
Time for a countdown!

Posted by TANK - 2008/04/14 18:10

If you are like me and can't wait for the season to start, check out this cool little program. It is a countdown timer for your desktop. It is simple and clean! You can find it here:

<http://www.phantim3.com/download/>

The cool thing about it is you can make your own clock background. I threw a quick one together. Feel free to use it. You will need to change the custom.txt file to read:

```
Times New Roman
18
0 0 255
111 62
153 62
195 62
227 62
```

That way the numbers all line up. It is a good way to count down the days. Here is the simple clock background I threw together.

Just right click and save it in the Program Files\PhanTim3\Skins\Default folder. It needs to be named back.jpg

I hope that makes sense. Any questions just ask.

GO COUGARS!!!!

Ok looks like no one wants to join my countdown party (at least they don't want to admit it). But for you closet countdown users :lol: I made another background for you to use. Find it below:

I downloaded it yesterday tank, it looks great on my desktop. Now all the Y haters in my office will have something else to gripe about. I did have to get rid of the other default back file, and I didn't put the jpg after the new one but it works fine.

Thanks alot for the find. Karma for that.

Go Cougs!!!

Cool! Let me try to post the new one I made. For some reason it didn't show up. You can have different backgrounds just make a new folder in the skins folder and put in your jpg and custom.txt in it.

For this background your custom.txt file should read:

Times New Roman
16
0 0 255
018 30
072 30
153 30
212 30

73 days that's not too far away, but what time of the day will the mtn come on? Midnight or noon?

Good idea, tank, but unfortunately my technological handicap is such that I have NO CHANCE of figuring out how to put that thing on my desktop. Maybe one day! In the meantime, I will just go the "old school" route and make one of those paper-chain things that you use to countdown to Christmas every year...

I hear you Lehi, which is why I usually end up going to Cougar Stats and looking at their countdown. 76 days, 5 hours, 37 minutes...

I guess that means they're off by a little more than 3 hours-about 8,780 hours more.
