Utes to get New Uniforms

Looks like the Ute's new uniforms will be made by UnderArmour, and will debut at the August 30th game in Michigan. I'm thinking they should wait to roll out the new look until they play UNLV so at least they have a chance of winning that game.

Deseret News has renderings of the new look. Not a whole lot different, as far as I can tell. Helmets are apparently unchanged.

Since UnderArmour is the new supplier, does that mean that the players have to run out on the field beating their thighs and chests while screaming, "This is our House!!!" ???

I got a sneak peak of the team practicing in their new uniforms when I was up in Salt Lake this past week. Here is the world exclusive.

again?...wow they don't have class or an identity, well maybe they'll avoid sports illustrated worse top 10 this next time around...perhaps the helmet will match the jersey too

Also....good job on copying Air Force-perhaps next year you can also have "clic clak" written on your foreheads.

Well if those renderings are accurate, then it appears Utah is once again copying BYU by ditching the same color jersey/pant combo and going back to the white top, colored bottom and vice versa. Man, can they seriously not do anything without mimicking BYU? I don't care how many times they change their uniforms, they are still ugly, still mediocre, and they are still confused as to what their mascot really is...is it a bird, or an Indian? Hmm...

Chance to beat UNLV? I seem to remember a certain shutout last year. I wouldn't recommend that game.

I'd wait for CSU. If they can make it to overtime, they might have a chance...

Scout.com is reporting that Michael Flatley of "Lord of the Dance" fame has received a scholarship offer from the University of Utah. The Utes are recruiting Flatley to play receiver. They like his footwork and think he fits into their team chemistry. ;)

That was a great joke. Seriously what has changed on these uniforms? Anything aside from the Logo? The lack of sports news at this time of year is starting to show it's ugly head.

According to the article in the Dnews, the helmets are made by someone else and they are maintaining the "candy red".
