
Texas A&M vs. BYU

I can't believe it's 10 mins into the game and BYU is not looking good with only 6 points and trailing by 7

Freddette drives the length of the court to score after an AM miss.

Re:Texas A&M vs. BYU

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/03/20 18:03

Plaisted is finally on the board for two.

BYU is 0-5 from the arc while AM is 4-7. That's the difference in the game.

So they have one guy on their entire team that can shoot and he is the one guy that we decide not to guard. Unbelievable.

Carter has a career high for AM in 3s already tonight. BYU's luck reminds me of Syracuse years ago.

AM can score inside too.

BYU caught a break with a phantom goal tend on AM but the refs make it up on the other end with a second foul on Plaisted.

Halftime score

29 all.

I am quite pleased to see BYU tied at the half given they were down by 10-12 at one time.

They even took the lead and should be leading if their big guys could make their freethrows!!!

This drives me absolutely batty! There is NO excuse for a D1 basketball player to shoot less than 70% from the free throw line. It is such a liability, especially in the tournament where games are usually close.

Kevin Love is an incredible post player, the best UCLA has had in ages and Collison is perhaps the best point guard in the country. I doubt BYU wins, but I think they keep it close if the 3 is falling.

But first, BYU has to keep doing what they've been doing the last 7 mins of the first half so they can beat AM tonight!

Is the overall consensus that we're in good shape and should win easily, if we play like we're capable? Without hearing or seeing (at work) and only reading this thread, I'm not sure how to take it. It seems like typical Cougar b-ball, hesitant and reluctant to start and then wait till its too late to show them how we can play.

Here's to hoping they come out hard early in the second half, get a good lead, and then cruise (while building the lead).

As for UCLA, who cares right now. Let's worry about A&M.

Carter for the Aggies has 5 three pointers in the first half, that is all their offense tonight. He goes cold and BYU heats up, then BYU wins going away.

BYU was not playing good defense until Rose tore into them and they picked it up during the last 8 mins. BYU came back from a 12 point deficit to take a 3 point lead just before Carter drilled his last 3 of the half.

BYU has missed at least 3 shots at the line or BYU would be leading now.

BYU plays much better as a team than Texas AM, but AM has some players that give BYU fits.

Amazing how "the little things" can win ballgames. I love Rose but would love to see him turn the program around in that regard, where we're solid ball control, free throw, rebounding, defensive, etc. We're getting there I hope.

BYU used to lead the MWC in freethrow shooting under Cleveland. Rose's problem is he has Plaisted, Miles and Collinworth, who are terrible from the line. The rest of the squad shoots very well, about 80 percent.

The rest of the squad shoots very well, about 80 percent. Back in the glory days all 5 on the floor could shoot well. It was always a trademark of BYU for sure. I guess what's frustrating as well is you hear they shoot well in practice but it doesn't translate to the game. (That's an issue with the mental. Where's Gunk's psychologist?)

AM has a one point lead with 7 mins left.

BYU is not blocking out on the defensive boards and AM is in this game because of the second and third chance shots they are getting.

Plaisted has 11 points now, but he's not hitting free throws.

Very frustrating game to see BYU play great defense, then give up a shot that caroms off a long rebound for AM, which picks up a quick two under the basket after a quick pass.

Why can't BYU win big bball games? The problem here is that even if BYU has a better year next year, they won't be seeded higher than 8 no matter what. The committee will give a team that hasn't won a NCAA tourney game in 6 tries a low seed regardless. BYU just continues to prove them right. I'm so glad bball season is over though, and the inevitable was fulfilled. Sucks we had to go through three months to meet this same end. I had a chance at tickets and I'm so glad I didn't go.

Bring on football!!

It cost us the game at that point. He was 10 feet behind the arc. He had no business taking that shot. They had plenty of time on the shot clock and he wasn't that hot all night.

BYU could have pulled closer, but that was like a 5 point turn around.

Re:Texas A&M vs. BYU

Posted by WACoug - 2008/03/20 19:42

What a nauseating game. We allow one of their players to score a career high. We were out hustled and out played. The Cougars remind of the NBA fast break teams that rack up good records during the regular season and then get swept in the playoffs because the game slows down and they are not built for that game. BYU is too much of a finesse team. At least we can stop beating our heads against the wall with basketball flops and get back to talking about the team that is representing BYU athletics well. Any spring football updates?

I'd like to agree but unfortunately he's had - and will attempt - worse shots than that. He does some sweet stuff but then the poor guy always seems to make a HUGE, CRITICAL poor decision at just the right moment for the opposition.

Free-throws, rebounding and mental toughness. That is what I hope they work on all summer long. Otherwise it will be the same old disappointment next year.

Exactly. Does coach Omer do strength and conditioning for bball? If not, he should start.....tomorrow.

I think the coaching can be blamed a little as well. They need to get a shooting coach to work with the players from the FT line. Also, at the end of the first half, they should have had a shooter down the floor instead of Miles. Also, Cumnard should have been guarding the shooter, not Tavernari.

Go Cougs!!

Sure would have been nice to get Kent State huh, they looked absolutely horrible. Oh well, time to focus on football!

As good a coach Rose is, one of his major faults is making adjustments during a game. He needs to get better at that. Not much was done to free up Cumnard.

I've been away for a week and didn't catch the first part of the game...but why did Fredette play the entire game and Murdock sit? (I expected Fredette to at least get a breather)

Otherwise, I'm glad to get that over with. I'm usually embarrassed by BYU basketball whenever it comes to the national stage. This year against UNC & Louisville gave me false hope. I don't know what to say about Plaisted other than it wasn't pretty.

How's spring practice coming?

I just need to vent! That was freaking emberassing how we started that game. Our rebounding was atrocious. No excuses, all i am hearing on the post game interviews is "Give them credit" "They are a good team". NO they are not. We suck in the tournament, that's the bottom line.

Thanks for the year Cougs, there was much good and there is much to work on. I think they need to be as tough mentally as physically. They need to revisit fundamentals. They would win a lot more games (including the MWC championship and the game tonight) with the little things like making free throws and boxing out.

It is hard to win when you get one shot at the basket. It is called defensive rebounds. UNLV and AM beat us at that very game. More opportunities equals more points.

Also, why is it that BYU always seems to have an opponent that just "goes off"? Is that a lack of adjustment on our part to get them out of their rhythm? Me thinks so.

Emery will probably be our best defender as soon as he steps back on campus.
