

---

Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by bdhcougar - 2008/04/28 08:39

---

Looks like another Urban snub will provide Chambers with the motivation he really needs:

Coach Meyer told me I wasn't fast enough to play football at Florida," Chambers said. "He tried to be nice about it, but he told me straight up I wasn't good enough to play for him. It really surprised me when he said it. I thought, 'OK. That's fine. I'm going to show you.' "

Chambers has used Meyer's snub, along with other slights, as motivation to turn in strong performances in football, basketball and track and field this year. He earned a scholarship to play football at BYU, where he plans to walk on to the track and basketball teams, but he is still hungry for more evidence Meyer was wrong.

He is among dozens of athletes who will try to prove themselves today at the Class 1A state track and field championships and Saturday at the 2A meet at Showalter Field in Winter Park.

If you want to read the rest of the article it's here:

<http://www.orlandosentinel.com/community/news/winterpark/orl-hscenter2508apr25,0,2128560.story>

Hopefully Urban will continue to not be able to keep his mouth shut and in turn help us get more great recruits. So I just wanted to say "Thanks" Urban - we'll take him. <http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

=====

Re:Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by BoiseBYU - 2008/04/28 08:50

---

<http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

Coach Urban Meyer shows off the test he developed and uses to see if his players are to up to snuff--it is the "rub-the-head-with-one-hand-and-rub-the-chest-with-the-other-hand-at-the-same-time" test...."It has been a real challenge for many of our players, but I like the progress we are making," Meyer said

=====

Re:Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by texacalicoougar - 2008/04/28 08:59

---

BoiseBYU wrote:

<http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

Coach Urban Meyer shows off the test he developed and uses to see if his players are to up to snuff--it is the "rub-the-head-with-one-hand-and-rub-the-chest-with-the-other-hand-at-the-same-time" test...."It has been a real challenge for many of our players, but I like the progress we are making," Meyer said

I laughed out loud and disrupted my whole class, thanks for the laugh on a Monday.

=====

Re:Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/28 09:31

---

texacalicoougar wrote:

BoiseBYU wrote:

<http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

Coach Urban Meyer shows off the test he developed and uses to see if his players are to up to snuff--it is the "rub-the-head-with-one-hand-and-rub-the-chest-with-the-other-hand-at-the-same-time" test...."It has been a real challenge for many of our players, but I like the progress we are making," Meyer said

---

I laughed out loud and disrupted my whole class, thanks for the laugh on a Monday.

Actually this is the WR qualifying test. Those that flunk are give the DB test instead... to see if they can bend over and put both hands on their head at the same time - in preparation for what to do when the opposing QB completes a TD pass.

Sometimes players flunk both tests. When that happens Urban makes them assistant coaches... ;)

---

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/04/28 09:37

<http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

So did someone just ask him for a donation and he is pretending that he can't find his wallet? Or is he trying to find a lighter to light a cig for one of his HS recruits?

---

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by cougarfan87 - 2008/04/28 09:59

BoiseBYU wrote:

<http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

Coach Urban Meyer shows off the test he developed and uses to see if his players are to up to snuff--it is the "rub-the-head-with-one-hand-and-rub-the-chest-with-the-other-hand-at-the-same-time" test.... "It has been a real challenge for many of our players, but I like the progress we are making," Meyer said

Geez, Boise. Take it from a Gator alum. Its the "pat-your-head-and-rub-your-tummy-at-the-same-time" test. Rubbing both takes no coordination at all. ;)

---

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by j2b03 - 2008/04/28 10:18

I heard that he is having a campus wide competition for students and if they can do this for 5 minutes without messing up they get a full-ride scholy. No one on the team can do it nor can any of the students. :ohmy:

---

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by BoiseBYU - 2008/04/28 11:25

cougarfan87 wrote:

BoiseBYU wrote:

<http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

Coach Urban Meyer shows off the test he developed and uses to see if his players are to up to snuff--it is the "rub-the-head-with-one-hand-and-rub-the-chest-with-the-other-hand-at-the-same-time" test.... "It has been a real challenge for many of our players, but I like the progress we are making," Meyer said

Geez, Boise. Take it from a Gator alum. Its the "pat-your-head-and-rub-your-tummy-at-the-same-time" test. Rubbing both takes no coordination at all. ;)

---

My bad....but if that is the test, Urban flunks, unless he is an alien with his stomach in the upper left quadrant of his body...:)

=====

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by craigocarson - 2008/04/28 11:45

---

Do we have to at least consider the possibility that Chambers isn't fast enough to play at Florida though?

I'm glad he has the motivation to prove Urban wrong (and guys like Jerry Rice weren't 4.3 guys either) but considering Urbans win at all costs mentality if there was enough about Chambers for him to want him, don't you think he'd have pursued him a little more?

I doubt we'll really know for a while, but at this point I'd say the verdict is still out.

=====

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by BoiseBYU - 2008/04/28 12:16

---

BoiseBYU wrote:

<http://www.cougarblue.com/images/fbfiles/images/Meyer.jpg>

Coach Urban Meyer shows off the test he developed and uses to see if his players are up to snuff--it is the "rub-the-head-with-one-hand-and-rub-the-chest-with-the-other-hand-at-the-same-time" test...."It has been a real challenge for many of our players, but I like the progress we are making," Meyer said

Correction: His first day with the Sunbeams, and Coach Meyers still has problems getting the "heads, shoulders, knees and toes" song synched up

=====

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by WACoug - 2008/04/29 08:27

---

craigocarson wrote:

Do we have to at least consider the possibility that Chambers isn't fast enough to play at Florida though?

I'm glad he has the motivation to prove Urban wrong (and guys like Jerry Rice weren't 4.3 guys either) but considering Urbans win at all costs mentality if there was enough about Chambers for him to want him, don't you think he'd have pursued him a little more?

I doubt we'll really know for a while, but at this point I'd say the verdict is still out.

The thing about Florida and Urban is that I have heard that Urban values speed more than any other single trait. He wants to be faster than the opponent at every position. So, if you want to play for Florida, above all else, you better be fast. Not just respectable, but fast. I think it very possible that Chambers could run a 4.50 and not be fast enough for a Florida wide receiver. Considering everything else he brings to the table, like his physicality, I'll take him.

=====

Re: Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by MajorCougar - 2008/04/29 15:22

---

WACoug wrote:

craigocarson wrote:

Do we have to at least consider the possibility that Chambers isn't fast enough to play at Florida though?

---

I'm glad he has the motivation to prove Urban wrong (and guys like Jerry Rice weren't 4.3 guys either) but considering Urbans win at all costs mentality if there was enough about Chambers for him to want him, don't you think he'd have pursued him a little more?

I doubt we'll really know for a while, but at this point I'd say the verdict is still out.

The thing about Florida and Urban is that I have heard that Urban values speed more than any other single trait. He wants to be faster than the opponent at every position. So, if you want to play for Florida, above all else, you better be fast. Not just respectable, but fast. I think it very possible that Chambers could run a 4.50 and not be fast enough for a Florida wide receiver. Considering everything else he brings to the table, like his physicality, I'll take him.

Chambers (and any receiver, for that matter), can make up a LOT from "Super Star" speed is route running. Crisp routes will give you separation every time.

---

Re:Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by redneckjedi - 2008/04/29 15:53

---

MajorCougar wrote:

WACoug wrote:

craigoscarson wrote:

Do we have to at least consider the possibility that Chambers isn't fast enough to play at Florida though?

I'm glad he has the motivation to prove Urban wrong (and guys like Jerry Rice weren't 4.3 guys either) but considering Urbans win at all costs mentality if there was enough about Chambers for him to want him, don't you think he'd have pursued him a little more?

I doubt we'll really know for a while, but at this point I'd say the verdict is still out.

The thing about Florida and Urban is that I have heard that Urban values speed more than any other single trait. He wants to be faster than the opponent at every position. So, if you want to play for Florida, above all else, you better be fast. Not just respectable, but fast. I think it very possible that Chambers could run a 4.50 and not be fast enough for a Florida wide receiver. Considering everything else he brings to the table, like his physicality, I'll take him.

Chambers (and any receiver, for that matter), can make up a LOT from "Super Star" speed is route running. Crisp routes will give you separation every time.

So true. My favorite example of that is Eric Drage. He was totally a slow white guy. But he knew what to do to get separation - plus, once he did, he was guaranteed to catch anything he got a hand on.

For anyone who doesn't remember Drage, this is what I'm talking about. #18 - especially the 50-yard reception coming out of the endzone, where he puts on the double move... Ah, the memories...

Anyway, I think if you let Bronco coach a guy with Chambers' body and a determination to prove people wrong, and have Collie there to mentor him in his route running, that's gonna be scary good, even without the mystical SEC seal of approval on speed. :woohoo:

---

Re:Thank you Urban Meyer

Posted by Metallicat - 2008/04/29 19:50

---

redneckjedi wrote:

MajorCougar wrote:

WACoug wrote:

craigoscarson wrote:

Do we have to at least consider the possibility that Chambers isn't fast enough to play at Florida though?

---

I'm glad he has the motivation to prove Urban wrong (and guys like Jerry Rice weren't 4.3 guys either) but considering Urbans win at all costs mentality if there was enough about Chambers for him to want him, don't you think he'd have pursued him a little more?

I doubt we'll really know for a while, but at this point I'd say the verdict is still out.

The thing about Florida and Urban is that I have heard that Urban values speed more than any other single trait. He wants to be faster than the opponent at every position. So, if you want to play for Florida, above all else, you better be fast. Not just respectable, but fast. I think it very possible that Chambers could run a 4.50 and not be fast enough for a Florida wide receiver. Considering everything else he brings to the table, like his physicality, I'll take him.

Chambers (and any receiver, for that matter), can make up a LOT from "Super Star" speed is route running. Crisp routes will give you separation every time.

So true. My favorite example of that is Eric Drage. He was totally a slow white guy. But he knew what to do to get separation - plus, once he did, he was guaranteed to catch anything he got a hand on.

For anyone who doesn't remember Drage, this is what I'm talking about. #18 - especially the 50-yard reception coming out of the endzone, where he puts on the double move... Ah, the memories...

Anyway, I think if you let Bronco coach a guy with Chambers' body and a determination to prove people wrong, and have Collie there to mentor him in his route running, that's gonna be scary good, even without the mystical SEC seal of approval on speed. :woohoo:

I loved watching Drage when I was little. BTW, isn't #4 in the video Chambers' HS coach, Tyler Anderson?

=====

Bad day for Chambers

Posted by PP3 - 2008/04/30 05:23

---

By the Way, bad day for Chambers yesterday at the Track event, sounds like he may have managed a small injury.

<http://www.deseretnews.com/blogs/1,5322,19,00.html>

=====

Re:Bad day for Chambers

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/04/30 11:46

---

PP3 wrote:

By the Way, bad day for Chambers yesterday at the Track event, sounds like he may have managed a small injury.

<http://www.deseretnews.com/blogs/1,5322,19,00.html>

The link has expired. Will you give us a quick overview as to its content?

Go Cougs!!!

=====

Re:Bad day for Chambers

Posted by detmer4prez - 2008/04/30 12:35

---

LINK

This one should work.

=====