

---

Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by OremCougar - 2008/04/03 17:38

---

Sportsline has him on the "others to watch" farther down the page. At least his name is somewhere in the mix, and with a solid season with some more BYU preseason hype, he will move up the list pretty quick.

<http://www.sportsline.com/collegefootball/heisman>

Do you think Collie deserves to be in the running, or at least get more "hype"?

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by njcoug - 2008/04/03 19:40

---

Sorry this is Tebow's to lose. He put up unheard of numbers last year.

32 passing TDs, 6 INT and oh yeah 895 rushing yds and 23 rushing TDs. If Tebow has 2/3 of the season he had last year he wins it again.

Max's only hope is to pass for 4,000+ w/ 50+ tds and have BYU undefeated and ranked in the top 3.

Tebow is an awesome NCAA QB. If he replicates last season, the Heisman is his.. again.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by OremCougar - 2008/04/04 09:17

---

Tebow was an animal last year, but I hope someone else wins it this next year! Doesn't even necessarily have to be Max, just someone else. Right now it does seem like Tebows to lose though.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by splitbamboo - 2008/04/04 09:32

---

Am I offbase thinking that Max should be able to exceed 4000 yards passing this year? Last year as a "rookie" throwing more than 3,000 and with an offense that is gelling I would think 4,000 would be plenty doable.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/04 09:39

---

OremCougar wrote:

Sportsline has him on the "others to watch" farther down the page. At least his name is somewhere in the mix, and with a solid season with some more BYU preseason hype, he will move up the list pretty quick.

<http://www.sportsline.com/collegefootball/heisman>

Do you think Collie deserves to be in the running, or at least get more "hype"?

For max to win it he has to have a great year this year and next year. He'd have a shot next year if he is lights out two years in a row.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/04 09:41

---

---

njcoug wrote:

Sorry this is Tebow's to lose. He put up unheard of numbers last year.

32 passing TDs, 6 INT and oh yeah 895 rushing yds and 23 rushing TDs. If Tebow has 2/3 of the season he had last year he wins it again.

Max's only hope is to pass for 4,000+ w/ 50+ tds and have BYU undefeated and ranked in the top 3.

Tebow is an awesome NCAA QB. If he replicates last season, the Heisman is his.. again.

And yet no national championship. :(

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/04 09:49

splitbamboo wrote:

Am I offbase thinking that Max should be able to exceed 4000 yards passing this year? Last year as a "rookie" throwing more than 3,000 and with an offense that is gelling I would think 4,000 would be plenty doable.

You know its hard to tell for me. He was only 200 yards away from it last year.... But, I can only see the offense running the ball more with Unga. Its hard to imagine where the extra yards will come from. The thing Max needs to cut down on is INTS. he had 12 last year, which isn't bad considering a lot of them (I can think of at least 4) we're tipped balls. Then I think about Collie, how great he'll be next year, So Max's yards HAVE to increase. The thing that will hurt him is TDs. He had 26 last year. Which isn't that great. But thats not how BYU's offense will work. As soon as its Red Zone, its FUI and Unga, ALL DAY LONG.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/04 10:08

harlinestillopen wrote:

splitbamboo wrote:

Am I offbase thinking that Max should be able to exceed 4000 yards passing this year? Last year as a "rookie" throwing more than 3,000 and with an offense that is gelling I would think 4,000 would be plenty doable.

You know its hard to tell for me. He was only 200 yards away from it last year.... But, I can only see the offense running the ball more with Unga. Its hard to imagine where the extra yards will come from. The thing Max needs to cut down on is INTS. he had 12 last year, which isn't bad considering a lot of them (I can think of at least 4) we're tipped balls. Then I think about Collie, how great he'll be next year, So Max's yards HAVE to increase. The thing that will hurt him is TDs. He had 26 last year. Which isn't that great. But thats not how BYU's offense will work. As soon as its Red Zone, its FUI and Unga, ALL DAY LONG.

300x13=3900. I think it is very probable that he gets to 4,000+ this year. With the O-Line performing to standard he may have two to four 400yrd and a 500yard outing. We have great backs but I can still see him throwing 30+ times a game. Especialy in a somewhat (less than 17pts) close affair which may be four or five of the games. Plus WA is not as good defensively as AZ, UCLA got lit in game one, Utah St is worse than Tulsa, and N. Iowa/E Washington different compass points but same result. I think he does it.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by x_rugger - 2008/04/04 12:41

i don't expect hall to figure in the heisman race this year. the main thing is to get his name on the list this year, then have a great sr year. that is when he should figure in.

the air force kid last year showed that you have to be on the list to have a real shot. while he was never going to win, he should have been in the running, and invited to ny city.

---

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by scotts - 2008/04/04 15:23

---

harlinestillopen wrote:

The thing Max needs to cut down on is INTS.

AND fumbles.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by QB23 - 2008/04/04 15:32

---

Will Hall pass the 4000 yard mark?--one other thing to consider, and I don't know if I'm looking at this the wrong way, is that our return game is significantly better with Collie taking kicks. He gobbles up alot of yards before Hall gets on the field making our drives shorter. One could argue that because our drives are shorter taking less time to score, that we also get the ball more and Hall has more opportunities. I don't know....

I can definately see him passing the 4000 yard mark because I think Unga is more lethal catching the ball in the middle of two line backers playing zone than he is running the football against 11 guys, and Unga will do more damage catching the ball than last year along with George playing better as well. I think we can expect a very similar year for Pitta, Reed, and Collie as they had last year.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by QB23 - 2008/04/04 15:33

---

The thing the left tackle (Reynolds???) needs to cut down on are fumbles and INTs.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/04 15:50

---

QB23 wrote:

Will Hall pass the 4000 yard mark?--one other thing to consider, and I don't know if I'm looking at this the wrong way, is that our return game is significantly better with Collie taking kicks. He gobbles up alot of yards before Hall gets on the field making our drives shorter. One could argue that because our drives are shorter taking less time to score, that we also get the ball more and Hall has more opportunities. I don't know....

I can definately see him passing the 4000 yard mark because I think Unga is more lethal catching the ball in the middle of two line backers playing zone than he is running the football against 11 guys, and Unga will do more damage catching the ball than last year along with George playing better as well. I think we can expect a very similar year for Pitta, Reed, and Collie as they had last year.

I haven't heard anything, but I would be suprised if Collie returned kicks this year. Thats how he got hurt last year, and he is just to important to our Offense to be put in danger of returning kicks

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by akcougar - 2008/04/04 16:54

---

harlinestillopen wrote:

QB23 wrote:

Will Hall pass the 4000 yard mark?--one other thing to consider, and I don't know if I'm looking at this the wrong way, is that our return game is significantly better with Collie taking kicks. He gobbles up alot of yards before Hall gets on the field making our drives shorter. One could argue that because our drives are shorter taking less time to score, that we also get the ball more and Hall has more opportunities. I don't know....

---

I can definately see him passing the 4000 yard mark because I think Unga is more lethal catching the ball in the middle of two line backers playing zone than he is running the football against 11 guys, and Unga will do more damage catching the ball than last year along with George playing better as well. I think we can expect a very similar year for Pitta, Reed, and Collie as they had last year.

I haven't heard anything, but I would be suprised if Collie returned kicks this year. Thats how he got hurt last year, and he is just to important to our Offense to be put in danger of returning kicks

I think it was in one of the Cruiser articles that mentioned that he had been taking reps at kick returner, and that he would be returning kicks this fall. Unless someone else can step up and take that role to the next level, you have to put Collie there. It definately has been a huge weak link in the cougars game. Last years injury may just have been from not being in 100% shape. This year the mission rust is all gone, and he is in much better shape.

That being said, I'd like there to be someone else returning kicks, just because it's not good to have all your eggs in one basket. And you don't want to wear him out by having him do too much. But thankfully, with the Bronco staff, we can rest assured that the best decision will be made!

GO COUGS!!!

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by Yme - 2008/04/07 14:14

---

Well I want BYU to win their bowl game so I hope Hall doesn't take the heisman. (2nd is good)

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by PP3 - 2008/04/08 07:40

---

QB23 wrote:

The thing the left tackle (Reynolds???) needs to cut down on are fumbles and INTs.

Someone just hast to quote Coach Boone here. "Did your blocker fumble the football or did you fumble the football?" Though I can see where that would be a little less true for a quarterback in throwing motion.

=====

Re:Max Hall on Heisman Hopefuls

Posted by gmj81 - 2008/04/08 15:18

---

How many feet are in a mile?!

=====