
Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by cougfan1 - 2008/04/24 19:03

Shiloah's other cousin, Malosi, who signed with UNLV and is on a mission has been offered by Bronco. Hopefully we can get him so that we will be one step closer to getting Manti.

<http://byu.scout.com/2/749416.html>

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by WACoug - 2008/04/24 19:25

cougfan1 wrote:

Shiloah's other cousin, Malosi, who signed with UNLV and is on a mission has been offered by Bronco. Hopefully we can get him so that we will be one step closer to getting Manti.

<http://byu.scout.com/2/749416.html>

Sweet. From his Dad's comments it sounds like he is leaning toward BYU. I like how it said that all three of them are very close like brothers and that they played Pop Warner together. If we get Shiloah and probably Malosi, that goes a long way towards getting Manti, IMO.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by K9Cougar - 2008/04/24 19:45

This is a curious thing. I thought I remembered Bronco saying that he didn't recruit guys on a mission. I am sure this was a very difficult thing for everyone. I guess it is similar to the Brandon Bradley case.

I'm sure Mike Sanford is going to love this if Te'o decides to changes schools. He has already been quoted saying how unfar it is to be playing older more mature RMs at BYU.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by gladejo - 2008/04/24 20:12

I doesn't matter what Mike Sanford thinks - he will be gone after next year.:lol:

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/24 20:27

K9Cougar wrote:

This is a curious thing. I thought I remembered Bronco saying that he didn't recruit guys on a mission. I am sure this was a very difficult thing for everyone. I guess it is similar to the Brandon Bradley case.

I'm sure Mike Sanford is going to love this if Te'o decides to changes schools. He has already been quoted saying how unfar it is to be playing older more mature RMs at BYU.

You're assuming that Bronco initiated the contact, not Te'o.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by WACoug - 2008/04/24 21:10

K9Cougar wrote:

This is a curious thing. I thought I remembered Bronco saying that he didn't recruit guys on a mission. I am sure this was a very difficult thing for everyone. I guess it is similar to the Brandon Bradley case.

I'm sure Mike Sanford is going to love this if Te'o decides to changes schools. He has already been quoted saying how unfar it is to be playing older more mature RMs at BYU.

In the article is says that Malosi wasn't really on the radar until Bronco visited Shiloah. Malosi had lived there and Shiloah's dad showed Bronco the highlights of Malosi's senior season which no one else really had. It also said how concerned Bronco was with distracting him on his mission. Malosi's parents were going to wait to tell him about the offer but Shiloah spilled the beans. I think Bronco did the right thing. Malosi is by his own admittance a BYU guy. He is one who slipped under the radar but will be a good recruit in his own right, not to mention the effect he will have on Manti.

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by cscoug - 2008/04/24 21:21

WACoug wrote:

K9Cougar wrote:

This is a curious thing. I thought I remembered Bronco saying that he didn't recruit guys on a mission. I am sure this was a very difficult thing for everyone. I guess it is similar to the Brandon Bradley case.

I'm sure Mike Sanford is going to love this if Te'o decides to changes schools. He has already been quoted saying how unfar it is to be playing older more mature RMs at BYU.

In the article is says that Malosi wasn't really on the radar until Bronco visited Shiloah. Malosi had lived there and Shiloah's dad showed Bronco the highlights of Malosi's senior season which no one else really had. It also said how concerned Bronco was with distracting him on his mission. Malosi's parents were going to wait to tell him about the offer but Shiloah spilled the beans. I think Bronco did the right thing. Malosi is by his own admittance a BYU guy. He is one who slipped under the radar but will be a good recruit in his own right, not to mention the effect he will have on Manti.

I got the impression that it was Malosi's dad, Ephraim, that is really interested in the Y. Maybe he facilitated the offer by Bronco?

Also, it sounds like Ephraim is the real driving force for Malosi possibly leaving UNLV to play in Provo.

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Cougfan84 - 2008/04/24 21:34

I'm predicting a Te'o quartet! Shiloah is already a coug, I believe Malosi will decide to be a cougar on his next P-day email to his folks, Manti is close to his fam and will decide to come the Y but I think he will go through the whole recruiting process and commit to the Y at an all american game (Have we ever had a player put on a BYU hat at an all-american game announcement ceremony?) And then I believe Levi Te'o will be given preferred walk-on status and possibly earn a scholarship down the road because though he may be small and need a little more speed in the 40, with the potential i've seen on his highlight film and the pedigree he comes from, as a preferred walk-on he would present little to no risk at all and definitely worth it...

I may be wrong on, but I think we will have the 4 headed monster of the Te'o cousins donning the Blue and White!

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by cougfan1 - 2008/04/24 22:53

His YouTube highlights:

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=HZsd7tbU0-M>

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2008/04/25 04:02

Would be nice to see the 3 Te'os on the same team but in all honesty, everybody in Hawaii knows that Manti Te'o will be playing for Pete Carroll and the USC Trojans. Hey but who knows he might be a cougar after all?

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by JUSTBYU - 2008/04/25 06:47

Malosi looks pretty good on this video. Hopefully he comes to BYU and brings along with him the real prize.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by stuckinbig10country - 2008/04/25 06:59

This sounds very similar to the Brandon Bradley deal. Brandon's mom contacted Bronco while Brandon was on his mission. She wanted him to go to BYU, even though he originally showed no interest. At that time Bronco made an offer to his mom, site unseen.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/25 08:41

Island Pipeline wrote:

Would be nice to see the 3 Te'os on the same team but in all honesty, everybody in Hawaii knows that Manti Te'o will be playing for Pete Carroll and the USC Trojans. Hey but who knows he might be a cougar after all?

Like you know!

I know they did not like (more like hate) the UNLV lifestyle/atmosphere, and compare USC to UNLV in lifestyle/atmosphere. I would be VERY surprised to see Manti go to USC. Just because Manti is at Punahou, doesn't mean he thinks he is "better" than his cousins that went to Kahuku and that he is too good for BYU.

But this is all about Malosi. BYU will get a gem if he accepts. I am stoked for Malosi. I was disappointed when he didn't get offered from BYU originally. He is the biggest reason that rest of the clan is as well known as they are. He was one of the featured players on ESPN's Timeless about Kahuku football. He even had a paper published by either the Honolulu Advertiser or Star-Bulletin I don't remember which. He is the oldest of the football cousins and has been a stalwart example of dedication, devotion, and values to the rest of the clan. Malosi is everything you can ask for in a leader and is in the exact mold of those players that Bronco is looking for.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by j2b03 - 2008/04/25 08:49

This could go the opposite way too. Manti may say, you know I want to unique, I don't just want to be another Teo I want to be myself and not affiliated with anyone. But who knows...

Also, if he does sign with BYU I HOPE he doesn't do the whole TV thing, that is so ANTI-Bronco. Just fax it in like everybody else.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Cougfan84 - 2008/04/25 09:10

I just watched those Malosi highlights and now I hope he does accept the scholarship offer for when he comes back! Hes a great athlete, but the leadership he showed in that clip is that of a champion and that really stood out to me. He is a true warrior leading his team to battle, I'll take a team full of guys with heart like his any day. All of the Te'o boys seem to have a lot of heart and passion about the game. I hope they come to BYU and represent us, but no matter what, I wish those guys the best. They all seem like 100% class acts. I have nothin' but respect for them and they have definitely made their families proud!

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Cougfan84 - 2008/04/25 09:16

j2b03 wrote:

This could go the opposite way too. Manti may say, you know I want to unique, I don't just want to be another Teo I want to be myself and not affiliated with anyone. But who knows...

Also, if he does sign with BYU I HOPE he doesn't do the whole TV thing, that is so ANTI-Bronco. Just fax it in like everybody else.

I know you say that it is anti-Bronco, but my only thinking with that is there is some major national exposure for the All-American games! I'm sure bronco wouldn't mind landing Manti Te'o any way he could get him. If I was a recruit sitting at home and see a phenomenal LB and top 10 player in the nation put on a BYU hat at the All-American game then I would give BYU a serious look... Yet again my opinion, but don't you think if he had a captive national audience watching the All-American game and he put on the Y hat, that it would be good national exposure for BYU? I tend to think so...

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/25 09:31

Cougfan84 wrote:

j2b03 wrote:

This could go the opposite way too. Manti may say, you know I want to unique, I don't just want to be another Teo I want to be myself and not affiliated with anyone. But who knows...

Also, if he does sign with BYU I HOPE he doesn't do the whole TV thing, that is so ANTI-Bronco. Just fax it in like everybody else.

I know you say that it is anti-Bronco, but my only thinking with that is there is some major national exposure for the All-American games! I'm sure bronco wouldn't mind landing Manti Te'o any way he could get him. If I was a recruit sitting at home and see a phenomenal LB and top 10 player in the nation put on a BYU hat at the All-American game then I would give BYU a serious look... Yet again my opinion, but don't you think if he had a captive national audience watching the All-American game and he put on the Y hat, that it would be good national exposure for BYU? I tend to think so...

Did you really watch that game when you were in high school though? I didn't know it existed when I was in high school . . . I really don't think it has that much of an effect. I'd rather have him commit early.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by gordito - 2008/04/25 10:40

Hengst wrote:

Cougfan84 wrote:

j2b03 wrote:

This could go the opposite way too. Manti may say, you know I want to unique, I don't just want to be another Teo I want to be myself and not affiliated with anyone. But who knows...

Also, if he does sign with BYU I HOPE he doesn't do the whole TV thing, that is so ANTI-Bronco. Just fax it in like everybody else.

I know you say that it is anti-Bronco, but my only thinking with that is there is some major national exposure for the All-American games! I'm sure bronco wouldn't mind landing Manti Te'o any way he could get him. If I was a recruit sitting at home and see a phenomenal LB and top 10 player in the nation put on a BYU hat at the All-American game then I would give BYU a serious look... Yet again my opinion, but don't you think if he had a captive national audience watching the All-American game and he put on the Y hat, that it would be good national exposure for BYU? I tend to think so...

Did you really watch that game when you were in high school though? I didn't know it existed when I was in high school . . . I really don't think it has that much of an effect. I'd rather have him commit early.

You certainly watch that game if you are a recruited athlete or even if you are a college football fan interested in recruiting battles. IMO (and I know nothing about Manti) this season and the level of success will play a huge role in his decision.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Cougfan84 - 2008/04/25 10:52

lol maybe i'm just crazy but I have watched the Army All-American Game for quite a while. And this year I saw the Under Armour All-American game. I love high school football and then watching them get recruited into the college ranks is fun too. And then tomorrow is like my christmas, the NFL draft. Seeing some of those players come up through the ranks to finally get a chance at the big time.

Typical people may think I have no life, but for me, Football is life!

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by K9Cougar - 2008/04/25 14:22

Cougfan84 wrote:

I just watched those Malosi highlights and now I hope he does accept the scholarship offer for when he comes back! Hes a great athlete, but the leadership he showed in that clip is that of a champion and that really stood out to me. He is a true warrior leading his team to battle, I'll take a team full of guys with heart like his any day. All of the Te'o boys seem to have a lot of heart and passion about the game. I hope they come to BYU and represent us, but no matter what, I wish those guys the best. They all seem like 100% class acts. I have nothin' but respect for them and they have definitely made their families proud!

It was an amazing highlight video. It seems like everytime he touched the ball, it was a 60 yard touchdown, blowing by everyone. Either he is that good-reggie bush-good, or the competition was bad, or the times didn't game plan for him. 1000 yards, just in the playoffs and championship game? WOW!

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by splitbamboo - 2008/04/25 14:49

K9Cougar wrote:

It was an amazing highlight video. It seems like everytime he touched the ball, it was a 60 yard touchdown, blowing by everyone.

Maybe that's why they call it a "highlight" video...

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Isola - 2008/04/25 15:25

I wonder how Kehl's draft status and early NFL performance will affect Manti's decision. If Kehl can create some buzz on draft day and in his first NFL season, then maybe it will show that BYU can still produce stand out linebackers. Of course we won't have as many NFL LBs as USC, but the more the better. We had Rob Morris until an injury ended his time in Indy, Poppinga in Green Bay and next year maybe Kehl can work his way into a starting job or significant playing time.

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by ttexastim - 2008/04/25 15:44

So Bronco wants this young man to not honor his commitment to UNLV? Seems to be pretty hypocritical since he seems to remind his recruits that they need to be honest and keep their commitments to him. I also find it interesting that he offers right after it has been 18 months since he committed to UNVL (keeping in line with the recruiting rules).

Keep in mind ... I don't care that he offered. Bronco is doing what every Head Coach at every other school does. The reason it bothers me is because of what Bronco preaches. It just seems like he's expecting people to do as he says, not what he does. If you expect players to keep their commitment, then you shouldn't try to egg players into breaking them.

I know ... I'm a stupid "yewt" and all that crap.

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by ttexastim - 2008/04/25 16:04

Okay ... I need some of you who are more knowledgeable to educate me.

Does a commitment end after 18 months? If someone signs a letter with Bronco, does that commitment end after 18 months? If so, then please disregard my previous message.

was under the impression that once you signed with Bronco, he expected you to play for him (period). I want to be fair to him though, so can someone enlighten me?

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by kiwibacon - 2008/04/25 16:07

ttexastim wrote:

So Bronco wants this young man to not honor his commitment to UNLV? Seems to be pretty hypocritical since he seems to remind his recruits that they need to be honest and keep their commitments to him. I also find it interesting that he offers right after it has been 18 months since he committed to UNVL (keeping in line with the recruiting rules).

Keep in mind ... I don't care that he offered. Bronco is doing what every Head Coach at every other school does. The reason it bothers me is because of what Bronco preaches. It just seems like he's expecting people to do as he says, not what he does. If you expect players to keep their commitment, then you shouldn't try to egg players into breaking them.

I know ... I'm a stupid "yewt" and all that crap....so when I tell my 4 year old not to go into the street but then do it myself, does that then make me a hypocrite?...you have to look at the circumstances...What you say in one situation is not the same for another situation. I am actually disappointed in you on this one, stuttering t-tim.

I believe in this case anyways the parents approached BYU. BYU did not approach him while he was on his mission.

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by oompabluepaw05 - 2008/04/25 16:11

You sound like my little brother when he was 5 trying to justify his comments by adding "I know you are just going to call me stupid for saying this" at the end of his statement. Well we dont have to say it, you just did! You can think whatever you want, we are coming to find out more and more this week you Texans are never wrong. :dry: The fact is simple HIS DAD CONTACTED BRONCO! If it was the other way around I could see where you are coming from. If you really want to get huffy about a coach being hypocritical you should start with a program that is near and dear to you. Straining at a mote because you are blinded by a beam dosnt make the situation for you any better!

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by K9Cougar - 2008/04/25 16:18

I guess that fact that it was really only 4-5 games right at the end of the senior season makes it more impressive than other videos I have seen. It seems like every game in the future for him will be a "highlight"

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Slugger - 2008/04/25 16:29

K9Cougar wrote:

This is a curious thing. I thought I remembered Bronco saying that he didn't recruit guys on a mission. I am sure this was a very difficult thing for everyone. I guess it is similar to the Brandon Bradley case.

I'm sure Mike Sanford is going to love this if Te'o decides to changes schools. He has already been quoted saying how unfar it is to be playing older more mature RMs at BYU.

Interesting point, but keep in mind that Bronco has been very open about the fact that he is learning and growing into his head coaching position and he likely retains the right to change or alter some of his practices and philosophies if it is in the best interest of the school, the program or the individual. He admits when he does something less than effectively and promptly changes it. If he feels it is not a spiritual hinderance to contact a young man, and it could serve valuable for everyone involved (except the departing school of course ;)) then he will do it.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by K9Cougar - 2008/04/25 16:32

It is kind of interesting to look at the time frame here as well. If I read the story correctly, I believe that Malosi returns in May which means that he was offered back in December before anyone else signed in May. I think he would be considered in this year's recruiting class. I tried to keep track of all the scholarship offers. It is just fun to see these guys come out of the woodwork.

Speaking about having scholarships come available, does anyone know if Chambers got his ACT scores back yet. I thought he had already qualified, but it looks like he is still waiting to see if he raised his score one more point

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by BoiseBYU - 2008/04/25 16:34

ttexastim wrote:

So Bronco wants this young man to not honor his commitment to UNLV? Seems to be pretty hypocritical since he seems to remind his recruits that they need to be honest and keep their commitments to him. I also find it interesting that he offers right after it has been 18 months since he committed to UNVL (keeping in line with the recruiting rules).

Keep in mind ... I don't care that he offered. Bronco is doing what every Head Coach at every other school does. The reason it bothers me is because of what Bronco preaches. It just seems like he's expecting people to do as he says, not what he does. If you expect players to keep their commitment, then you shouldn't try to egg players into breaking them.

I know ... I'm a stupid "yewt" and all that crap.

After 18 months, a player is not bound to any one school. So in that sense there is no more commitment. You might say, "well UNLV kept a scholarship open or made plans for the kid, so to leave now is not nice," to which I say, if a player, 18 months away from the game and the school, with greater insight and whatever thinks a different scene or school better fits his goals etc, all power to him....BYU has often released kids who thought they could do better elsewhere....I was bummed when Olson left, but I at least felt he should go where he wants because in the end if you are not where you want no one benefits from that....In short, your question did not come across to me as coming from a "stupid 'yewt,'" but from a whinny one....

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Sage - 2008/04/25 18:29

BoiseBYU wrote:

ttexastim wrote:

So Bronco wants this young man to not honor his commitment to UNLV? Seems to be pretty hypocritical since he seems to remind his recruits that they need to be honest and keep their commitments to him. I also find it interesting that he offers right after it has been 18 months since he committed to UNLV (keeping in line with the recruiting rules).

Keep in mind ... I don't care that he offered. Bronco is doing what every Head Coach at every other school does. The reason it bothers me is because of what Bronco preaches. It just seems like he's expecting people to do as he says, not what he does. If you expect players to keep their commitment, then you shouldn't try to egg players into breaking them.

I know ... I'm a stupid "yewt" and all that crap.

....In short, your question did not come across to me as coming from a "stupid 'yewt,'" but from a whinny one....

I think this question from an alien seems legitimate. TT, you make a good point, but I think that if someone approaches Bronco after the 18 months, then that is not breaking one's word. That is very likely the reason the ncaa has that in there.

Hey guys, give TT a break. As outlandish his loyalties are, and I think being a Ute fan is very out there, he speaks with respect and should be treated with such. Just my opinion. The question was not stupid, just the loyalty.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2008/04/26 01:51

imuakahuku wrote:

Like you know!

I know they did not like (more like hate) the UNLV lifestyle/atmosphere, and compare USC to UNLV in lifestyle/atmosphere. I would be VERY surprised to see Manti go to USC. Just because Manti is at Punahou, doesn't mean he thinks he is "better" than his cousins that went to Kahuku and that he is too good for BYU.

But this is all about Malosi. BYU will get a gem if he accepts. I am stoked for Malosi. I was disappointed when he didn't get offered from BYU originally. He is the biggest reason that rest of the clan is as well known as they are. He was one of the featured players on ESPN's Timeless about Kahuku football. He even had a paper published by either the Honolulu Advertiser or Star-Bulletin I don't remember which. He is the oldest of the football cousins and has been a stalwart example of dedication, devotion, and values to the rest of the clan. Malosi is everything you can ask for in a leader and is in the exact mold of those players that Bronco is looking for.

Listen here " MR EX NANILOA LOOP RESIDENT!" don't try and tell me If "I know?" You better believe I know! Just because you went to school with the Te'os doesn't mean squat. Obviously you are "talking bubbles" cause nobody said anything about Manti thinking he's better then his cousins because he goes to Punahou. Manti Te'o is one of the most respectful and humblest athlete. This is why combined with his great talent that every school is recruiting him HARD! Oh and about your statement " IS MANTI TO GOOD FOR BYU?" If Pete Carroll can go back on his word and grant Manti the chance to serve a mission and said no to Sione Havili? YOU BETTER BELIEVE IT!

Maybe Malosi and his parents didn't like the UNLV lifestyle but that doesn't mean Manti and his parents feel the same. It's all about what's best for their son and because USC will grant him his chance to serve his 2 and is one of the top school in football every year aaaaand he will recieve a grerat education MANTI TE'O WILL SIGN WITH USC no matter where his cousins play. If they wanted to all play together why didn't Manti stay and play at Kahuku?:blink:

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2008/04/26 02:03

Isola wrote:

I wonder how Kehl's draft status and early NFL performance will affect Manti's decision. If Kehl can create some buzz on draft day and in his first NFL season, then maybe it will show that BYU can still produce stand out linebackers. Of course we won't have as many NFL LBs as USC, but the more the better. We had Rob Morris until an injury ended his time in Indy, Poppinga in Green Bay and next year maybe Kehl can work his way into a starting job or significant playing time.

USC linebackers Ray Maualuga and Kaluka Maiava both of samoan decent and from Hawaii have been talking to Manti so I let you figure out the rest.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/04/26 02:47

ttexastim wrote:

Okay ... I need some of you who are more knowledgeable to educate me.

Does a commitment end after 18 months? If someone signs a letter with Bronco, does that commitment end after 18 months? If so, then please disregard my previous message.

was under the impression that once you signed with Bronco, he expected you to play for him (period). I want to be fair to him though, so can someone enlighten me?

The NCAA standard LOI has an expiration of 18 months if the athlete is not enrolled in the school. The school is not obligated to hold his scholarship at that point, nor is the athlete bound to play for that school.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/04/26 02:50

Island Pipeline wrote:

imuakahuku wrote:

Like you know!

I know they did not like (more like hate) the UNLV lifestyle/atmosphere, and compare USC to UNLV in lifestyle/atmosphere. I would be VERY surprised to see Manti go to USC. Just because Manti is at Punahou, doesn't mean he thinks he is "better" than his cousins that went to Kahuku and that he is too good for BYU.

But this is all about Malosi. BYU will get a gem if he accepts. I am stoked for Malosi. I was disappointed when he didn't get offered from BYU originally. He is the biggest reason that rest of the clan is as well known as they are. He was one of the featured players on ESPN's Timeless about Kahuku football. He even had a paper published by either the Honolulu Advertiser or Star-Bulletin I don't remember which. He is the oldest of the football cousins and has been a stalwart example of dedication, devotion, and values to the rest of the clan. Malosi is everything you can ask for in a leader and is in the exact mold of those players that Bronco is looking for.

Listen here "MR EX NANILOA LOOP RESIDENT!" don't try and tell me If "I know?" You better believe I know! Just because you went to school with the Te'os doesn't mean squat. Obviously you are "talking bubbles" cause nobody said anything about Manti thinking he's better then his cousins because he goes to Punahou. Manti Te'o is one of the most respectful and humblest athlete. This is why combined with his great talent that every school is recruiting him HARD! Oh and about your statement "IS MANTI TO GOOD FOR BYU?" If Pete Carroll can go back on his word and grant Manti the chance to serve a mission and said no to Sione Havili? YOU BETTER BELIEVE IT!

Maybe Malosi and his parents didn't like the UNLV lifestyle but that doesn't mean Manti and his parents feel the same. It's all about what's best for their son and because USC will grant him his chance to serve his 2 and is one of the top school in football every year aaaaand he will recieve a grerat education MANTI TE'O WILL SIGN WITH USC no matter where his cousins play. If they wanted to all play together why didn't Manti stay and play at Kahuku?:blink:

I sense some bitterness that Manti is considering BYU and not the Hawaiian Hypeline Warriors. Get over it bra.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/26 08:57

Island Pipeline wrote:

imuakahuku wrote:

Like you know!

I know they did not like (more like hate) the UNLV lifestyle/atmosphere, and compare USC to UNLV in lifestyle/atmosphere. I would be VERY surprised to see Manti go to USC. Just because Manti is at Punahou, doesn't mean he thinks he is "better" than his cousins that went to Kahuku and that he is too good for BYU.

But this is all about Malosi. BYU will get a gem if he accepts. I am stoked for Malosi. I was disappointed when he didn't get offered from BYU originally. He is the biggest reason that rest of the clan is as well known as they are. He was one of the featured players on ESPN's Timeless about Kahuku football. He even had a paper published by either the Honolulu Advertiser or Star-Bulletin I don't remember which. He is the oldest of the football cousins and has been a stalwart example of dedication, devotion, and values to the rest of the clan. Malosi is everything you can ask for in a leader and is in the exact mold of those players that Bronco is looking for.

Listen here "MR EX NANILOA LOOP RESIDENT!" don't try and tell me If "I know?" You better believe I know! Just because you went to school with the Te'os doesn't mean squat. Obviously you are "talking bubbles" cause nobody said anything about Manti thinking he's better then his cousins because he goes to Punahou. Manti Te'o is one of the most respectful and humblest athlete. This is why combined with his great talent that every school is recruiting him HARD! Oh and about your statement "IS MANTI TO GOOD FOR BYU?" If Pete Carroll can go back on his word and grant Manti the chance to serve a mission and said no to Sione Havili? YOU BETTER BELIEVE IT!

Maybe Malosi and his parents didn't like the UNLV lifestyle but that doesn't mean Manti and his parents feel the same. It's all about what's best for their son and because USC will grant him his chance to serve his 2 and is one of the top school in football every year aaaaand he will recieve a grerat education MANTI TE'O WILL SIGN WITH USC no matter where his cousins play. If they wanted to all play together why didn't Manti stay and play at Kahuku?:blink:

So I'm probably going to sound pretty ignorant with this one, but that's why I'm asking it.

So I've heard rumblings that samoans and tongans tend to not like each other much, with many of BYU's players being tongan do you think that would have an affect on recruiting samoan players? Or is that just kind of a silly thing to think?

I really don't know a lot about either culture, I'm just curious.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by cougfan1 - 2008/04/26 09:08

Island Pipeline wrote:

Isola wrote:

I wonder how Kehl's draft status and early NFL performance will affect Manti's decision. If Kehl can create some buzz on draft day and in his first NFL season, then maybe it will show that BYU can still produce stand out linebackers. Of course we won't have as many NFL LBs as USC, but the more the better. We had Rob Morris until an injury ended his time in Indy, Poppinga in Green Bay and next year maybe Kehl can work his way into a starting job or significant playing time.

USC linebackers Ray Maualuga and Kaluka Maiava both of samoan decent and from Hawaii have been talking to Manti so I let you figure out the rest.

Maualuga and Maiava didn't serve missions, which I think for some athletes who are LDS and considering USC might have a negative affect. I know Te'o has been the first given the option to serve a mission while playing for USC, but I wonder if there is still would some worries about how his position with the team and coaches would stand for the 2 years while he's gone...plus the pressure before his mission to stay and not go.

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by CWC - 2008/04/26 12:13

USC, "grerat education"? That's not what I've been hearing. Good Program? Yes. Good Location? Yes. Great education? aaahhh....

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/26 13:33

CWC wrote:

USC, "grerat education"? That's not what I've been hearing. Good Program? Yes. Good Location? Yes. Great education? aaahhh....

USC is one of the top schools in the country, much more highly regarded than BYU . . .

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/04/26 14:16

Hengst wrote:

CWC wrote:

USC, "grerat education"? That's not what I've been hearing. Good Program? Yes. Good Location? Yes. Great education? aaahhh....

USC is one of the top schools in the country, much more highly regarded than BYU . . .

USC really elevated their academics over the past quarter century. They are a very fine university and anyone going there will have an excellent education. Those who say otherwise have no idea what they are talking about.

They are ranked #27 in US News & World Report's academic rankings. On par with UCLA, Michigan and North Carolina.

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by rackem - 2008/04/26 14:19

Hengst wrote:

CWC wrote:

USC, "grerat education"? That's not what I've been hearing. Good Program? Yes. Good Location? Yes. Great education? aaahhh....

USC is one of the top schools in the country, much more highly regarded than BYU . . .

Although BYU is Ranked #1 in "Yield" at 79%, meaning If a school has a high yield (a large proportion of those admitted enroll), it means that the school is most likely very popular with a top reputation and that the students are highly motivated to go there. BYU is Ranked 79th over all in Best Schools to attend. where as USC is Ranked 27th over all although it's yield is around 32%. For what it's worth...

http://www.usnews.com/usnews/edu/college/rankings/brief/yield_natudoc_brief.php

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/04/26 14:19

CWC wrote:

USC, "grerat education"? That's not what I've been hearing. Good Program? Yes. Good Location? Yes. Great education? aaahhh....

Actually, their location sucks. It's in the heart of one of the worst gang zones in Los Angeles.

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by kiwibacon - 2008/04/26 18:18

Their campus (USC) is in a VERY BAD location.

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/26 19:35

ttexastim wrote:

Okay ... I need some of you who are more knowledgeable to educate me.

Does a commitment end after 18 months? If someone signs a letter with Bronco, does that commitment end after 18 months? If so, then please disregard my previous message.

was under the impression that once you signed with Bronco, he expected you to play for him (period). I want to be fair to him though, so can someone enlighten me?

I didn't think you could be enlightened. :lol:

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by WACoug - 2008/04/26 20:33

ttexastim wrote:

Okay ... I need some of you who are more knowledgeable to educate me.

so can someone enlighten me?

No problem ttexastim, here it comes. The Yewts suck :side: , and BYU rules :evil:. It really is that simple. I'm proud of you for realizing that you were heading down the wrong path and having the guts and humility to ask for help.

ps I can't believe I missed this one for so long. ;)

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/26 20:39

Island Pipeline wrote:

imuakahuku wrote:

Like you know!

I know they did not like (more like hate) the UNLV lifestyle/atmosphere, and compare USC to UNLV in lifestyle/atmosphere. I would be VERY surprised to see Manti go to USC. Just because Manti is at Punahou, doesn't mean he thinks he is "better" than his cousins that went to Kahuku and that he is too good for BYU.

But this is all about Malosi. BYU will get a gem if he accepts. I am stoked for Malosi. I was disappointed when he didn't get offered from BYU originally. He is the biggest reason that rest of the clan is as well known as they are. He was one of the featured players on ESPN's Timeless about Kahuku football. He even had a paper published by either the Honolulu Advertiser or Star-Bulletin I don't remember which. He is the oldest of the football cousins and has been a stalwart example of dedication, devotion, and values to the rest of the clan. Malosi is everything you can ask for in a leader and is in the exact mold of those players that Bronco is looking for.

Listen here " MR EX NANILOA LOOP RESIDENT!" don't try and tell me If "I know?" You better believe I know! Just because you went to school with the Te'os doesn't mean squat. Obviously you are "talking bubbles" cause nobody said anything about Manti thinking he's better then his cousins because he goes to Punahou. Manti Te'o is one of the most respectful and humblest athlete. This is why combined with his great talent that every school is recruiting him HARD! Oh and about your statement " IS MANTI TO GOOD FOR BYU?" If Pete Carroll can go back on his word and grant Manti the chance to serve a mission and said no to Sione Havili? YOU BETTER BELIEVE IT!

Maybe Malosi and his parents didn't like the UNLV lifestyle but that doesn't mean Manti and his parents feel the same. It's all about what's best for their son and because USC will grant him his chance to serve his 2 and is one of the top school in football every year aaaaand he will recieve a grerat education MANTI TE'O WILL SIGN WITH USC no matter where his cousins play. If they wanted to all play together why didn't Manti stay and play at Kahuku?:blink:

So what you related? You still didn't say how you know. As for the "bubbles" you insinuated that he is so caught up in himself that USC is where he will go because it would be beneath him otherwise. First, he doesn't have a big head. But if he did, his dad and mom would have deflated it a long time ago. What you fail to understand is that just because USC offers a scholarship to a Samoan/Hawaiian it doesn't mean that is where he is going automatically. Pete boy is a good salesman but I think Manti can see through the smoke. Like you said, "If Pete Carroll can go back on his word". I also think you don't give enough credit to the other experiences that BYU offers. They will weigh heavily on him as well. As for playing with his cousin's, I will take the words from his mouth rather than from your keyboard. He said he wants to play with all his cousins and so that will be a deciding factor. As for Kahuku, I love the school and I bleed RED RAIDER blood, but if you compare the advantages of Punahou to Kahuku (education wise) it is a no brainer. But on the flip side, if you think about it, if he was so caught up in getting the best D-1 offers, why would he leave Kahuku? Punahou is nothing compared to Kahuku when it comes to putting players into D-1 schools and then into the NFL. So then why choose USC over BYU for football when he already showed that he is more concerned about other things than just playing football? I think saying that HE IS GOING TO USC is still a bit premature. Until he makes a verbal or his dad or uncles tell me otherwise, I will say the Y has a great chance.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/26 21:03

rackem wrote:

Hengst wrote:

CWC wrote:

USC, "grerat education"? That's not what I've been hearing. Good Program? Yes. Good Location? Yes. Great education? aaahhh....

USC is one of the top schools in the country, much more highly regarded than BYU . . .

Although BYU is Ranked #1 in "Yield" at 79%, meaning If a school has a high yield (a large proportion of those admitted enroll), it means that the school is most likely very popular with a top reputation and that the students are highly motivated to go there. BYU is Ranked 79th over all in Best Schools to attend. where as USC is Ranked 27th over all although it's yield is around 32%. For what it's worth...

http://www.usnews.com/usnews/edu/college/rankings/brief/yield_natudoc_brief.php

Wow! At #79, we're tied with the Banana Slugs of UC @ Santa Cruz. Unbelievable.

=====

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2008/04/27 07:18

imuakahuku wrote:

So what you related? You still didn't say how you know. As for the "bubbles" you insinuated that he is so caught up in himself that USC is where he will go because it would be beneath him otherwise. First, he doesn't have a big head. But if he did, his dad and mom would have deflated it a long time ago. What you fail to understand is that just because USC offers a scholarship to a Samoan/Hawaiian it doesn't mean that is where he is going automatically. Pete boy is a good salesman but I think Manti can see through the smoke. Like you said, "If Pete Carroll can go back on his word". I also think you don't give enough credit to the other experiences that BYU offers. They will weigh heavily on him as well. As for playing with his cousin's, I will take the words from his mouth rather than from your keyboard. He said he wants to play with all his cousins and so that will be a deciding factor. As for Kahuku, I love the school and I bleed RED RAIDER blood, but if you compare the advantages of Punahou to Kahuku (education wise) it is a no brainer. But on the flip side, if you think about it, if he was so caught up in getting the best D-1 offers, why would he leave Kahuku? Punahou is nothing compared to Kahuku when it comes to putting players into D-1 schools and then into the NFL. So then why choose USC over BYU for football when he already showed that he is more concerned about other things than just playing football? I think saying that HE IS GOING TO USC is still a bit premature. Until he makes a verbal or his dad or uncles tell me otherwise, I will say the Y has a great chance.

No I'm Not Related So Don't Act Like You Are.

First of all, tell me where I said he is so caught up with himself? Unless stated outta my own mouth please don't make accusations. I simply stated that he is a Humble & respectful individual so unless your definition of humble and respectful differs from the rest of the world you probbaly need to take your Kahuku education and turn it in for a Punahou one. Whether you talk to his Uncles, dad, or even if Manti says he wants to play with his cousins, just know that this is all a "FRONT."

I cover High school football on every island and I see and hear the happs of Hawaii football yet you who only lived hear what 6 yrs think you know the scoops just because you talk to his uncles. Second of all, percentage wise how many polynesian players can you think of that turned down a scholarship from USC to play elsewhere or even BYU as a matter of fact? what does BYU have that he can't get at USC? and please don't tell me the church. I also had many friends who played at BYU and said that if they were to do it again they would've thought twice about picking BYU so what experiences are you talking about?

Pete Carroll has been honest to all the local players that he has recruited. Everybody from Maualuga to Havili has had tremendous amount of playing time if that's your concern but if your talking about changing his mind about his mission? no ah ah it ain't happening Pete Boy will let him serve his 2. Pete Boy knows the repercussions that he'd face if he went back on his word to a recruit.

Comparing BYU to USC is like comparing Southern Utah University to Florida, Apples to Oranges, Night to Day. Manti knows that he will serve his mission and graduate but if he wants to play in the NFL and learn from the best then USC is where he needs to go. And when it comes to The Army All American game when he has to make that annoucement and puts on that hat this is what you will probably hear, "I MANTI TE'O WILL BE PLAYING FOR COACH PETE CARROLL AND THE TROJANS OF USC !"

Then you'll know that when he was talking about playing with his cousins he probably meant for a flag football league or something li dat?

BY THE WAY CAN YOU TELL ME THE NAME OF THE "CLOWN" WHO REPRESENTS McDONALDS?

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by BYUtx - 2008/04/27 09:05

Island Pipeline wrote:

BY THE WAY CAN YOU TELL ME THE NAME OF THE "CLOWN" WHO REPRESENTS McDONALDS?

Ronald McDonald, right? Funny you should mention McDonald's, considering that's where Colt Brennan will end up this year without an NFL offer or a college degree. Lucky for him, he won't have any moral struggles when he checks the "No" on the line that asks him if he has a criminal record on the 1-page application.

As long as the 15-yr old assistant manager that does the hiring didn't catch the sad excuse for a performance in the Sugar Bowl (because, if he did, he would likely doubt Colt's ability to stay cool under pressue-and we all know that those 11:45 highschool student rushes can be quite demanding), Colt is set to do well at the Golden Arches.

I can see it now: "Congratulations, Colt, you're the newest member of the McDonald's team. Now go shave and try to come up with a good nickname for your tag-your's is a little weak. Plus, we don't want customers to know who you are-they'll be (justifiably) afraid that you'll drop their food just like you repeatedly dropped the football against a team that actually had a full compliment of scholarships and understood why a team needs a defense."

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by craigoscarson - 2008/04/27 09:40

BYUtx wrote:

Island Pipeline wrote:

BY THE WAY CAN YOU TELL ME THE NAME OF THE "CLOWN" WHO REPRESENTS McDONALDS?

Ronald McDonald, right? Funny you should mention McDonald's, considering that's where Colt Brennan will end up this year without an NFL offer or a college degree. Lucky for him, he won't have any moral struggles when he checks the "No" on the line that asks him if he has a criminal record on the 1-page application.

As long as the 15-yr old assistant manager that does the hiring didn't catch the sad excuse for a performance in the Sugar Bowl (because, if he did, he would likely doubt Colt's ability to stay cool under pressure-and we all know that those 11:45 highschool student rushes can be quite demanding), Colt is set to do well at the Golden Arches.

I can see it now: "Congratulations, Colt, you're the newest member of the McDonald's team. Now go shave and try to come up with a good nickname for your tag-your's is a little weak. Plus, we don't want customers to know who you are-they'll be (justifiably) afraid that you'll drop their food just like you repeatedly dropped the football against a team that actually had a full compliment of scholarships and understood why a team needs a defense."

"Oh and Colt, please refrain from following women into the bathroom..... Get back to making the filet o fish."

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/04/27 12:06

Island Pipeline wrote:

Comparing BYU to USC is like comparing Southern Utah University to Florida,

If you really knew football you'd never make such an asinine comparison. Florida and USC are comparable programs. BYU is a top 15 program. SUU isn't even an FBS program. Whatever credibility you claim was destroyed with that inane comparison.

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/27 20:11

Island Pipeline wrote:

No I'm Not Related So Don't Act Like You Are.

First of all, tell me where I said he is so caught up with himself? Unless stated outta my own mouth please don't make accusations. I simply stated that he is a Humble & respectful individual so unless your definition of humble and respectful differs from the rest of the world you probbaly need to take your Kahuku education and turn it in for a Punahou one. Whether you talk to his Uncles, dad, or even if Manti says he wants to play with his cousins, just know that this is all a "FRONT."

I cover High school football on every island and I see and hear the happs of Hawaii football yet you who only lived hear what 6 yrs think you know the scoops just because you talk to his uncles. Second of all, percentage wise how many polynesian players can you think of that turned down a scholarship from USC to play elsewhere or even BYU as a matter of fact? what does BYU have that he can't get at USC? and please don't tell me the church. I also had many friends who played at BYU and said that if they were to do it again they would've thought twice about picking BYU so what experiences are you talking about?

Pete Carroll has been honest to all the local players that he has recruited. Everybody from Maualuga to Havili has had tremendous amount of playing time if that's your concern but if your talking about changing his mind about his mission?

no ah ah it ain't happening Pete Boy will let him serve his 2. Pete Boy knows the repercussions that he'd face if he went back on his word to a recruit.

Comparing BYU to USC is like comparing Southern Utah University to Florida, Apples to Oranges, Night to Day. Manti knows that he will serve his mission and graduate but if he wants to play in the NFL and learn from the best then USC is where he needs to go. And when it comes to The Army All American game when he has to make that announcement and puts on that hat this is what you will probably hear, "I MANTI TE'O WILL BE PLAYING FOR COACH PETE CARROLL AND THE TROJANS OF USC !"

Then you'll know that when he was talking about playing with his cousins he probably meant for a flag football league or something li dat?

BY THE WAY CAN YOU TELL ME THE NAME OF THE "CLOWN" WHO REPRESENTS McDONALDS?

No, but I can tell who the "BIG MAC" is...

So you say he is humble and respectful then you say he is putting on a front? Hmm... My simple Kahuku heducasion was not so bat. I'll point out where you implied it. When you wrote "everyone in Hawaii knows" you implied that it was obvious that if Carroll says come to USC that means you are so good that there is no way you would settle for BYU. The problem is that players don't settle for BYU. Many go there because there is no other school like it in college football. It is a unique experience and no matter what Petie does it will never have as big a spiritual impact as BYU. Yes I do say the church. Don't discount how important the church is to Mormon athletes. Years ago a player like Stanley and Iona would not have even been thought to give ANY consideration to playing at BYU. Now it makes them sick when trying to decide. And there is always a first so why not Manti? As for your friends that went to BYU and say they would go somewhere else, did they even see the field? Were they there when Bronco was there? And I find it hard to believe it was "many" friends unless many means two maybe three. If it was many tell me who. I will ask them. I know most of the poly's or their families that have played at BYU and I can ask them.

As for my time in hawaii, try about 20 years not six. At least my Kahuku ed allows me to count. BTW I am pretty close to the Te'o family. My son just got to choose his baseball jersey and guess what number he picked- #2. They have told me some things that I won't post because they are family. At the same time I refuse to butt in with Manti's decision and I am sure not going to say a thing when they tell me what he decides.

I also get the MCDonald's comment. You think you know a lot about me but a name doesn't give you the man behind it. I was a son in many Samoan, Hawaiian, and Tongan families and the Tapusoa's still call me the ugly Samoan. A term I hold near and dear to my heart. I understand the cultures because I lived them. Not because I watched them or read about them. That is why I still think Manti may choose BYU over USC. But you keep up with the rumors and I'll just wait for Manti to say for himself.

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2008/04/28 04:30

imuakahuku wrote:

I was a son in many Samoan, Hawaiian, and Tongan families and the Tapusoa's still call me the ugly Samoan. A term I hold near and dear to my heart. I understand the cultures because I lived them. Not because I watched them or read about them. That is why I still think Manti may choose BYU over USC. But you keep up with the rumors and I'll just wait for Manti to say for himself.

WOW! I better not mess with you cause you're a "TAPUSOA!" or maybe a TE'O! and you know what, I really do know who you're whether you know it or not R_ _ _ _ _ ! So just chill cause unless you live in Hawaii you don't know a "DANG THING" homeboy!

ANGRY SAMOAN? ha ha ha you remind me of ULIULI79! :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: I LIVED THE CULTURE?:laugh: :laugh: TALO STEVENS!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: IMUA KAHUKU!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: ITS ITS ITS SUPPOSE TO BE IMUA KAMEHAMEHA!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: MANTI TO BYU!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/28 08:04

Island Pipeline wrote:

imuakahuku wrote:

I was a son in many Samoan, Hawaiian, and Tongan families and the Tapusoa's still call me the ugly Samoan. A term I hold near and dear to my heart. I understand the cultures because I lived them. Not because I watched them or read about them. That is why I still think Manti may choose BYU over USC. But you keep up with the rumors and I'll just wait for Manti to say for himself.

WOW! I better not mess with you cause you're a "TAPUSOA!" or maybe a TE'O! and you know what, I really do know who you're whether you know it or not R_____! So just chill cause unless you live in Hawaii you don't know a "DANG THING" homeboy!

ANGRY SAMOAN? ha ha ha you remind me of ULIULI79! :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: I LIVED THE CULTURE?:laugh: :laugh: TALO STEVENS!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: IMUA KAHUKU!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: ITS ITS ITS SUPPOSE TO BE IMUA KAMEHAMEHA!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: MANTI TO BYU!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Do you even know what Imua means? Imua Hawai'i, Imua Pirates (c/o Uncle Doug), Imua Kahuku, Imua BYU. :dry: I know you know who I am. I got the MAC ref. But you evidently don't know much about me since you think I was only there for six years. I still get some of the haps thats going on there. I am the only lolo walking the mainland from my family. I prefer to stay silent and wait for the proverbial horse to talk for himself. I may speculate but I don't make bold claims without any proof. I'm careful about word in the street because it isn't all it's cracked up to be. When I was there last, word on the street was that Foodland was trying to put IGA out of business. :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: BTW it is "UGLY Samoan" not "angry Samoan". :blush:

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by WACoug - 2008/04/28 08:18

Island Pipeline wrote:

imuakahuku wrote:

I was a son in many Samoan, Hawaiian, and Tongan families and the Tapusoa's still call me the ugly Samoan. A term I hold near and dear to my heart. I understand the cultures because I lived them. Not because I watched them or read about them. That is why I still think Manti may choose BYU over USC. But you keep up with the rumors and I'll just wait for Manti to say for himself.

WOW! I better not mess with you cause you're a "TAPUSOA!" or maybe a TE'O! and you know what, I really do know who you're whether you know it or not R_____! So just chill cause unless you live in Hawaii you don't know a "DANG THING" homeboy!

ANGRY SAMOAN? ha ha ha you remind me of ULIULI79! :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: I LIVED THE CULTURE?:laugh: :laugh: TALO STEVENS!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: IMUA KAHUKU!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: ITS ITS ITS SUPPOSE TO BE IMUA KAMEHAMEHA!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: MANTI TO BYU!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

I might as well say this to the wall, but here goes anyway. Island Pipeline, I don't know Poly culture. I've never been to Hawaii. For someone who is so proud of his/her culture, you are not really doing your culture any favors by coming on here and being a a-hole. Imuakahuku has been respectful and you been the opposite. Is your attitude and behavior really how you want people to think of Islanders?

=====

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by Island Pipeline - 2008/04/28 12:09

WACoug wrote:

Imuakahuku has been respectful and you been the opposite. Is your attitude and behavior really how you want people to think of Islanders?

IMUAKAHUKU RESPECTFUL?:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: I plainly made a comment on how nice it would be to see the 3 TE'O cousins playing together at BYU and he comes on and says, "LIKE YOU KNOW?" And since when do you people care about us ISLANDERS?:unsure:

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by Mars - 2008/04/28 12:29

Island Pipeline wrote:

And since when do you people care about us ISLANDERS?

Only when we watch you fill your stadium with thrown trash, beat up women from visiting teams in the stands, lose to Georgia in your program's biggest game ever by about 80 points, lose your head coach to the 8th-best football team in Texas, or recruit another in a long list of criminals thrown out of a real school for scumtastic behavior.

:laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/28 12:57

Island Pipeline wrote:

WACoug wrote:

Imuakahuku has been respectful and you been the opposite. Is your attitude and behavior really how you want people to think of Islanders?

IMUAKAHUKU RESPECTFUL?:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: I plainly made a comment on how nice it would be to see the 3 TE'O cousins playing together at BYU and he comes on and says, "LIKE YOU KNOW?" And since when do you people care about us ISLANDERS?:unsure:

"LIKE YOU KNOW" the three words that impart disrespect.

I think you are being too sensitive. You still have never answered HOW you know. I guess it's just KNOWN. A big secret that only the people in the islands know and those on the mainland have no clue. :dry:

I gave you my reasons as to why I think he may choose BYU and you just retort that he will go to USC without any real facts. The best you provide is "how many poly's have said no thanks to Pete" or he left Kahuku to play for Punahou and maybe he meant that he would play flag football with his cousins not college".

Also, did I call you a clown or disparage your education or educational institution?

What about you? What if you had an offer from BYU and one from Hawaii which would you choose? And then throw Stanford in the mix.

And what do you mean by "you people"?

Re:Another Te\o has been offered.

Posted by craigocarson - 2008/04/28 13:10

Island Pipeline wrote:

WACoug wrote:

Imuakahuku has been respectful and you been the opposite. Is your attitude and behavior really how you want people to think of Islanders?

IMUAKAHUKU RESPECTFUL?:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: I plainly made a comment on how nice it would be to see the 3 TE'O cousins playing together at BYU and he comes on and says, "LIKE YOU KNOW?" And since when do you people care about us ISLANDERS?:unsure:

Answer: When it benefits BYU football (kind of obvious) :lol:

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by Polycougar - 2008/04/28 15:22

Island Pipeline wrote:

WACoug wrote:

Imuakahuku has been respectful and you been the opposite. Is your attitude and behavior really how you want people to think of Islanders?

IMUAKAHUKU RESPECTFUL?:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: I plainly made a comment on how nice it would be to see the 3 TE'O cousins playing together at BYU and he comes on and says, "LIKE YOU KNOW?" And since when do you people care about us ISLANDERS?:unsure:

Hi... I'm a Cougar fan... and I care about the ISLANDERS.

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by BOID - 2008/04/28 16:25

imuakahuku, I like what you're saying. I've seen your posts for a year or more, and you've always been thoughtful and level headed. So I believe you.

I'm not polynesian myself, but I love their culture. My brother served his mission in Tonga, and we had his tongan friends around the house for a while afterwards. I warms my heart when I hear that samoans, tongans, and hawaiians love BYU. Good luck to Manti.

Re:Another Te'o has been offered.

Posted by rackem - 2008/04/28 19:40

Conosticator wrote:

rackem wrote:

Hengst wrote:

CWC wrote:

USC, "grerat education"? That's not what I've been hearing. Good Program? Yes. Good Location? Yes. Great education? aaahhh....

USC is one of the top schools in the country, much more highly regarded than BYU . . .

Although BYU is Ranked #1 in "Yield" at 79%, meaning If a school has a high yield (a large proportion of those admitted enroll), it means that the school is most likely very popular with a top reputation and that the students are highly motivated to go there. BYU is Ranked 79th over all in Best Schools to attend. where as USC is Ranked 27th over all although it's yield is around 32%. For what it's worth...

http://www.usnews.com/usnews/edu/college/rankings/brief/yield_natudoc_brief.php

Wow! At #79, we're tied with the Banana Slugs of UC @ Santa Cruz. Unbelievable.

Have you been to Santa Cruz? GREAT ROLLER-COASTER

<http://www.jibjab.com/view/125065> http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/DipperAscent_tn_ani.gif

