In an article I read recently there were quotes by Bronco that made it sound like the Spring game was going to be a little anticlimactic. It said there was a scrimmage scheduled for Friday I think of about 50 plays and that would be the most intensive live action of Spring practice, including the Spring game. Even though it is open to the public, Bronco said he didn't plan on being out very long.

Yup, it's a kinder, gentler B/W game. He said that they're using the remaining practices to determine the depth charts for the time between April 12 and Fall practices. It's likely that most of those decisions will be close to decided before the B/W game. He really wants to cut down on injuries this Spring.
