There must needs be an opposite in all things...like Metallica's thread.

"The Entertainer" by Scott Joplin

"She's So High" by Tal Bachman

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=MVKcfwJxa54>

Seems that was all they played in 98 and 99.

For our ward, we had to do a talent with three other couples. We divided the ward into groups and it was a Broadway night talent show. We (our group) were all sitting around and my wife was going to sing Somewhere (she has sung professionally), and I just blurted that after her song we (the guys) should do "I feel pretty". It was pretty funny to see these 40 something guys (one of them the head track coach for akron u) up dancing like the jets and sharks singing "I feel pretty". Shamefull but funny! Were you still around then mcgregor? Maybe you can atest to how bad and excrutiating it was. I was the YM pres so I took a pretty good ribbing for the next few months from the ym and yw. It kinda sucks when your wife sounds like Sarah Brightman and you sound like a frog! :blush:

I heard this at a rodeo one time and it felt out of place.

ANY COUNTRY SONG! I'm so sick of the NBA using country songs for their playoff intros. How many NBA players are there that listen to country music, like 2? Honestly!

I make one exception for the college gameday version of "we're coming to your city" that's actually a cool song.

Otherwise keep country, and the stupid chicken song away from my sporting events!

To take this topic 180 degrees (or as Karl Malone would say - "a full 360") I was listening to the XM decades station this mornig on the way to work and I hear d Janet Jackson's "black cat" (Black Cat)

And had fond memories of the Cougars hoops team coming out to a Black cat cougar growl and series of guitar riffs in the early 90's. I thought was awesome!
