Nothing earth shattering, but something is more interesting than nothing ;)

BYU wide receiver Austin Collie's little brother Dylan, is in town during his spring break and attended practice yesterday. The 14-year-old has a walking boot on his right foot because of an ATV accident in which his friend ran over his foot while he was the passenger. The youngest of the Collie males expects to be out on the BYU practice field running routes in a few years. His parents and brothers have told me he is the best of the bunch.

Thanks Hengst. I really liked this paragraph. Can't stop grinning.

Go Cougs!!!

I read something about Harvey Unga's little brother walking on this Fall. Anyone know anything about him?

Victor Unga, the younger brother of star running back Harvey Unga, was also on the sidelines and at 345 pounds looked like a load. Victor has committed to walk on BYU as a nose guard this fall and will battle for a scholarship.

I am more interested in Austin Collie's brother, who was also present, but with a walking boot on (had an ATV accident). The article I read stated that Austin and Austin's parents think he is the most talented of all the brothers, and he is only a Sophomore.

Sophmore.

I think he's actually a freshman. He's only 14.

Unless he's going by a different name now, it's actually Greg Unga. He played OG and DT and is a wide body. He goes about 5'10" 330 lbs. He's actually a lot more athletic than he looks, but I'm not sure he'll make a big impact on the team.
