
Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by WACoug - 2008/04/21 12:04

Washington starting center (2nd team all Pac-10,Outland Trophy watch list) was hurt during their scrimmage on Friday. The severity has not been released but he was put in an air cast and rode off on a golf cart, doesn't look good. Tough loss considering the center usually makes the blocking assignments.

To be clear, I am not celebrating the injury of a BYU foe. Just keeping track of the teams BYU will be playing and thanking Bronco for not playing starters very much during Spring.

<http://sports.espn.go.com/nfc/news/story?id=3354845>

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by kiwibacon - 2008/04/21 13:18

It would be interesting to see what the injury is and how long he will be out.

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by GolfDiveNCougs - 2008/04/21 14:03

WACoug wrote:

To be clear, I am not celebrating the injury of a BYU foe.You're a better man than I am.:laugh:

Seriously though, we need Washington to get by Oregon without the guy, get their butt handed to them by the Cougars, then get the guy back and LAY waste to the entire Pac-10. Same with UCLA. The Pac-10 champion needs to come down to the two teams we play, so we get some respect off of their success. As soon as the last whistle blows in both of our two games with them, we oughta become HUGE Husky and Bruin fans (funny, now that I think about it, since I did grow up in Alaska) :) Our success this year, unfortunately, lies in large measure with the success of our competitors.

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/21 15:23

I think this is okay news for us. I would rather they pull an Arizona and we beat them and they not do all that great in the pac10 than we lose and they win the pac10.

Although I wouldn't want them to pull an Arizona and we lose to them and they not do too well in the pac10 either! :)

Of course the best senario is that we beat them and UCLA and WA wins the Pac-10...wait I can't cheer for TY...UCLA wins the PAC10. One of the guys that wouldn't put us in the top25 at the end of the year last year. Sour grapes just because we cost him his ND job. Well, guess what Ty? We are going to get you fired from WA too!:P

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/21 15:31

imuakahuku wrote:

I think this is okay news for us. I would rather they pull an Arizona and we beat them and they not do all that great in the pac10 than we lose and they win the pac10.

Although I wouldn't want them to pull an Arizona and we lose to them and they not do too well in the pac10 either! :)

Of course the best senario is that we beat them and UCLA and WA wins the Pac-10...wait I can't cheer for TY...UCLA wins the PAC10. One of the guys that wouldn't put us in the top25 at the end of the year last year. Sour grapes just because we cost him his ND job. Well, guess what Ty? We are going to get you fired from WA too!:P

You'd rather cheer for benedict olsen?

Go Huskies! (after they play BYU of course ;))

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by gordito - 2008/04/21 16:44

There's no way UCLA competes for the PAC-10 title. Their O-line is a mess and their QB's are a big question mark. The reports from their spring practices constantly harp on how ugly the offense looks. The other constant is the "we've got 23 highly-recruited athletes coming in who can help us immediately." I don't think a team that is counting on freshman for help is going very far.
I honestly don't know about Washington.

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by gordito - 2008/04/21 16:46

Another tidbit about UCLA: they've had 4 OL coaches in 5 years. That's not a recipe for success.

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by njcoug - 2008/04/21 16:59

gordito wrote:

Another tidbit about UCLA: they've had 4 OL coaches in 5 years. That's not a recipe for success. I'll have to agree, but only because it's coming from the Colonel and the Colonel knows successful recipes.

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by Cougarbib2 - 2008/04/21 17:55

UCLA and Washington will both be as good as or nearly as good as any other team we play before Bowl season and maybe including Bowl season if we lose 2 or 3 games.

Having said that, I do not expect either of them to contend for the PAC 10 title.

But lets beat them anyway and win all of our other games and see what happens in the end.

Hopefully we won't end up playing Georgia. It would be nice to get Ohio State in a Bowl Game and start to get even with them for some past losses.

Or wouldn't it be a treat to Beat Norm Chow and BO early and Gary Crowton late.

Go Cougs

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by BYUtx - 2008/04/21 17:56

gordito wrote:

There's no way UCLA competes for the PAC-10 title. Their O-line is a mess and their QB's are a big question mark. The reports from their spring practices constantly harp on how ugly the offense looks. The other constant is the "we've got 23 highly-recruited athletes coming in who can help us immediately." I don't think a team that is counting on freshman for help is going very far.
I honestly don't know about Washington.

If I had to compare UCLA's QB's to a punctuation mark, I think I'd say they're more like a colon than a question mark. (At least BO, anyway).

And in response to an earlier post, I don't think cheering for UCLA is cheering for BO at all, considering that he won't be playing much-until Cowan gets injured. And, to be honest, I kind of hope that BO does well-at holding clipboards and sending in signals.

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by cougarfan87 - 2008/04/22 08:01

njcoug wrote:

gordito wrote:

Another tidbit about UCLA: they've had 4 OL coaches in 5 years. That's not a recipe for success.

I'll have to agree, but only because it's coming from the Colonel and the Colonel knows successful recipes.

Nice!:laugh:

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by BoiseBYU - 2008/04/22 09:03

BYUtx wrote:

gordito wrote:

There's no way UCLA competes for the PAC-10 title. Their O-line is a mess and their QB's are a big question mark. The reports from their spring practices constantly harp on how ugly the offense looks. The other constant is the "we've got 23 highly-recruited athletes coming in who can help us immediately." I don't think a team that is counting on freshman for help is going very far.

I honestly don't know about Washington.

If I had to compare UCLA's QB's to a punctuation mark, I think I'd say they're more like a colon than a question mark. (At least BO, anyway).

And in response to an earlier post, I don't think cheering for UCLA is cheering for BO at all, considering that he won't be playing much-until Cowan gets injured. And, to be honest, I kind of hope that BO does well-at holding clipboards and sending in signals.

Can't agree with you there comparing Ben to a colon...more like a semi (still developing) colon in my book....;)

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/22 09:47

If I had to compare UCLA's QB's to a punctuation mark, I think I'd say they're more like a colon than a question mark. (At least BO, anyway).

No need to get anal about it... ;)

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by MajorCougar - 2008/04/22 09:48

BoiseBYU wrote:

BYUtx wrote:

gordito wrote:

There's no way UCLA competes for the PAC-10 title. Their O-line is a mess and their QB's are a big question mark. The reports from their spring practices constantly harp on how ugly the offense looks. The other constant is the "we've got 23 highly-recruited athletes coming in who can help us immediately." I don't think a team that is counting on freshman for help is going very far.

I honestly don't know about Washington.

If I had to compare UCLA's QB's to a punctuation mark, I think I'd say they're more like a colon than a question mark. (At least BO, anyway).

And in response to an earlier post, I don't think cheering for UCLA is cheering for BO at all, considering that he won't be playing much-until Cowan gets injured. And, to be honest, I kind of hope that BO does well-at holding clipboards and sending in signals.

Can't agree with you there comparing Ben to a colon...more like a semi (still developing) colon in my book....;)

I must have been reading this post too fast; I thought you meant the body-part "colon"... :blink: :X

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by MLOdawgs - 2008/04/22 18:25

<http://blog.seattletimes.nwsourc.com/huskyfootball/>

Browse that Huskies blog (Seattle Times) for entries about Garcia, there are several.

Garcia broke his lefranc or whatever, a bone on the bottom of his foot. His Husky career is almost certainly over. They have said the best case scenario is that he could come back for the last game and play a few snaps, but that is a reach.

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by craigscarson - 2008/04/22 18:38

MLOdawgs wrote:

<http://blog.seattletimes.nwsourc.com/huskyfootball/>

Browse that Huskies blog (Seattle Times) for entries about Garcia, there are several.

Garcia broke his lefranc or whatever, a bone on the bottom of his foot. His Husky career is almost certainly over. They have said the best case scenario is that he could come back for the last game and play a few snaps, but that is a reach.

We had 3 "Lisfranc" injuries recently (Cade Cooper, David Tafuna, Aaron Wagner) and it seems that it'll cost you a season or so to heal from it. I've never seen one clinically but there seems to be some misinformation about whether it's just tissue or bone; to be honest offhand I'm not sure. I do know it results in dislocation in weight bearing joints of the feet, but I don't know if there has to be a break for it to be diagnosed 'Lisfranc'

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by kiwibacon - 2008/04/22 18:38

MLOdawgs,

Sorry to hear the outcome for Garcia. Hope for your seasons sake that you have a servicable back up.

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by MLOdawgs - 2008/04/22 19:01

We do have a very talented backup but he hasn't had much playing time yet. He is Matt Sedillo, a red shirt sophomore.

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by gmj81 - 2008/04/22 22:55

craigoscarson wrote:

MLOdawgs wrote:

<http://blog.seattletimes.nwsources.com/huskyfootball/>

Browse that Huskies blog (Seattle Times) for entries about Garcia, there are several.

Garcia broke his lefranc or whatever, a bone on the bottom of his foot. His Husky career is almost certainly over. They have said the best case scenario is that he could come back for the last game and play a few snaps, but that is a reach.

We had 3 "Lisfranc" injuries recently (Cade Cooper, David Tafuna, Aaron Wagner) and it seems that it'll cost you a season or so to heal from it. I've never seen one clinically but there seems to be some misinformation about whether it's just tissue or bone; to be honest offhand I'm not sure. I do know it results in dislocation in weight bearing joints of the feet, but I don't know if there has to be a break for it to be diagnosed 'Lisfranc'

Jadon Wagoner but yeah, and those were all just last year. I think we even had a couple the year prior. For some reason it seems to be an injury that is becoming more and more prevalent. When it happened to Chad Lewis a few years ago, it was practically never heard of. Now it's commonplace for each team to players who've suffered this injury.

=====

Re:Washington Center hurt during scrimmage

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/23 06:43

Hengst wrote:

imuakahuku wrote:

I think this is okay news for us. I would rather they pull an Arizona and we beat them and they not do all that great in the pac10 than we lose and they win the pac10.

Although I wouldn't want them to pull an Arizona and we lose to them and they not do too well in the pac10 either! :)

Of course the best senario is that we beat them and UCLA and WA wins the Pac-10...wait I can't cheer for TY...UCLA wins the PAC10. One of the guys that wouldn't put us in the top25 at the end of the year last year. Sour grapes just because we cost him his ND job. Well, guess what Ty? We are going to get you fired from WA too!:P

You'd rather cheer for benedict olsen?

Go Huskies! (after they play BYU of course ;))

I think comparing Olsen to Arnold is a stretch. Arnold was probably the "best" general that we had during the revolution. I think you give too much credit to Olsen. :lol: