If my karma reaches 100 by August 1st...

...The cougars will be undefeated this year and next year and will be in the National Championship Game in January 2010. Hey i've seen My Name is Earl, I realize the importance of Good Karma. The football gods of 1984 will return...mark my words! If it doesn't reach 100 and we don't win the Title in 2 years, you will only have yourselves to thank...

Hey, if it works for you, it works for me too. I bumped your karma up, how about bumping mine up?

WOW...I am torn. I can bump you up to a 1000 if it meant my Cougars will go undefeated.

But, should I show some restraint as a moderator?

Make it so number one; otherwise pray the dude is without the prophetic gift

The decision is easy. Test the prophet. Give him the extra karma, but penalize him with minus twice as much as you gave him originally if his prophesy is shown to be false.

This reminds me of a mission story.

A guy in one of my branches was blind. On Fast Sunday he got up to bear his testimony. He talked about faith. He then said that if everyone prayed for him right then and there he would be able to see.

I said a weak prayer for him.

Unfortunately, he's still blind.

So I'll give you my weak Karma hoping, but not expecting it to be true.

If we give you all the good Karma, then there won't be any left for the cougs... What we need to do is hit your Karma down so low that there is so much Good Karma needed to balance the world out that the cougars will have nothing but AMAZING Karma all season...

Karma is about balance in the universe... so if we give you good Karma someone else must eat the bad... If you are volunteering yourself as the bad Karma magnet, to spare BYU... kudos (but NO KARMA) to you.

You made the classic freshman mistake of asking people to give you karma for the sake of giving you karma. People don't seem to respond well to that on this board for some reason ;). You'll just have to find some good insider info for us and then you'll get a karma boost :-).

Do I have to tell 10 friends within 10 minutes who have to tell 10 more friends each or the cycle is broken and the Karma is destroyed?

No, you just don't get your flat screen.

Let's go Biblical punishment-wise. Anyone have access to the lion cages at the SLC Zoo?

No worry. Airhead will show up just in time to ensure that the Karma Universe stays in balance. B)

When I was a scout and at scout camp, we rocked the outhouse of an opposing leader and wedged the door shut. He came out screaming "Karma is a *#!@!"

At the end of our basketball season, in the game that decided league champion, he was one of the officials. It is the only time I have ever seen officiating worse than the Pac-10. Bad karma sucks :angry:

That's how you get Karma points. By the way, CougFan84 annoys me.

Nah. You already docked me 40 karma because I called you out for being self-righteous and a whiner. Why stop now- your power trip has just begun! :dry:

Negative karma might not be too bad, at least you know someone is reading your posts.:unsure:

edit: wow I haven't been on here for awhile because of school and all. When did I get Karma? :)

AMAZING Karma all season...

Apparently -2147483648 is the least karma you can ever have in this system, based on the size of the database column it's stored in.

I'm working hard to get there so that the Cougars are more likely to win.

Wish me luck. :dry:

Since Karma is a Hindu thing, and BYU is hardly a Hindu institution, we change it to blessings (positive) or cursings (negative). Of course, that means we would have to now refer to "The accursed Airwolf".

Heck let's be really brave. Change it to "Wives".

I think we ought to have karma rankings. Similar to how when you have a given number of posts you become a freshman, sophomore...you should have a karma ranking depending on how much karma you have. Some more creative than myself would have to come up with what the ranks would be, but it would be pretty fun.

You could base it on being reincarnated into animals like the cow being the highest. But if you worry about religious sensitivity you could base it on the Sith and Jedi from Star Wars.
