

---

Grit in my craw....

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/04/08 21:15

---

....irritates me--as does this most recent line from ESPN.com's synopsis of tonight's drubbing of the New Orleans Hornets by the Utah Jazz:

ESPN.com wrote:

Paul had a rare off night, finishing with nine assists and only four points on 2-of-11 shooting.

They give the guy a pass, and fail to analyze why Paul might have had an off night.

Chris Paul's season averages: (only ppg and apg as they are most pertinent)

21.5 ppg 11.5 apg

Chris Paul's averages against the Jazz:

12.25 ppg 9.25 apg

This was not "an off night." This was Chris Paul getting outplayed by a better point guard who has negated the great CP3 in 3 out of 4 meetings. I just thought ESPN would give this a bit more thought as the Jazz just took 3 of 4, and one on the road from the team they are likely to see in round 2 of the NBA Tournament.

MVP my 4$$.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by PP3 - 2008/04/09 09:07

---

Easy there snoscythe:laugh: . I agree CP is over-rated. Does any one think the Hornets could take the Lakers in a 7 game series? Actually, if things line up and the Hornets play the Mavericks in the first round, I am not so sure that the Hornets make the second round. The Mavs are going to be a tough first round opponent, for (looks like) the two seed. I think the Lakers can take them, but I don't think that the Hornets could. CP and DW are about the same in total talent in my book, but as far as fitting in with the Jazz, DW fits the system much better than CP would.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/09 09:13

---

It's hard to argue with the best record in the west though. I doubt New Orleans goes far in the playoffs but at least they've been consistent throughout the year. That's not something you can say about the jazz.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/09 11:21

---

snoscythe wrote:

....irritates me--as does this most recent line from ESPN.com's synopsis of tonight's drubbing of the New Orleans Hornets by the Utah Jazz:

ESPN.com wrote:

Paul had a rare off night, finishing with nine assists and only four points on 2-of-11 shooting.

They give the guy a pass, and fail to analyze why Paul might have had an off night.

Chris Paul's season averages: (only ppg and apg as they are most pertinent)

21.5 ppg 11.5 apg

---

Chris Paul's averages against the Jazz:

12.25 ppg 9.25 apg

This was not "an off night." This was Chris Paul getting outplayed by a better point guard who has negated the great CP3 in 3 out of 4 meetings. I just thought ESPN would give this a bit more thought as the Jazz just took 3 of 4, and one on the road from the team they are likely to see in round 2 of the NBA Tournament.

MVP my 4$$.

If I was near you, I'd give you a hug for that! haha, I'm SOOOOOO sick of hearing about how great 3CPO is. Deron Williams has OWNED him in all but 1 game head to head. The thing I hate about Paul's game, he books it into the paint, out of control, then just throws some crap pass at the feet of one of his players. Not a big fan. If he wins MVP, I'm going.... to, uh..... never watch the NBA again! except for Jazz games.

I have a couple of videos for anyone who tries to tell me he's better than Willey

1.
<http://youtube.com/watch?v=42GdfEqCvOU>

2.
<http://youtube.com/watch?v=bM53-Y5Kybc&feature=related>

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Metal Bubba - 2008/04/10 19:59

And Yoot fans are deluded about their basketball program... right. Jazz fans are easily their equals and this thread proves it.

Chris Paul drives the lane out of control and throws a pass at his teammate's feet? Dude, you're an idiot. You don't lead the league with 11.5 assists while turning the ball over only 2.5 times a game by playing the way you describe it. Come on... you're smarter than that. CP3 leads the NBA in assists and steals. His team has the best record in the West. Despite DWill having a 3 inch and 30 pound advantage, CP3 still grabs more rebounds. CP3 gets a lot of love from the media and he deserves every bit of it.

It's no secret that CP3 struggles against DWill. He did in college too. He often struggles against bigger PGs, but he'll find a way to overcome that eventually. I'm sure the Hornets would not want to meet the Jazz in the playoffs.

DWill got a lot of love from the media for what he and the Jazz did in the playoffs last year. He deserved it too. As a CP3 fan, that didn't make me hate DWill or want to scream "over-rated" at the TV. DWill would laugh in the faces of anybody who criticizes CP3 like you guys do, since they're such good friends. Just chill out and enjoy watching both guys play.

Funny how you forgot this CP3s video though:

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=s1FHrtkMMYs>

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/10 21:37

Metal Bubba wrote:
Dude, you're an idiot.

what a great argument. Thank you :)

paul is good, I'll admit it. BUT, HE DOES NOT DESERVE TO WIN MVP. Most of his assists are off of oops, which isn't a bad thing, I'm just sayin, when he drives, he is out of control a lot of the time.

As for MVP, if KG doesn't win it, its a freaking joke! As much as I hate Kobe, I think he'll probably get it, and I think he deserves it. He is yet to win it, and I think that he'll probably get it as a collection for a bunch of years. Then King James comes in a distant 3rd.

---

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Metal Bubba - 2008/04/11 04:28

---

harlinestillopen wrote:
Metal Bubba wrote:
Dude, you're an idiot.

what a great argument. Thank you :)

For the record I meant to say "you're being an idiot"... but I'm not sure that makes it all that much better. ;)

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2008/04/11 05:15

---

harlinestillopen wrote:
Metal Bubba wrote:
Dude, you're an idiot.

what a great argument. Thank you :)

paul is good, I'll admit it. BUT, HE DOES NOT DESERVE TO WIN MVP. Most of his assists are off of oops, which isn't a bad thing, I'm just sayin, when he drives, he is out of control a lot of the time.

As for MVP, if KG doesn't win it, its a freaking joke! As much as I hate Kobe, I think he'll probably get it, and I think he deserves it. He is yet to win it, and I think that he'll probably get it as a collection for a bunch of years. Then King James comes in a distant 3rd.

I'm going to have to agree with Metal bubba. I'm glad the jazz have Williams. But Chris Paul is doing more with less! He should be the mvp. He took a team that didn't make the playoffs and now they have the best record in the west! He makes the people around him better. He's averaging over twenty one points, and over ten assists a game! Look at the people he has around him. Peja Stojakovic, Tyson Chandler, David West, and Pargo. Peja and Chandler were both traded from their old teams because they didn't perform. David West and nobody knew who David West was till the past couple of years when Chris Paul came to town.

Sorry Harline. I'm going to have to respectfully disagree with you. :dry: But I do agree that it should be Garnett should get some very strong consideration! I don't agree with Kobe. He has way more then Paul has. And yet Chris' team has a better overall record. Besides the Jazz I'm really rooting for Kevin Garnett too win the title. He finally has some great players around him. For more then ten years he's had nothing but mediocre NBA players around him! :evil:

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by PP3 - 2008/04/11 06:39

---

Everyone keeps saying Kobe has way more than CP, I don't get it. If they were healthy Kobe would have more than Chris Paul, but Bynum and Gasol have both missed long stretches of the season, He's only had Gasol since February, and even then he has missed games from injury. Without Gasol and Bynum does Kobe really have that much more than Chris Paul? Chandler was borderline of really good before he went to NO. Peja has been a really good player, but obviously not good enough to handle the load himself.

Oh and Kobe has been playing with an injured hand.

---

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by stuckinbig10country - 2008/04/11 08:01

---

If you say CP3 is the best point guard in the league, you might be right. If you say DWill, you might be right. If you say anyone else, you're wrong. The fact that people are talking about these two, and only these two players at that position is phenominal after only 3 years in the league.

Last month DWill had more assists in a month than anyone since John Stockton in 1992.

CP3 has taken a team (basically the same team he had last year, but still) from out of the playoffs to having the best record in the West.

The only reason that the Jazz ever give for picking DWill is the size. Here's some other things that I'm sure factored in. In CP3's last 3 games in college he punched someone in the groin, was suspended, and then no showed in the first round of the NAAs. DWill's last three games he brought his team back from double digits down in 3 minutes to get to the final four, carried his team to the championship game, and then almost single-handedly beat UNC (only lost by 3). That UNC team had 6 players drafted that summer.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/04/11 08:09

---

The age old question is what is an MVP? Is it the player with the best stats? Is it the player who has done the most with the least? Or is it the player who has done the most for the league? In my opinion, it should be the latter as first criteria followed closely by stats then most with least. I would use as tiebreakers stats like shooting percentage from the field and the line and game winners or times when a player has taken the team on their back and willed the team to victory. Having said that, and letting ya'll know I don't follow the NBA too closely other than the Jazz, I would vote for King James as MVP. What is his supporting cast? How many times has he taken over in the 4th to bring them to victory? What is the image he has brought to the league despite the prestige to bring a major attitude and arrogance?

Just my thoughts.
Go Cougs!!!

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2008/04/11 14:42

---

PP3 wrote:

Everyone keeps saying Kobe has way more than CP, I don't get it. If they were healthy Kobe would have more than Chris Paul, but Bynum and Gasol have both missed long stretches of the season, He's only had Gasol since February, and even then he has missed games from injury. Without Gasol and Bynum does Kobe really have that much more than Chris Paul? Chandler was borderline of really good before he went to NO. Peja has been a really good player, but obviously not good enough to handle the load himself.

Oh and Kobe has been playing with an injured hand.

Ok. Kobe has a better supporting cast then LeBron but Kobe in a lot of people's eyes is the "best" player in the world. I'll agree that he most likely has the most talent? But He's a freaking ball hog! If you wanna disagree. Just remember the 81 point game he had two years ago. I think now that Gasol is back. Kobe clearly have a better supporting class. But in my opinion he has more with less then anyone besides LeBron. But the Cavaliers if they were in the west. They wouldn't even have made the playoffs.

Cp3 took a team that won 39 games last year. With virtually the same team. Now they have the best record in the west. It should either be Paul or Garnett.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by harlinestilopen - 2008/04/11 15:41

---

---

a 39 win team that he was on. I disagree with that argument. He was hurt a lot of the season, if I'm remembering correctly, but he was on it, and played 3/4 of the season

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Metal Bubba - 2008/04/11 18:36

---

That was cold blooded to bring up CP3's nut punch. It pissed me off when he did it and I don't condone it. However, a little context does mitigate the crime. It was the last regular season game and it was at in-state rival NC State. From the opening tip there were kids in the student section taunting CP3 with chants about his dead grandfather. For the record, his grandfather was his best friend and had been murdered only 3 years prior. Totally classless by the student section. And then there's the player that got "tapped" in the nads. That was Julius Hodge, a notorious trash talker and instigator. In the days leading up to that game it had been reported in the media that CP3 was playing with an injured left hand. Watch the video and you see Hodge grab CP3s bum hand and then squeeze it with both hands. Again, I don't condone it and it pissed me off royally, but I understand it.

The video doesn't lie: <http://www.extremesportclips.com/video/1140/Chris-Paul-Punches-Julius-Hodge.html>

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Gymcoug318 - 2008/04/12 04:22

---

harlinestillopen wrote:

a 39 win team that he was on. I disagree with that argument. He was hurt a lot of the season, if I'm remembering correctly, but he was on it, and played 3/4 of the season

True. I didn't say he wasn't on that team! I just said they've had a double digit improvement since last year. Even after tonight. Number one in the conference. I don't think the hornets will win the title. Or even get past the second round. But statistically CP3 has had better statistical year then Steve Nash had his two years that he won the MVP.

I'm a jazz fan. But I've been a CP3 fan since he came out of college. Anyways in my opinion. I think it should be Garnett or Chris Paul. But if Kobe takes it I'm going too puke! :X

Ps I'm really excited for the blue-white game tommorow!:lol: Go cougs!

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/14 14:46

---

Found a stat that just builds on why I think DWill is better

Deron Williams has scored 1,523 points, handed out 851 assists and shot .509 from the field this season. He has joined Magic Johnson (1986-87 and 1988-89) and Kevin Johnson (1988-89) as the only players in league history to score 1,500 points, hand out 800 assists and shoot 50 percent from the field in a single season.

http://www.nba.com/statistics/statsllc\_index.html

not sure what anyone can say to try and put down that stat

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by stuckinbig10country - 2008/04/15 11:56

---

Metal Bubba wrote:

That was cold blooded to bring up CP3's nut punch. It pissed me off when he did it and I don't condone it. However, a little context does mitigate the crime. It was the last regular season game and it was at in-state rival NC State. From the opening tip there were kids in the student section taunting CP3 with chants about his dead grandfather. For the record, his grandfather was his best friend and had been murdered only 3 years prior. Totally classless by the student section.

---

And then there's the player that got "tapped" in the nads. That was Julius Hodge, a notorious trash talker and instigator. In the days leading up to that game it had been reported in the media that CP3 was playing with an injured left hand. Watch the video and you see Hodge grab CP3s bum hand and then squeeze it with both hands. Again, I don't condone it and it pissed me off royally, but I understand it.

The video doesn't lie: <http://www.extremesportclips.com/video/1140/Chris-Paul-Punches-Julius-Hodge.html>

I knew that there had to be a back story to it, but I was using it to show additional reasons other than size why the Jazz took Dwill over CP3. I don't think the size issue is all that important, seeing as how CP3 is not much smaller than John Stockton who did fairly well in a Jazz uniform.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Metallicat - 2008/04/15 17:14

---

Metal Bubba wrote:

And Yoot fans are deluded about their basketball program... right. Jazz fans are easily their equals and this thread proves it.

I realize you're a WF homer, but Jazz fans thinking Dwill is better than CP when even you admitted CP struggles against him hardly makes Jazz fans dilusional.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Metal Bubba - 2008/04/15 19:42

---

Metallicat wrote:

Metal Bubba wrote:

And Yoot fans are deluded about their basketball program... right. Jazz fans are easily their equals and this thread proves it.

I realize you're a WF homer, but Jazz fans thinking Dwill is better than CP when even you admitted CP struggles against him hardly makes Jazz fans dilusional.

I wondered if anyone would use my admission that CP3 struggles against DWill as some sort of proof/admission that DWill is better. Struggling against a single player while dominating the rest of the league... hmmm, yeah I'll take that. And besides, I wasn't criticizing anyone for thinking DWill is better. The argument can be made, though it would certainly be an argument most fans outside of SLC would not make. I was criticizing people who were making ridiculous comments about how overrated CP3 is just because they're blindly delusional Jazz fans. BIG difference there pal.

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Metallicat - 2008/04/15 22:11

---

Metal Bubba wrote:

Metallicat wrote:

Metal Bubba wrote:

And Yoot fans are deluded about their basketball program... right. Jazz fans are easily their equals and this thread proves it.

I realize you're a WF homer, but Jazz fans thinking Dwill is better than CP when even you admitted CP struggles against him hardly makes Jazz fans dilusional.

I wondered if anyone would use my admission that CP3 struggles against DWill as some sort of proof/admission that DWill is better. Struggling against a single player while dominating the rest of the league... hmmm, yeah I'll take that. And besides, I wasn't criticizing anyone for thinking DWill is better. The argument can be made, though it would certainly be an argument most fans outside of SLC would not make. I was criticizing people who were making ridiculous comments about how overrated CP3 is just because they're blindly delusional Jazz fans. BIG difference there pal.

---

What I don't get is how people are being "blindly delusional Jazz fans" when even you admit "the argument can be made". If we were to say that Ostertag is the best 5 ever than I can see the "delusional" comment having merit, but when there's a legitimate argument...

=====

Re:Grit in my craw....

Posted by Metal Bubba - 2008/04/16 21:38

---

Metallicat wrote:

Metal Bubba wrote:

Metallicat wrote:

Metal Bubba wrote:

And Yoot fans are deluded about their basketball program... right. Jazz fans are easily their equals and this thread proves it.

I realize you're a WF homer, but Jazz fans thinking Dwill is better than CP when even you admitted CP struggles against him hardly makes Jazz fans dilusional.

I wondered if anyone would use my admission that CP3 struggles against DWill as some sort of proof/admission that DWill is better. Struggling against a single player while dominating the rest of the league... hmmm, yeah I'll take that. And besides, I wasn't criticizing anyone for thinking DWill is better. The argument can be made, though it would certainly be an argument most fans outside of SLC would not make. I was criticizing people who were making ridiculous comments about how overrated CP3 is just because they're blindly delusional Jazz fans. BIG difference there pal.

What I don't get is how people are being "blindly delusional Jazz fans" when even you admit "the argument can be made". If we were to say that Ostertag is the best 5 ever than I can see the "delusional" comment having merit, but when there's a legitimate argument...

blind

3. not characterized or determined by reason or control delusion

3. a false belief or opinion

harlinestillopen wrote:The thing I hate about pauls game, he bookes it into the paint, out of control, then just throws some crap pass at the feet of one of his players.

Those are the comments of a Jazz fan who feels slighted that DWill is not getting as much recognition as CP3. Nothing more. I call that being blindly delusional.

=====