
How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/04/24 07:06

I know, it's usually a love it or hate it thing but I'm curious what ya'll think about American Idol. Due to the representation of two members of the Church and the fact that my wife has become "hooked" I am growing increasingly interested week by week.

Just a couple thoughts:

1) Simon is the only honest judge. He just lacks tact. Paula is a bunch of fluff that doesn't want to offend. And Randy just likes to "check it out" and comment on "pitchiness"

2) If the american voting is based on the entire season and not on a week to week basis, then they got it right last night. If they are based solely on Tuesday's performances then they messed up badly! Jason should have been OUT and Brooke should have been right behind, although she recovered well and finished strong.

So what do you all think?

Go Cougs!!!

ps. Sorry this isn't sports or BYU related but things are slow right now right?

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by gordito - 2008/04/24 07:26

Sorry, I've never seen the show and had no idea that two Mormons were on it. So to answer your question, I'm not a fan.

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/24 08:13

I'll admit, I love.... LOVE idol. It really is very addicting. I've been watching since season 2. As for this season....

David Cook is the man!

I'm glad carly went home last night, I really wasn't a big fan of her voice. I'm suprised she got as far as she did.

I like Jason, like Randy said (and I've been saying since week 2) he reminds me a ton of Jack Johnson.

David A. has a really good voice, but its the same thing every week. I wouldn't buy his CD.

Brooke 1. is gorgeous. 2. she's LDS. whats not to love? lol, I like her voice. and i'm sick of people giving her crap about starting over again 2 nights ago, really not that big of a deal.

Syesha, I think she has a really good voice, but I've never really been a fan until this week. Simon was right, that performance was sexy.

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by the_other_blackguy@byu - 2008/04/24 08:15

In my religion i'm taught not to worship idols.

:D

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Hawkwing - 2008/04/24 08:19

My wife is also a huge fan, so I watch along with her. Let me say that there is some pretty good talent this year, but there were two real anomalies, Castro and Carly never should have made it through the first round, when Carly finally got booted last night I admit I gave the fist pump. Now there's only one bad woman left on the show, Jason Castro.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by WACoug - 2008/04/24 08:22

My wife and I have watched it off and on by season. This season we have watched it every week since auditions were over. I too am the biggest fan of David Cook. I think he is the most talented musician on the show right now. I like Brooke White but I also find her a little annoying. David Archuleta has an amazing voice. My prediction is that it will come down to the Davids for the final two. Although I think David Cook is more deserving, for the finale they have to sing the sappy, inspirational ballad written by a fan and that is right down David Archuleta's alley. Much like last year with how Blake Lewis (amazing beat boxer and mixer) lost to Jordin Sparks in the finale because his hands were tied and he couldn't do what he did best.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/24 10:26

I can't believe I'm weighing in on this. . .

In principle I hate this show, but my wife loves it so I've actually seen quite a bit of it this season.

First off, I have to admit that archelleta kid is pretty freakin amazing for a 15 year old. Unbelievable. The guy has some pipes, he reminds me of christopher cross but without the weight problems.

The Cook kid sounds kind of cool, but he mostly just annoys me. True rockers belong in a band, not on american idol. He'll end up as the frontman for some annoying band that sounds just like nickelback just like that other idol guy.

Brook probably has the most annoying personality of anyone on the show, but she is a pretty good singer.

What's really sad about that show is that it took until last week for that awful country singer to go out.

The group this year has actually been surprisingly talented for the most part, but whoever is choosing the nightly themes is starting to annoy me. They're doing neal diamond next week, yuck (Hans Olsen will be happy, but I'll just be annoyed).

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by penn cougar - 2008/04/24 10:34

Hengst wrote:

I can't believe I'm weighing in on this. . .

In principle I hate this show, but my wife loves it so I've actually seen quite a bit of it this season.

First off, I have to admit that archelleta kid is pretty freakin amazing for a 15 year old. Unbelievable. The guy has some pipes, he reminds me of christopher cross but without the weight problems.

The Cook kid sounds kind of cool, but he mostly just annoys me. True rockers belong in a band, not on american idol. He'll end up as the frontman for some annoying band that sounds just like nickelback just like that other idol guy.

Brook probably has the most annoying personality of anyone on the show, but she is a pretty good singer.

What's really sad about that show is that it took until last week for that awful country singer to go out.

The group this year has actually been surprisingly talented for the most part, but whoever is choosing the nightly themes is starting to annoy me. They're doing neal diamond next week, yuck (Hans Olsen will be happy, but I'll just be annoyed).

I will dock my own karma for being the idol police, but the Archelleta kid is 17 and will be 18 in like 6 months. He sings the same lame songs over and over again and doesn't have any variety. David Cook should win. He is the most talented and most versitle in terms of style.

Castro will be a big hit though with the sit in my dorm room and lite up all day college kids

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/24 10:45

penncougar wrote:

Hengst wrote:

I can't believe I'm weighing in on this. . .

In principle I hate this show, but my wife loves it so I've actually seen quite a bit of it this season.

First off, I have to admit that archelleta kid is pretty freakin amazing for a 15 year old. Unbelievable. The guy has some pipes, he reminds me of christopher cross but without the weight problems.

The Cook kid sounds kind of cool, but he mostly just annoys me. True rockers belong in a band, not on american idol. He'll end up as the frontman for some annoying band that sounds just like nickelback just like that other idol guy.

Brook probably has the most annoying personality of anyone on the show, but she is a pretty good singer.

What's really sad about that show is that it took until last week for that awful country singer to go out.

The group this year has actually been surprisingly talented for the most part, but whoever is choosing the nightly themes is starting to annoy me. They're doing neal diamond next week, yuck (Hans Olsen will be happy, but I'll just be annoyed).

I will dock my own karma for being the idol police, but the Archelleta kid is 17 and will be 18 in like 6 months. He sings the same lame songs over and over again and doesn't have any variety. David Cook should win. He is the most talented and most versitle in terms of style.

Castro will be a big hit though with the sit in my dorm room and lite up all day college kids

Yeah, most original at ripping off chris cornell, I'm sorry, I just don't like that kid, I think he's a poser.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/24 11:09

I'll back up Cook on this, whats he supposed to do? None of the themes have fit him very well, besides the beatles weeks. So he did what any smart contestants have done, done a cover of a song that fit that theme. He has an amazing voice. I do think he is a lot like Chris Cornell, but whats wrong with that? Honestly, the music industry could use more of guys like him. Cornell is my favorite male voice of any band.

Cook is going to do SO much better than Daughtry. I liked him, but Cook is just plain better

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/24 12:08

harlinestillopen wrote:

I'll back up Cook on this, whats he supposed to do? None of the themes have fit him very well, besides the beatles weeks. So he did what any smart contestants have done, done a cover of a song that fit that theme. He has an amazing voice. I do think he is a lot like Chris Cornell, but whats wrong with that? Honestly, the music industry could use more of guys like him. Cornell is my favorite male voice of any band.

Cook is going to do SO much better than Daughtry. I liked him, but Cook is just plain better

I can't believe I'm still having this conversation, lol.

I guess I'm just a rock purist and I don't like American Idol infiltrating rock. I definitely think Cook's voice is better than daughtry (or whatever his name is), but there is a huge difference between Chris Cornell and David Cook.

One came out of the Seattle underground in the 90's and has a true music persona built on creativity and work, while the other guy is just a pretender (that's partially why I hate that show, they're basically all pretenders). American Idol just doesn't fit with the counter culture of rock, sorry, it just doesn't. Rock is about things being noisy and out of control. It's about believing in something and make a statement. It's about going against the grain. Do you think you'd ever see David Grohl, Trent Resnor, Kurt Cobain, Maynord James Keenen or johnny rotten on American Idol!?!

i think not!

and that had better be the last thing I say on this thread ;)

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/04/24 12:30

ammoncougar1 wrote:

I know, it's usually a love it or hate it thing but I'm curious what ya'll think about American Idol. Due to the representation of two members of the Church and the fact that my wife has become "hooked" I am growing increasingly interested week by week.

Just a couple thoughts:

1) Simon is the only honest judge. He just lacks tact. Paula is a bunch of fluff that doesn't want to offend. And Randy just likes to "check it out" and comment on "pitchiness"

2) If the american voting is based on the entire season and not on a week to week basis, then they got it right last night. If they are based solely on Tuesday's performances then they messed up badly! Jason should have been OUT and Brooke should have been right behind, although she recovered well and finished strong.

So what do you all think?

Go Cougs!!!

ps. Sorry this isn't sports or BYU related but things are slow right now right?

I agree with you 100%. I enjoy the show for the train wrecks to start the season and to see how the talent rises to the top. I think America gets it wrong at times, like this week. Jason was horrible and should be gone. Carly had the best performance of the night.

You called it right about Simon and Paula. What's up with her chest pressing bodice last night? Not a good look for her. Simon doesn't understand American tastes either, so there are times he's wrong because of that. But overall, he's the best judge.

Archuleta has this won already, though Castro will give him a run for his money. Brooke is wholesome and sweet. Jason is wierd and Aishia (sp?) has some great singing talent, but was too late in the game. The guys win this season.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/04/24 13:14

CougarPeasant wrote:

I agree with you 100%. I enjoy the show for the train wrecks to start the season and to see how the talent rises to the top. I think America gets it wrong at times, like this week. Jason was horrible and should be gone. Carly had the best performance of the night.

You called it right about Simon and Paula. What's up with her chest pressing bodice last night? Not a good look for her. Simon doesn't understand American tastes either, so there are times he's wrong because of that. But overall, he's the best judge.

Archuleta has this won already, though Castro will give him a run for his money. Brooke is wholesome and sweet. Jason is wierd and Aishia (sp?) has some great singing talent, but was too late in the game. The guys win this season.

I know what you meant but it's Cook (David) not Castro who will give Arculeta a run. I still think because of diversity the David Cook will win it in the end. I keep telling my wife though, regardless of who wins they will all have a shot at a music contract sometime somewhere.

The think I've liked most about Brooke is that even though she always looks ready to cry, she is remarkably poised and doesn't back down. I like that she is unafraid to share her beliefs (not just church stuff) but to defend her violinist a few weeks back by suggesting Simon apoligize, despite the risk of America's perception, I like that. She will, IMHO, be gone after next week but she has been good for the Church.

David Archuleta doesn't win in my mind because he's too young. I know people say he has the younger generation because he's young and the older women because he can sing so romantically. But David Cook has the rest in between and he has the variety to go with it.

As someone said in the D-News commentary last week. These people are vocalists and musicians, not artists. At least what we see week to week. They are not doing a ton of writing and arranging. They have "the pipes" to sing other artists music extremely well. Just like Garth Brooks who wrote very few of his own songs.

It's been interesting to see all these comments and opinions about a non-sports topic.

Go Cougs!!!

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/04/24 18:13

ammoncougar1 wrote:

I know what you meant but it's Cook (David) not Castro who will give Arculeta a run. I still think because of diversity the David Cook will win it in the end. I keep telling my wife though, regardless of who wins they will all have a shot at a music contract sometime somewhere.

The think I've liked most about Brooke is that even though she always looks ready to cry, she is remarkably poised and doesn't back down. I like that she is unafraid to share her beliefs (not just church stuff) but to defend her violinist a few weeks back by suggesting Simon apoligize, despite the risk of America's perception, I like that. She will, IMHO, be gone after next week but she has been good for the Church.

David Archuleta doesn't win in my mind because he's too young. I know people say he has the younger generation because he's young and the older women because he can sing so romantically. But David Cook has the rest in between and he has the variety to go with it.

As someone said in the D-News commentary last week. These people are vocalists and musicians, not artists. At least what we see week to week. They are not doing a ton of writing and arranging. They have "the pipes" to sing other artists music extremely well. Just like Garth Brooks who wrote very few of his own songs.

It's been interesting to see all these comments and opinions about a non-sports topic.

Go Cougs!!!

Cook is very good, but I really think Archuleta captured the most support over the season. I actually thought Carly would be the stiffest competition, but felt her tatts would be her undoing in the end. Brooke is a strong woman, I agree and she'll find success some how.

I think writing will come. Writers are always around. Singing talent is important, then they can develop their own styles using their own compositions.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Ygridiron4ever - 2008/04/24 19:29

CougarPeasant wrote:

.... but felt her tats would be her undoing in the end.

Simon keeps saying song choice is as important as talent, and I think Carly choice the wrong song. Lots of conservative Americans take offense by the song "Jesus Christ, Superstar." I rememebr my mom was really unhappy about that play years ago. I think she lost a ton of votes because she doesn't understand Americans.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/04/24 19:40

Ygridiron4ever wrote:

CougarPeasant wrote:

.... but felt her tats would be her undoing in the end.

Simon keeps saying song choice is as important as talent, and I think Carly choice the wrong song. Lots of conservative Americans take offense by the song "Jesus Christ, Superstar." I rememebr my mom was really unhappy about that play years ago. I think she lost a ton of votes because she doesn't understand Americans.

I thought about that as I remember my uncle saying the same thing. However, that generation doesn't vote on American Idol so it's really a non-issue. I thought the same because of my uncle until I saw the movie and how it fit in a modern interpretation. She utterly nailed the song and the voting crowd could care less about the song's apparent rebellious side. They voted against her because they like the others better, even if she does have more talent than some of those that survived.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Ygridiron4ever - 2008/04/24 20:37

CougarPeasant wrote:

.... However, that generation doesn't vote on American Idol so it's really a non-issue.

I wouldn't be the least bit surprised if 200,000 votes a week are cast by that generation. Take 100,000 votes from the 50+ crowd and that could be enough to make the difference.

.....They voted against her because they like the others better, even if she does have more talent than some of those that survived.

If that is the case, then how does your tats statement from an earlier post bear sway? Certainly "kids today" who aren't offended by seemingly sacreligious songs aren't offended by tattoos.

The young (18-30) conervative Christian Americans who got George Bush in office clearly have a loud voice.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by CougarPeasant - 2008/04/24 22:15

Ygridiron4ever wrote:

I wouldn't be the least bit surprised if 200,000 votes a week are cast by that generation. Take 100,000 votes from the 50+ crowd and that could be enough to make the difference.

I don't suppose you know when Jesus Christ Superstar was written do you? It was written in the late '60s. That is nearly 40 years ago. That means those that are 60 now would have been 20 then and were the ones that embraced the play and caused it to be made into a movie. There are a couple of other songs that were done by some of the biggest bands at the time, the play was so popular. I wasn't even a teenager when the play came out and when my uncle, a WWII vet, was offended. That generation is not watching American Idol.

If that is the case, then how does your tats statement from an earlier post bear sway? Certainly "kids today" who aren't offended by seemingly sacreligious songs aren't offended by tattoos.

The young (18-30) conervative Christian Americans who got George Bush in office clearly have a loud voice.

The tats she has are excessive, even by this generations standards. Did you see her husband? He's the Illustrated Man from Bradbury's book.

Oh, and if the conservative Christians that voted for Bush really are voting in AI, they would have bounced the two Mormons out by now, like they did Romney in the primary.

Seriously, the Daves, Jason, and Brooke have their followings among the voters and have for some time. Jason deserved to be bounced after his horrible rendition of Memories. Carly's performance was so strong that the only reason she was bounced is because she isn't a favorite among the voters, not because of the song she sang.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Cougfan84 - 2008/04/24 22:39

I am biased and think Archuleta should win...The kid is Mormon and from Utah and has a pretty incredible voice so I give him the nod. I think all of the remaining idols have talent and will get record deals i'm sure, but it all comes down to their followings now.

This is the what place they will take:

- 5th- Syesha
- 4th- Brooke
- 3rd- Castro
- 2nd- Cook
- 1st- Archuleta

This isn't the order I agree with, but i'm kinda following the trends... Syesha has been in the bottom 2 or 3 more than any of the remaining 5 so shes gone this week regardless. I hate Jason Castro's voice and style but it apparently appeals to many thats why hes a finalist on american idol and im not...and he has a following which I think will carry him past Brooke...But hes not good enough to beat cook and archuleta so I see them as the final two. With Archuleta emerging victorious even though hes only 17 (Last years winner Jordin Sparks was 17 or 18 i think, so hes not too young).

Another scenario is a repeat of Season 5. We could have the best idol, get sent home in 4th place and then 2nd and 3rd place are both good...and the winner sucks (see Taylor Hicks) Sorry Taylor Hicks fans...he didn't deserve it.. Hicks cd sold a few copies, Daughtry's cd sold millions...I think the proof is in the pudding on the real winner of that contest...

In my opinion, Archuleta should win...but we will have to watch and see...

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Metallicat - 2008/04/24 22:54

Hengst wrote:

I can't believe I'm weighing in on this. . .

In principle I hate this show, but my wife loves it so I've actually seen quite a bit of it this season.

First off, I have to admit that archelleta kid is pretty freakin amazing for a 15 year old. Unbelievable. The guy has some pipes, he reminds me of christopher cross but without the weight problems.

The Cook kid sounds kind of cool, but he mostly just annoys me. True rockers belong in a band, not on american idol. He'll end up as the frontman for some annoying band that sounds just like nickelback just like that other idol guy.

Brook probably has the most annoying personality of anyone on the show, but she is a pretty good singer.

What's really sad about that show is that it took until last week for that awful country singer to go out.

The group this year has actually been surprisingly talented for the most part, but whoever is choosing the nightly themes is starting to annoy me. They're doing neal diamond next week, yuck (Hans Olsen will be happy, but I'll just be annoyed).

This was weird to read because it was like reading my own thoughts.

I never watched the show but my wife loves it and there's only one tv in our apartment (well, old apartment) and before I know girls are coming over for Idol.:dry:

I completely agree with the annoying themes. (except I kinda like Neal Diamond.)

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/04/25 06:43

I have only watched since there were 10 players. I do not know the answer to this so help me out here: Do they do "themes" the rest of the way from here? How long have they done them? Wouldn't it be more fair to let the singers choose what fits them best?

Go Cougs!!!

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by penncougar - 2008/04/25 08:05

Hengst wrote:

penncougar wrote:

Hengst wrote:

I can't believe I'm weighing in on this. . .

In principle I hate this show, but my wife loves it so I've actually seen quite a bit of it this season.

First off, I have to admit that archelleta kid is pretty freakin amazing for a 15 year old. Unbelievable. The guy has some pipes, he reminds me of christopher cross but without the weight problems.

The Cook kid sounds kind of cool, but he mostly just annoys me. True rockers belong in a band, not on american idol. He'll end up as the frontman for some annoying band that sounds just like nickelback just like that other idol guy.

Brook probably has the most annoying personality of anyone on the show, but she is a pretty good singer.

What's really sad about that show is that it took until last week for that awful country singer to go out.

The group this year has actually been surprisingly talented for the most part, but whoever is choosing the nightly themes is starting to annoy me. They're doing neal diamond next week, yuck (Hans Olsen will be happy, but I'll just be annoyed).

I will dock my own karma for being the idol police, but the Archelleta kid is 17 and will be 18 in like 6 months. He sings the same lame songs over and over again and doesn't have any variety. David Cook should win. He is the most talented and most versatile in terms of style.

Castro will be a big hit though with the sit in my dorm room and lite up all day college kids

Yeah, most original at ripping off chris cornell, I'm sorry, I just don't like that kid, I think he's a poser.

Good point. However, no more of an unoriginal poser than anyone else they've ever had on the show

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/25 08:18

penncougar wrote:

Hengst wrote:

penncougar wrote:

Hengst wrote:

I can't believe I'm weighing in on this. . .

In principle I hate this show, but my wife loves it so I've actually seen quite a bit of it this season.

First off, I have to admit that archelleta kid is pretty freakin amazing for a 15 year old. Unbelievable. The guy has some pipes, he reminds me of christopher cross but without the weight problems.

The Cook kid sounds kind of cool, but he mostly just annoys me. True rockers belong in a band, not on american idol. He'll end up as the frontman for some annoying band that sounds just like nickelback just like that other idol guy.

Brook probably has the most annoying personality of anyone on the show, but she is a pretty good singer.

What's really sad about that show is that it took until last week for that awful country singer to go out.

The group this year has actually been surprisingly talented for the most part, but whoever is choosing the nightly themes is starting to annoy me. They're doing neal diamond next week, yuck (Hans Olsen will be happy, but I'll just be annoyed).

I will dock my own karma for being the idol police, but the Archelleta kid is 17 and will be 18 in like 6 months. He sings the same lame songs over and over again and doesn't have any variety. David Cook should win. He is the most talented and most versatile in terms of style.

Castro will be a big hit though with the sit in my dorm room and lite up all day college kids

Yeah, most original at ripping off chris cornell, I'm sorry, I just don't like that kid, I think he's a poser.

Good point. However, no more of an unoriginal poser than anyone else they've ever had on the show

Which is why I don't like the show ;) I just occasionally glance up from my laptop while my wife is watching it :-)

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/25 10:53

Oh give Cook a break. Just because he didn't fallow the typical Cornell/Cobain/ Alice in Chains/ what ever road, doesn't mean the guy isn't a rocker. What is he supposed to do on Idol? go around head banging while tearing up his guitar? He did the show to get noticed. He's been noticed. He'll make a CD that is him, not what Idol wants him to be (which is what we've seen in his minute and thirty seconds each week

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Metallicat - 2008/04/25 11:12

harlinestillopen wrote:

Oh give Cook a break. Just because he didn't fallow the typical Cornell/Cobain/ Alice in Chains/ what ever road, doesn't mean the guy isn't a rocker. What is he supposed to do on Idol? go around head banging while tearing up his guitar? He did the show to get noticed. He's been noticed. He'll make a CD that is him, not what Idol wants him to be (which is what we've seen in his minute and thirty seconds each week

The problem is that his fan base comes from "what idol wants him to be". If he wants to build off what he's done on idol and keep the fans he's made he's going to have to stick with the poppy rock he's been doing on idol. Nothing wrong with that per se, if it makes him rich good for him. But it still very un-rock and roll.

I picture Jack Black saying "there used to be a way to stick it to the man with music, but oh no, the man had to go and ruin that too with a little thing called American Idol!"

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Hengst - 2008/04/25 11:56

Metallicat wrote:

harlinestillopen wrote:

Oh give Cook a break. Just because he didn't fallow the typical Cornell/Cobain/ Alice in Chains/ what ever road, doesn't mean the guy isn't a rocker. What is he supposed to do on Idol? go around head banging while tearing up his guitar? He did the show to get noticed. He's been noticed. He'll make a CD that is him, not what Idol wants him to be (which is what we've seen in his minute and thirty seconds each week

The problem is that his fan base comes from "what idol wants him to be". If he wants to build off what he's done on idol and keep the fans he's made he's going to have to stick with the poppy rock he's been doing on idol. Nothing wrong with that per se, if it makes him rich good for him. But it still very un-rock and roll.

I picture Jack Black saying "there used to be a way to stick it to the man with music, but oh no, the man had to go and ruin that too with a little thing called American Idol!"

Amen brother:angry:

Any predictions for tonights\' cut?

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/04/30 12:47

Ladies & Gentlemen, Brothers & Sisters, Whatever....

We all know it's a slow time for BYU sports so I'm reviving the thread each week. What do those who care think will happen tonight? My prediction is that Jason, I look like a girl with my eyes and hair, Castro is GONE! That is if America gets it right. It is possible Syesha or Brooke could also take a hike but I don't think either merit that if you judge by last nights' performances.

BTW, was Paula on something last night?

Go Cougs!!!

Re:Any predictions for tonights\' cut?

Posted by ABYUFAN - 2008/04/30 12:51

I predict that, much like the entire history of the show, I will not watch a single second of it.....;)

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by harlinestillopen - 2008/04/30 13:21

oh come on ABYUFAN, there are to many haters.

For anyone that does watch it alot, check out dialidol.com

<http://dialidol.com/asp/predictions/Predictions.asp>

They call in on everyone's lines, and based on how often its busy, they predict who is going home.

Here is the order they are predicting tonight. Now there is a margin of error, so its not full proof.

Sysha is SAFE. She could be has high as 1, or as low as 2.

David Cook is SAFE. Could be as high as 1, or as low as 2.

David Archuleta is in danger of being voted off. He could be as high as 3 or as low as 5

Jason Castro is in danger of being voted off. He could be as high as 3 or as low as 5.

Brooke White is in danger of being voted off. She could be as high as 3 or as low as 5.

this site usually gets the bottom 2/3 right, but has been off on who leaves.

After last nights performances I suspected that Brooke would be going home.

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Hawkwing - 2008/04/30 13:27

Dialldol is an interesting site, but don't place too much faith in it, for one thing it has no way to determine text messages, also, Idol claims they have some method to weed out auto-dialers from the tabulated votes, so a line could be busy quite often with auto-dialers that are weeded out.

I believe it will be two women in the bottom this time, with Sysha being safe, but Jason Castro ultimately going home.

=====

Re:Any predictions for tonights\ cut?

Posted by rackem - 2008/04/30 13:56

ABYUFAN wrote:

I predict that, much like the entire history of the show, I will not watch a single second of it.....;)

I'll second that.

=====

Re:Any predictions for tonights\ cut?

Posted by j2b03 - 2008/04/30 15:00

Here Here! I would probably be interested if I was 12 years old or maybe 13 at best.;)

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/30 15:19

Do you think you'd ever see David Grohl, Trent Resnor, Kurt Cobain, Maynard James Keenen or Johnny Rotten on American Idol!?!

Doubt if I'll ever run into any of them at Church either... ;)

=====

Re:How do you feel about Idols?

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/04/30 15:26

CougarPeasant wrote:

I don't suppose you know when Jesus Christ Superstar was written do you? It was written in the late '60s. That is nearly 40 years ago. That means those that are 60 now would have been 20 then and were the ones that embraced the play and caused it to be made into a movie. There are a couple of other songs that were done by some of the biggest bands at the time, the play was so popular. I wasn't even a teenager when the play came out and when my uncle, a WWII vet, was offended. That generation is not watching American Idol.

Most of us that were 20 then couldn't afford the ticket price to go to the play. :S

=====