
Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by BoiseBYU - 2008/04/29 12:00

For so long, Barry Bonds has stood at the top of his games. His number one ranking has gone on for so long, it is hard to imagine a time when it was anything different. Of course, I speak of his standing as number one in the Bottom Five--people's edition. But times they are a changing and so it is time to crown a new leader. Of course you may have other nominees! Here is the Bottom Five's picks:

1. Roger Clemens--went toe to toe with Bonds in steroid denials. Roger the Dodger surpasses Bonds on the strength of his relationship with a country singer that started, platonically, according to Clemens' lawyer, when she was 15 years old. I guess all those growth hormones Clemens paid for his wife count as lost money? Wow
2. Michael Vick--doggone but I had about forgotten the dude....but then the Falcons drafted Ryan number 3....
3. Pacman Jones--Dallas Cowboys traded for Pacman to diffuse attention on Romo-Jessica, no wait T. Owens, no wait...
4. Barry Bonds--drops to number four because the silver thread in the black tapestry here is that not one team has opted to hire him...yet
5. Isaiah Thomas--great player; lousy coach, manager, etc. The one thing he really is good at is hanging on for longer than ANYONE thought possible....

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by jaga97 - 2008/04/29 12:12

He may not be as bad as that bottom five, but Carmelo Anthony has been in the headlines for all the wrong reasons. A DUI right before the playoffs, a lousy playoff performance, and calling your teammates quitters is not far off from the Kobe Bryant low point of horrible teammate and accused rapist.

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by penncougar - 2008/04/29 12:41

jaga97 wrote:

He may not be as bad as that bottom five, but Carmelo Anthony has been in the headlines for all the wrong reasons. A DUI right before the playoffs, a lousy playoff performance, and calling your teammates quitters is not far off from the Kobe Bryant low point of horrible teammate and accused rapist.

Not to mention sucker punching someone during an NBA basketball game, just to turn and run away like a scared Biotch. That is one of the top five highlights on the all time pussy atheletes list

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/04/29 12:48

BoiseBYU wrote:

3. Pacman Jones--Dallas Cowboys traded for Pacman to diffuse attention on Romo-Jessica, no wait T. Owens, no wait...

Careful, as much as I really hate Jerry Jones, I still really love the Dallas Cowboys! Fortunately Al Davis is still around so we Dallas fans aren't faced with having the worst owner in the NFL.

But to the Pacman Jones signing, until I see otherwise I am going to chalk that up to Jerry just doing his good citizen attempt to help reform a troubled soul. By "chalk up" I mean rationalize why you would want to take someone with a horrid past because you thought you could get something for practically nothing! ;)

Go Cougs!!!

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/29 13:12

2. Michael Vick--doggone but I had about forgotten the dude....but then the Falcons drafted Ryan number 3....

"doggone" - You got that right... :laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/29 13:13

Wait till T.O finds out you left him off the list. Man you're in trouble... ;)

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by Real.Men.Wear.Blue - 2008/04/29 14:12

Marion Jones has to a close runner up. After years of denials, her gold medals are stripped because of doping. To make matters worse, because she cheated, the 3 other innocent members of the 400 meter relay team had to forfeit their medals as well (after losing an appeal to the IOC). Cheaters never win.

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by jhw5 - 2008/04/29 14:14

I know this is usually sports-related, but you did say people-edition (not clarifying what kinds of people):

Miley Cyrus - no young woman is looked up to and idolized by more young people, and then she starts her Britney Spears/Christina Aguilerra phase before hitting 16.

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by jhw5 - 2008/04/29 14:15

Real.Men.Wear.Blue wrote:

Marion Jones has to a close runner up. After years of denials, her gold medals are stripped because of doping. To make matters worse, because she cheated, the 3 other innocent members of the 400 meter relay team had to forfeit their medals as well (after losing an appeal to the IOC). Cheaters never win.

Don't forget her tearful plead/appeal to avoid jail because she needed to take care of her sons...

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by penn cougar - 2008/04/29 14:27

To add to the Clemens nomination.

What kind of husband, when being questioned by CONGRESS!! not only lies about taking HGH, but then blames his wife for his exposure to HGH. The guy freaking blamed it on his wife and her obsessions.

Not just "no, I didn't do it" but "no I didn't do it, my wife did it"

Pathedic. I hope he does jail time.

I'm almost more ok with Michael Vick than I am Roger Clemens. At least Vick apologized, gave a heart felt statement, and is doing his time like a man. Clemens just whines and blames his problems on his wife. She is probably the reason he felt compelled to bang a 15 year old Mindy McCready too.

=====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by treck - 2008/04/29 14:34

1. Rick Majerus
2. Urban Myer
3. Ron McBride
4. Jerry Pimm
5. Greg Marsden

:P

=====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by Beaveroug - 2008/04/29 14:43

I think that ole Iron Mike Tyson should get mentioned in there somewhere. I mean he did ripped off someones ear with his teeth.

oh, and probably OJ. He at least should get a look.

=====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by craigscarson - 2008/04/29 14:55

ammoncougar1 wrote:

BoiseBYU wrote:

3. Pacman Jones--Dallas Cowboys traded for Pacman to diffuse attention on Romo-Jessica, no wait T. Owens, no wait...

Careful, as much as I really hate Jerry Jones, I still really love the Dallas Cowboys! Fortunately Al Davis is still around so we Dallas fans aren't faced with having the worst owner in the NFL.

But to the Pacman Jones signing, until I see otherwise I am going to chalk that up to Jerry just doing his good citizen attempt to help reform a troubled soul. By "chalk up" I mean rationalize why you would want to take someone with a horrid past because you thought you could get something for practically nothing! ;)

Go Cougs!!!

I dont' think Jerry Jones is close to the worst owner in the NFL. At least he wins. Ask a KC Chiefs (or Jets, Or Bills, or 49ers, or Texans) fan if he'd like to have Jerry as their owner. He's abrasive and is willing to take on a trouble maker to win, but the true test of a good owner is happy fans and Cowboys fans are not unhappy.

Life in general:

1. Hillary Clinton
2. Mike Huckabee
3. Al Sharpton and Jesse Jackson
4. George Bush
5. Bud Selig

6. Anyone that profits off celebrity journalism

In relation to college sports:

1. Miles Brand and the BCS
2. Bobby Knight (good riddance, you're a horrible example to kids)
3. Mike Belloti and Phil Knight (Oregon is the epitome' of Pac 10 snobbery)
4. Patsy T. Mink (aka title 9)
5. Dick Vitale (sorry, I was a fan 15 years ago, your act is old)

=====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/29 15:39

Beavercoug wrote:

I think that ole Iron Mike Tyson should get mentioned in there somewhere. I mean he did ripped off someones ear with his teeth.

oh, and probably OJ. He at least should get a look.

We're givin' OJ the "white glove" treatment.

=====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by BoiseBYU - 2008/04/29 16:31

Conosticator wrote:

Beavercoug wrote:

I think that ole Iron Mike Tyson should get mentioned in there somewhere. I mean he did ripped off someones ear with his teeth.

oh, and probably OJ. He at least should get a look.

We're givin' OJ the "white glove" treatment.

Good extra suggestions by all...speaking of OJ, what's the difference between OJ and John Elway? Whereas OJ was caught in a slow white Bronco, Elway WAS a slow white Bronco....:laugh:

=====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/29 22:45

craigoscarson wrote:

ammoncougar1 wrote:

BoiseBYU wrote:

3. Pacman Jones--Dallas Cowboys traded for Pacman to diffuse attention on Romo-Jessica, no wait T. Owens, no wait...

Careful, as much as I really hate Jerry Jones, I still really love the Dallas Cowboys! Fortunately Al Davis is still around so we Dallas fans aren't faced with having the worst owner in the NFL.

But to the Pacman Jones signing, until I see otherwise I am going to chalk that up to Jerry just doing his good citizen attempt to help reform a troubled soul. By "chalk up" I mean rationalize why you would want to take someone with a horrid past because you thought you could get something for practically nothing! ;)

Go Cougs!!!

I dont' think Jerry Jones is close to the worst owner in the NFL. At least he wins. Ask a KC Chiefs (or Jets, Or Bills, or 49ers, or Texans) fan if he'd like to have Jerry as their owner. He's abrasive and is willing to take on a trouble maker to win, but the true test of a good owner is happy fans and Cowboys fans are not unhappy.

Life in general:

1. Hillary Clinton
2. Mike Huckabee
3. Al Sharpton and Jesse Jackson
4. George Bush
5. Bud Selig

6. Anyone that profits off celebrity journalism

In relation to college sports:

1. Miles Brand and the BCS
2. Bobby Knight (good riddance, you're a horrible example to kids)
3. Mike Belloti and Phil Knight (Oregon is the epitome' of Pac 10 snobbery)
4. Patsy T. Mink (aka title 9)
5. Dick Vitale (sorry, I was a fan 15 years ago, your act is old)

I would have to say out this way Art "meet me on the tarmac" Model is a bad word.

=====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by Mars - 2008/04/30 04:01

New names to add to a good list:

1. Tracy McGrady (crying, excuses, forgetting opponents' names, disappearing in the 4th quarter of playoff games)
 2. Barack Obama's Preacher (Hates White People)
 3. Kobe Bryant (still a rapist... waiting for next week to take the Jazz out on a "friendly date")
 4. Barack Obama's Wife (Hates America)
 5. Vlade Divac (Original King of the NBA Floppers Movement)
 6. Barack Hussein (Hates Media Exposure of who he really is)
 7. Andre Kirilinko (eh, whiner has gotten a free pass lately)
 8. Paula Abdul (worthless)
 9. Allen Iverson (ugly tattoos)
- =====

Re:Bottom Five--people edition

Posted by Yndian - 2008/04/30 07:13

#1: David Stern/Stu Jackson.

This is from the Boston Herald:

According to league spokesman Mark Broussard, the NBA will hand out no suspensions as a result of the altercation that took place between Celtics forward Kevin Garnett and Hawks center Zaza Pachulia during Game 4. Celtics center Kendrick Perkins and Hawks forward Marvin Williams faced possible league suspensions for leaving the bench during the matter, in which Garnett and Pachulia had to be separated.

...

In last year's playoffs, the NBA came under great scrutiny for suspending Phoenix forward Amare Stoudemire, in particular, for Game 5 of the Western Conference semifinals. The series was tied at 2, and the San Antonio Spurs went on to win Games 5 and 6 en route to the league title.

When the league suspended Diaw and Stoudemire last year, Stu Jackson talked about how rules are rules and they have to enforce them. And while I didn't like it, I could accept it.

That is, until later in the year, when the NBA discovered that virtually all their referees gamble (which is against the rules). So rules are rules and the league has to punish all the refs, right? No. They changed the rules and let all the refs off the hook.

And now this Celtics/Hawks incident happens at a game both Stern and Jackson attended in person!!! And nothing happens!

:angry: :angry: :angry: :angry:

Bull. The Suns are like the Rodney Dangerfield of the NBA. Fan favorites and All-Stars and MVPs aplenty, but they still can't get any respect, from the league or the officials.

=====