
Crowton's qb kicked off the team

Posted by TimO - 2008/05/02 18:28

<http://sports.espn.go.com/ncf/news/story?id=3378148>

quietly in Oregon dennis dixon was a hasstle, and left to play baseball for a while until coaches changed, then now qb perrilloux tested positive for drugs, i know that's not a gang rape or anything, and problems happen everywhere, but problems don't take care of themselves, nor does looking the other way. All coaches should share the weight and keep their players head's straight. I like Bronco because his assistants that aren't LDS, and players that aren't LDS really do fit in well at BYU because the system allows them to

Re:Crowton's qb kicked off the team

Posted by yutka - 2008/05/02 18:47

Does this open things more for Cade now? I hope he gets a solid shot.

Re:Crowton's qb kicked off the team

Posted by snoscythe - 2008/05/02 18:55

In Gary's defense, both quarterbacks (Dixon and Perriloux) were either at or signed with Oregon and LSU respectively well before Gary entered the picture.

They were merely pieces in place when he arrived that he had to work with.

Re:Crowton's qb kicked off the team

Posted by OLB - 2008/05/02 19:03

snoscythe wrote:

In Gary's defense, both quarterbacks (Dixon and Perriloux) were either at or signed with Oregon and LSU respectively well before Gary entered the picture.

They were merely pieces in place when he arrived that he had to work with.

You beat me to the punch. Gary didn't recuite Dixon or Perriloux. In fact, both of them had at least a year under their belt before Crowton showed up. Why do guys like you have to constantly knock Crowton? So Crowton wasn't a good head coach while in Provo. That doesn't make him responsible for the actions of moronic football players.

You must have been one of those guys that thought Crowton should have read all of his players a "goodnight story", tucked them into bed, and kissed them every night.

If you're going to pin the blame on Crowton for what BYU players did when Crowton was the head coach, why can't you blame Belloti or Miles for the misbehavior of players that go bad?

Re:Crowton's qb kicked off the team

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/05/02 21:27

OLB wrote:

snoscythe wrote:

In Gary's defense, both quarterbacks (Dixon and Perriloux) were either at or signed with Oregon and LSU respectively well before Gary entered the picture.

They were merely pieces in place when he arrived that he had to work with.

You beat me to the punch. Gary didn't recruit Dixon or Perilloux. In fact, both of them had at least a year under their belt before Crowton showed up. Why do guys like you have to constantly knock Crowton? So Crowton wasn't a good head coach while in Provo. That doesn't make him responsible for the actions of moronic football players.

You must have been one of those guys that thought Crowton should have read all of his players a "goodnight story", tucked them into bed, and kissed them every night.

If you're going to pin the blame on Crowton for what BYU players did when Crowton was the head coach, why can't you blame Belloti or Miles for the misbehavior of players that go bad?

Agreed. Players need to shoulder 100% of the responsibility for their behavior. Quit blaming Crowton for other's failings.

=====

Re:Crowton\'s qb kicked off the team

Posted by gmj81 - 2008/05/03 01:12

I just hope the LDS kid from Harvard wins the job. Andrew Hatch is actually the guy Crowton recruited to LSU. Now that Perilloux is out of the way he should have a legitimate chance at starting for the bayou bengals.

=====

Re:Crowton\'s qb kicked off the team

Posted by jaga97 - 2008/05/03 10:21

It won't be long before another scandal of sorts hits Provo. God himself allows kids to make stupid mistakes.

Don't get me wrong. I have no information about some poop hitting the fan. But I do know it is inevitable that while managing the lives of teenagers there are going to be some problems.

=====

Re:Crowton\'s qb kicked off the team

Posted by craigocarson - 2008/05/03 12:11

jaga97 wrote:

It won't be long before another scandal of sorts hits Provo. God himself allows kids to make stupid mistakes.

Don't get me wrong. I have no information about some poop hitting the fan. But I do know it is inevitable that while managing the lives of teenagers there are going to be some problems.

problems are inevitable everywhere

scandals are something rare at BYU

The only reason that anyone would think that the Perilloux thing was scandal and not an isolated problem, is that he was in line to be the starting qb for the defending national champs; a guy that had over a 150 qb rating in games and single handily beat Tennessee. This kid had NFL potential and now may be making himself untouchable. I still don't see that as scandal.

Scandal = Colorado football, Duke Lacrosse imho

=====

Re:Crowton\'s qb kicked off the team

Posted by CAFB_04-12 - 2008/05/03 12:35

craigocarson wrote:

jaga97 wrote:

It won't be long before another scandal of sorts hits Provo. God himself allows kids to make stupid mistakes.

Don't get me wrong. I have no information about some poop hitting the fan. But I do know it is inevitable that while managing the lives of teenagers there are going to be some problems.

problems are inevitable everywhere

scandals are something rare at BYU

The only reason that anyone would think that the Perilloux thing was scandal and not an isolated problem, is that he was in line to be the starting qb for the defending national champs; a guy that had over a 150 qb rating in games and single handily beat Tennessee. This kid had NFL potential and now may be making himself untouchable. I still don't see that as scandal.

Scandal = Colorado football, Duke Lacrosse imho

Scandal at BYU is a kid getting a cup of coffee on his way to school in the morning. Oh, and kicking in doors after getting hit with water balloons, and giving a false name to a cop. At least we've put a stop (knock on wood) to watching porn and having sex with underage girls, shoplifting, and smoking weed.

=====

Re:Crowton\'s qb kicked off the team

Posted by Cougarageous - 2008/05/03 14:48

Why do we continue to point a finger at Crowton as if it is his fault that players on the team he coaches make some really poor decisions. Believe me, I was as happy to see Crowton go as the rest of you but wonder why we continue to point a finger at Crowton's problems rather than applaud his successes since leaving our program.

To think such scandals could/would never happen again at BYU is a little naive. It's like any of us who has ever watched another person's kids throwing a tantrum in the middle of a store or church and saying to ourselves, "my kids will never act like that." Only to have kids and realize despite our best efforts it happens to everyone at least once in a while. The truth is, people have their free agency and everyone is susceptible to the choices and decisions that others may make, whether good or bad. Hence the reason why sometimes good people are killed by drunk drivers.

Although I do believe Bronco is a much better fit for BYU's program I do not blame our team's problems solely on Crowton, when he was here. And now that Crowton is gone I still respect him as a person and church member and wish him nothing but success. But for us to think such problems might not occur again at BYU under Bronco and Co. is not only naive but unfair to Bronco himself. Even despite his best efforts, we could end up with some players that make some terrible decisions, thus affecting our team and school with their consequences.

I guess my point to all of this is this...although I'm happy that Crowton is no longer our head coach, I don't believe it's fair to blame all of our team's problems on him. He had a tough roll to fill when he was hired and a lot of expectations we're unduly placed on him. He was expected to bring the team back to high level where it once had been and was expected to have it happen over night.

He in turn brought in some incredible talent in hopes of getting us quickly back to that level, much of which was non LDS youth that may not have completely understood what was truly expected of them even if it had been fully explained. I believe he felt pressured to bring the team to a level of play that required him to bring in the best talent possible despite their actual fit to the program, in order to save his job. Unfortunately, the very reason he brought in such players (to ensure his employment), was what caused him to lose his job.

Crowton was, if you will, our rebound coach. ;) And like all rebounds, he was there to help our program transition back to where we needed to eventually be, until we found the true love of our hearts, so to speak. Actually, I feel bad for Crowton having to be the coach to follow in LaVell Edwards' footsteps. That would have been a tough role for anyone to fill especially the state our team was in at the time. We cannot overlook the fact that if it weren't for Crowton, we wouldn't have Bronco or Coach Omer on our staff right now, two key components to our recent success.

I believe that the way Bronco is running the program will help in curbing any similar problems from plaguing our program in the future but also know that it comes down to the individual decisions of each individual player as to whether or not it will stay that way. That is after all what free agency is all about.

Lets be happy for Crowton and his success elsewhere but also look forward to our own as a program under the guidance of Bronco and Co., knowing that he truly is the perfect fit for BYU. I can only hope that our players continue to proudly and honorably represent our program both on and off the field.

Here is to winning it all next year so that even Crowton himself may be able to look at BYU and smile, happy for our success as well.

Go Cougs!

=====

Re:Crowton\'s qb kicked off the team

Posted by gordito - 2008/05/03 15:14

Cougarageous wrote:

Crowton was, if you will, our rebound coach. ;)

I like it :laugh:

=====