
Jazz Game in HD

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/04/14 15:53

Apparently the Jazz game tonight will be broadcast again in KJZZ-HD. I missed the first HD broadcast, and I am confused as to how to get the over the air HD broadcast (KJZZ-HD is not available on satellite or cable systems as of yet).

Do I just need to pick up a digital antenna or what?

Any help would be appreciated.

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/14 15:55

Pretty much any antenna, I can walk you through it, it might make a difference where you live though. where do you live sno?

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/04/14 15:55

I live on the lake in West Provo.

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/14 15:58

hmm, that could be tougher to get a signal. I live in west jordan and get crystal clear over the air hd, but I'm a little closer to the source.

My advice would be to try an old pair of bunny ears first (if you don't have one, I'm sure one of your neighbors probably does).

You'll need to hook it up to your tv (just like you would any other tv), then you'll have to go into the settings and let the tv scan for channels. You may have to change the direction the uv loop is pointing in (don't mess with the dipoles they won't make a difference.

If that doesn't work you can try buying an HD specific antenna (I have a Terk that I got from amazon for 30 bucks), but from where you live you might want to go with a roof antenna.

Hope that helps.

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/14 15:59

Also, kjzz is 14.1

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by hypercoug - 2008/04/14 16:01

I have a $7 antenna I bought at best buy, and it pulls in all the local HD channels in HD, no problem.

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/04/14 16:08

Sounds like I should be okay. The previous owner (a 90 year old widow) installed a ginormous analog antenna on the shed that stands about 15 feet higher than my roof. I never took it down and it is still wired into the existing coax structure, so I'll just bypass the Dish receiver tonight.

Karma for the help.

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/14 16:38

snoscythe wrote:

Sounds like I should be okay. The previous owner (a 90 year old widow) installed a ginormous analog antenna on the shed that stands about 15 feet higher than my roof. I never took it down and it is still wired into the existing coax structure, so I'll just bypass the Dish receiver tonight.

Karma for the help.

You should be in great shape, you might have to change the direction the antenna is pointing though

<http://saltlakecityhdtv.com/>

(scroll down for maps)

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/14 17:40

Just out of curiosity, where did you hear that the Jazz game was going to be in HD? (that'd be great if they got HD up and going in time for the playoffs, but I haven't heard anything about it until you mentioned it just barely)

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/04/14 17:55

Hengst wrote:

Just out of curiosity, where did you hear that the Jazz game was going to be in HD? (that'd be great if they got HD up and going in time for the playoffs, but I haven't heard anything about it until you mentioned it just barely)

I was reminded of tonight's broadcast while listening to A-Game this afternoon.

The HD is not up and running non-stop (as far as I understand it). KJZZ just recently got back the bandwidth they had leased out to USDTV. As long as USDTV had possession of that KJZZ bandwidth, KJZZ did not have enough room to broadcast HD over the air. However, with the bankruptcy and eventual dissolution of USDTV, KJZZ now has that bandwidth back, and they are ramping up for HD broadcasts. They have the equipment--they have broadcast a number of Jazz game from Energy Solutions Arena for FSN in HD using in-house equipment. They have access to HD broadcast antennae via the tower they collectively built along with the other local stations. They just couldn't use their own bandwidth until everything was ironed out legally from USDTV's dissolution last year.

Tonight's game will be the second Jazz game broadcast locally in HD--the loss to the Mavericks last week was the first, but I was out of town and unable to capitalize. Supposedly they are trying to iron out all the kinks with a few games now before the playoffs, but I don't know how many playoff games are going to be aired on KJZZ.

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/14 18:12

snoscythe wrote:

Hengst wrote:

Just out of curiosity, where did you hear that the Jazz game was going to be in HD? (that'd be great if they got HD up and going in time for the playoffs, but I haven't heard anything about it until you mentioned it just barely)

I was reminded of tonight's broadcast while listening to A-Game this afternoon.

The HD is not up and running non-stop (as far as I understand it). KJZZ just recently got back the bandwidth they had leased out to USDTV. As long as USDTV had possession of that KJZZ bandwidth, KJZZ did not have enough room to broadcast HD over the air. However, with the bankruptcy and eventual dissolution of USDTV, KJZZ now has that bandwidth back, and they are ramping up for HD broadcasts. They have the equipment--they have broadcast a number of Jazz games from Energy Solutions Arena for FSN in HD using in-house equipment. They have access to HD broadcast antennae via the tower they collectively built along with the other local stations. They just couldn't use their own bandwidth until everything was ironed out legally from USDTV's dissolution last year.

Tonight's game will be the second Jazz game broadcast locally in HD--the loss to the Mavericks last week was the first, but I was out of town and unable to capitalize. Supposedly they are trying to iron out all the kinks with a few games now before the playoffs, but I don't know how many playoff games are going to be aired on KJZZ.

Sweet. I am now officially rooting for the Jazz to stay in the playoffs so I can see more of the western conference in HD. I don't have cable so I won't get any of the TNT games :-(.

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/14 19:19

Question for Jazz fans. I'm a sonics fan, but I live in the Utah area so I know a little bit about what goes on with the jazz, and as I've been watching the game I have a curious question.

Where do you think Morris Almond will fit onto this team? The guy was the scoring leader in the D-league so I've gotta think he has some sort of future in the NBA, seems like he might even be able to contribute next year. Brewer and Miles both seem to be playing well though so there doesn't seem to be much room for another 2 guard. What do you guys think?

=====

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by cougarsincebirth - 2008/04/14 20:37

Hengst wrote:

Question for Jazz fans. I'm a sonics fan, but I live in the Utah area so I know a little bit about what goes on with the jazz, and as I've been watching the game I have a curious question.

Where do you think Morris Almond will fit onto this team? The guy was the scoring leader in the D-league so I've gotta think he has some sort of future in the NBA, seems like he might even be able to contribute next year. Brewer and Miles both seem to be playing well though so there doesn't seem to be much room for another 2 guard. What do you guys think?

My understanding is that this is the last year of C.J.'s contract (<http://hoopshype.com/salaries/utah.htm>). He was a restricted free agent last year, but no one took him and he didn't play in the Rocky Mountain Review, which irked some jazz brass. I'm sure Brewer, Miles, and Almond will battle this summer, and then we'll see how the review goes. If C.J. doesn't show up, they probably won't give him a contract and will let Almond take it. The only problem is that Matt Harpring is getting old, and C.J. plays pretty well at the 3 spot, so they may want to hold on to him for that reason. But the summer will be a big test.

~Trex

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/15 08:30

I'm not so sure, after what Ronnie Brewer has done this season, its going to be hard for anyone to take that job away. He is by far the MOI player, and if he doesn't get it, its a freaking joke. CJ has done decent (had one amazing game) coming off the bench this year and in a few starts due to injury. I don't think Almond will be a starter any time soon, but he could be a pretty decent back up in a couple years

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by cougarsincebirth - 2008/04/15 09:28

harlinestillopen wrote:

I'm not so sure, after what Ronnie Brewer has done this season, its going to be hard for anyone to take that job away. He is by far the MOI player, and if he doesn't get it, its a freaking joke. CJ has done decent (had one amazing game) coming off the bench this year and in a few starts due to injury. I don't think Almond will be a starter any time soon, but he could be a pretty decent back up in a couple years

You misunderstood me. I meant CJ and Almond will be fighting for the backup job. I agree, Brewer will be starting. But if CJ doesn't show heart this summer, Almond will be backup, otherwise, he will just play in the D-League another year.

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by walkair05 - 2008/04/15 10:16

It seems to me the way that Sloan is restricting Miles playing time that he might not be around next year. He started Ronnie Price over him after Miles had started a few games earlier in the year. If Sloan doesn't like you then you are gone. Just like Gireck.

Re:Jazz Game in HD

Posted by declocoug - 2008/04/17 10:49

walkair05 wrote:

It seems to me the way that Sloan is restricting Miles playing time that he might not be around next year. He started Ronnie Price over him after Miles had started a few games earlier in the year. If Sloan doesn't like you then you are gone. Just like Gireck.

Not to mention that price is just the man. One of my favorite jazz players at the moment.

I think that Miles is leaving soon.
