out against a 4 seed, we could've had a shot at the Sweet 16 that year! I mean, we beat one of the Final Four teams on a neutral court!!!

I was there when BYU beat OSU and that was about as unneutral as they come. But it was a great game. Yeah, I was too. And you're right, it was(both un-neutral, and a great game). In my defense, the CROWD may not have been neutral, but at least the actual COURT was...

I stopped short of joining the "TRAI-TOR" chant at Bobik, but not many others did.

:laugh:

Oh well, still a win, right?

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by the_other_blackguy@byu - 2008/03/16 18:32

I hope the boys come ready "mentally" to play.

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by Oakley-ite - 2008/03/16 18:52

Herald's Dickson says after the game at UNLV, "They won't face a tougher environment in the NCAA tournament than the one they took on Saturday."

I think that UCLA in Anaheim could prove that statement wrong.:S

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by declocoug - 2008/03/16 18:53

GolfDiveNCougs wrote:

declocoug wrote:

GolfDiveNCougs wrote:

wannaberockstar wrote:

Argh!!! You had to bring up memories of McNamara. He was shooting lights out that game. What drove me crazy was that after they barely beat us he shot a horrible percentage during his next game in the second round and they lost. Ah well, life goes on...Sorry, rockstar, Syracuse took out Maryland in the second round. The game you're probably thinking of is the Sweet 16 game against a 'Bama team that surprised EVERYBODY by beating 1 seed Stanford in the 2nd round, and Syracuse got overconfident when they saw an "8" to the left of their opponent's name. I was annoyed because I thought if we could take it to Syracuse, and 'Cuse pulled it out against a 4 seed, we could've had a shot at the Sweet 16 that year! I mean, we beat one of the Final Four teams on a neutral court!!!

I was there when BYU beat OSU and that was about as unneutral as they come. But it was a great game.Yeah, I was too. And you're right, it was(both un-neutral, and a great game). In my defense, the CROWD may not have been neutral, but at least the actual COURT was...

I stopped short of joining the "TRAI-TOR" chant at Bobik, but not many others did.

:laugh:

Oh well, still a win, right?

You got that right. I just remember Samuelson blasting the student body at the next devotional. ouch.

=====

Re:BYU Playing in the West

Posted by Gunk - 2008/03/16 19:05

I watched the A&M vs. Texas game. A&M has a big body or two down low, but that's not my main worry. It's their PG. He's quick and handles the ball really well, or at least he did in the game I watched. I worry that Murdock/Burgess will be able to stay in front of him.

From what I saw, A&M doesn't take many outside shots. They like to take it to the rim and quite frankly we suck at defending when teams take it inside on us. Trent and Cumnard get in foul trouble, our guards can't stay in front of quicker guards and it frustrates our players like crazy.

This is going to be a tough, tough game.

=====