
Angilau suspended forever

Posted by TimO - 2008/03/31 10:57

Angilau In Trouble Again

For someone who hasn't even played a down yet, freshman defensive lineman David Angilau continues to make news for the wrong reasons.

BYU head coach Bronco Mendenhall announced today Angilau has been indefinitely suspended from the team because of a violation of team rules.

The 6-foot-1, 266-pound Angilau, from Longmont, Colo., redshirted the 2007 season.

This marks the second time Angilau has been suspended in his brief BYU career. He was one of six freshmen suspended from practice last September for breaking team rules.

That suspension involved the infamous statement from Ryan Kessman's father that his son's transgressions included drinking a vanilla cappuccino at Starbucks.

<http://blogs.sltrib.com/byu/>

=====

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by TimO - 2008/03/31 10:59

This fulfills his purpose at BYU-to remind our vets, super sophs, and incoming freshman that Mendenhall's Program is not to be messed with or tested. This is unfortunate for a possible break-through player, but he will be replaced with someone willing to GIVE EVERYTHING and be fully invested, as well as play at the HIGHEST LEVEL. GO COUGS!!!

=====

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/03/31 11:06

Doesn't "indefinitely" mean "undetermined" or "not specified" and not "forever".

Forever would basically mean he has been kicked off the team. I would also like to know the specifics such as: Can he still practice with the team? Does he continue with offseason workouts? Is he still on scholarship? etc.

=====

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by Knucklehead - 2008/03/31 11:14

imuakahuku wrote:

Doesn't "indefinite" mean "undetermined" or "not specified" and not "forever".

Forever would basically mean he has been kicked off the team. I would also like to know the specifics such as: Can he still practice with the team? Does he continue with offseason workouts? Is he still on scholarship? etc.

That's my understanding of the word, yes. Indefinite means undefined. Infinite, on the other hand, means without end.

=====

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by gmj81 - 2008/03/31 11:41

From the TBS articles written about him while he was being recruited, I think he'll get his act together. Lots of guys on the team have gone through some adversity, even the likes of a suspension, before they really came into their own. Guys like Tialavea, Miyahira, Hooks, So'oto, Tahi, Tonga... they've all been through it and others who I can't remember too.

Still, it's always a little disturbing to hear about guys 'testing' Bronco's will. But I'm guessing it will only happen less and less. Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons. He doesn't care who you are, if you are out of line, he'll let you know. Usually through an indefinite suspension.

We make big deals out of the small news anymore just because there are no more Crowton era type scandals but I'm guessing this suspension, like coffeegate is not that serious. He probably just missed practice or something and until he makes up for it through community service and other hard work, he'll be "indefinitely suspended".

This is one of the things that I love about Bronco. He takes practice very seriously. This is how I know the program is only going to reach higher and higher peaks.

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by ProV1 - 2008/03/31 11:50

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons.

We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by AF_Puma - 2008/03/31 12:38

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons. He doesn't care who you are, if you are out of line, he'll let you know.

Unlike some people up north. I'll still be surprised if Marquis Wilson doesn't somehow miraculously get reinstated by the time the season begins by KW (if he's not in jail and then I'm still not convinced that KW won't reinstate him just in case he has a jail break). Kyle has a knack for suspending players in the off-season, so much that it's blatantly obvious what he's doing and yet he tries to act like he's actually punishing the guys.

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by treck - 2008/03/31 12:43

ProV1 wrote:

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons.

We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.

$5 says Bronco is the first person to say don't print shirts like this.

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by Hengst - 2008/03/31 12:46

treck wrote:

ProV1 wrote:

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons.

We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.

$5 says Bronco is the first person to say don't print shirts like this.

yeah, that actually sounds like a pretty lame t-shirt, and sort of blasphemous

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by GolfDiveNCougs - 2008/03/31 14:29

treck wrote:

ProV1 wrote:

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons. We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.$5 says Bronco is the first person to say don't print shirts like this.:laugh: Karma! Best laugh all day! I'll admit, I had to smile at both of the first two comments (I assume that ProV1 was joking), but I full on LAUGHED at your particular insight, treck. Thanks for the pick-me-up!

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by SmallTownBaller - 2008/03/31 14:47

gmj81 wrote:

This is one of the things that I love about Bronco. He takes practice very seriously. This is how I know the program is only going to reach higher and higher peaks.

Practice . . . Practice. We're talking about practice. Not a game. Practice. We're talking about practice.

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by FuiJackapuna - 2008/03/31 14:48

It might have been a lot safer to have them read just "Bronco is no respecter of persons"

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by Isola - 2008/03/31 16:49

ProV1 wrote:

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons.

We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.
Just make sure it comes with a lightning rod.

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by ProV1 - 2008/03/31 19:39

Hengst wrote:

treck wrote:

ProV1 wrote:

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons.

We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.

$5 says Bronco is the first person to say don't print shirts like this.

yeah, that actually sounds like a pretty lame t-shirt, and sort of blasphemous
I expect more from you, Hengst. Do I have to type "wink, wink" so you can follow?

=====

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by gingi - 2008/03/31 20:03

ProV1, I read your hilarious shirt idea and then looked up at my picture on the wall that reads, between bolts of lightning,
"Power corrupts. Absolute Power Corrupts Absolutely. But it Rocks Absolutely, Too."
Your blasphemous T-shirt rocks absolutely.

=====

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by Hengst - 2008/03/31 20:04

ProV1 wrote:

Hengst wrote:

treck wrote:

ProV1 wrote:

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons.

We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.

$5 says Bronco is the first person to say don't print shirts like this.

yeah, that actually sounds like a pretty lame t-shirt, and sort of blasphemous
I expect more from you, Hengst. Do I have to type "wink, wink" so you can follow?

I figured it was a joke the first time I read it, and then someone thought it was a good idea, so I figured I'd point out that it wouldn't be a very good idea in reality ;)

=====

Re:Angilau suspended forever

Posted by NotSackless - 2008/03/31 21:35

treck wrote:

ProV1 wrote:

gmj81 wrote:

Bronco, like the Lord, is no respecter of persons.

We need someone with know-how to start printing these T-shirts.

$5 says Bronco is the first person to say don't print shirts like this.

Don't print shirts like this.

Looks like I said it first. Please send the $5 to the BYU Athletic fund.

=====