

---

BCS or Bust???

Posted by huskercougar - 2008/05/08 15:13

---

I think that with all the pre-season hype and talk, this is what we have come down to. If BYU does not make a BCS game, I think we will all be a little disappointed. I for one will be. It definitely is no gimme by any means. So, here's the question, if BYU does not make a BCS game, will you be disappointed, and do you think they will make it?

Here's to hopin' they do!
BCS of BUST!!!

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by Real.Men.Wear.Blue - 2008/05/08 15:19

---

Ask me after the Washington game. IMO, that will be the truest gauge of the Cougars' abilities next year--winning on the road against a Pac-10 team at the start of the season. Don't get me wrong, the games at TCU and Utah will be very tough. But I think BYU still gets in the BCS if they lose one of those, because both teams are better than Washington.

BYU has to get the monkey off its back of losing to mediocre BSC conference teams on the road at the start of the season.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by Hengst - 2008/05/08 15:22

---

It depends on a lot of things. If someone important gets hurt early in the seasons I think I'll be happy with a lot less. If everyone stays healthy I don't see why they shouldn't win every game. TCU and Utah will be the toughest games on our schedule and I don't think either team will really be all that much different from what they were last year which means BYU should be able to beat them.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by huskercougar - 2008/05/08 15:27

---

Real.Men.Wear.Blue wrote:

Ask me after the Washington game. IMO, that will be the truest gauge of the Cougars' abilities next year--winning on the road against a Pac-10 team at the start of the season. Don't get me wrong, the games at TCU and Utah will be very tough. But I think BYU still gets in the BCS if they lose one of those, because both teams are better than Washington.

BYU has to get the monkey off its back of losing to mediocre BSC conference teams on the road at the start of the season.

I totally agree with you. I know a lot of people out there think that Washington is not that good, but I guarantee that they already have the BYU game circled on their schedule. I think if they can win that game, they should be able to roll. I am quite concerned about the Utah game as well, but other than that, nobody really worries me, especially not UCLA!

Here's a little trivia, when is the last time BYU won an out of conference road game?

The answer, Utah State, where we barely won 35-34! Back in 2002. Before that was at Mississippi State in 2001, we won on a last second field goal.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/05/08 15:32

---

I will be a LOT disappointed if they don't go BCS bowling next season. I think about the only way they don't is by injury to Hall. Every other position has depth so QB is the key to me. Lose him and BYU will be a long shot to go, keep him upright and they will most likely be playing in the Fiesta bowl (which would be an even bigger KUDOS to the team since it's the Orange Bowl's turn for the so called at-large team).

---

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by MajorCougar - 2008/05/08 16:04

huskercougar wrote:

Real.Men.Wear.Blue wrote:

Ask me after the Washington game. IMO, that will be the truest gauge of the Cougars' abilities next year--winning on the road against a Pac-10 team at the start of the season. Don't get me wrong, the games at TCU and Utah will be very tough. But I think BYU still gets in the BCS if they lose one of those, because both teams are better than Washington.

BYU has to get the monkey off its back of losing to mediocre BSC conference teams on the road at the start of the season.

I totally agree with you. I know a lot of people out there think that Washington is not that good, but I guarantee that they already have the BYU game circled on their schedule. I think if they can win that game, they should be able to roll. I am quite concerned about the Utah game as well, but other than that, nobody really worries me, especially not UCLA!

Here's a little trivia, when is the last time BYU won an out of conference road game?

The answer, Utah State, where we barely won 35-34! Back in 2002. Before that was at Mississippi State in 2001, we won on a last second field goal.

I don't think either the players or the fans have the BYU game circled, per se. At least that's the impression I get from their fan boards (I know, a limited perspective). This could be a trap game where they seem to disrespect us, and start with Oregon, and then play Oklahoma after us.

About the only thing they look forward to is avenging the losses in 1985 and 1999, and the supposed stealing of their NC in 1984...

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by rackem - 2008/05/08 16:27

BYU's home schedule is pretty good other than UCLA and New Mexico. The away schedule concerns me the most about a BCS run. Away games at Washington, TCU, Air Force and Utah give each team an extra 3 point advantage. If they can sweep these teams at their house they should be ranked 10 or better.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by CrimsonCoug - 2008/05/08 16:34

Barring injury to Hall (and to a lesser extent, Collie), I'll be disappointed if we have more than one loss in the regular season. With one loss, I'll be just satisfied. Going undefeated in the regular season is going to be really tough. Even though I think we're likely to win each game individually, that doesn't mean we're likely to go undefeated.

Whether or not we get into the BCS is still contingent on how other teams fare. But if we do go undefeated and don't get the invite, I'm going to cry foul! But if (WHEN!) we get in, we'd better win. Hawaii embarrassed all the non BCS conferences and did us a disservice by just focusing on getting invited to the party, not on dancing well.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by huskercougar - 2008/05/08 16:58

---

CrimsonCoug wrote:

Barring injury to Hall (and to a lesser extent, Collie), I'll be disappointed if we have more than one loss in the regular season. With one loss, I'll be just satisfied. Going undefeated in the regular season is going to be really tough. Even though I think we're likely to win each game individually, that doesn't mean we're likely to go undefeated.

Whether or not we get into the BCS is still contingent on how other teams fare. But if we do go undefeated and don't get the invite, I'm going to cry foul! But if (WHEN!) we get in, we'd better win. Hawaii embarrassed all the non BCS conferences and did us a disservice by just focusing on getting invited to the party, not on dancing well.

There is absolutely no chance of that! If we go undefeated, we will definitely be in a BCS game. We will for sure be ranked in the top 10 by then, which will guarantee us going.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by MajorCougar - 2008/05/08 17:03

rackem wrote:

BYU's home schedule is pretty good other than UCLA and New Mexico. The away schedule concerns me the most about a BCS run. Away games at Washington, TCU, Air Force and Utah give each team an extra 3 point advantage. If they can sweep these teams at their house they should be ranked 10 or better.

I have a feeling that the UCLA game will be tough, but should be a win. Very similar to how the AZ game played out last year.

I don't have a big concern about UNM. They lose a lot of their skill players on offense, other than their QB.

Washington will be tough; we just need to contain Locker and their freshman WR (Polk). Even the UW fans know that their defense will still be an issue, even with an influx of new players.

Air Force will be rebuilding - they lose both Carney and Hall.

TCU will be tough, but they are already starting a downward trend that will continue next year, as well. I believe both of their bookends (Chase & Ortiz? are gone).

Utah will be tough no matter WHICH field it's played on. That will probably be the toughest (and closest) game all year long.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by Isola - 2008/05/08 17:29

Looking at each game individually we win them all, but looking at the season as a whole it is hard to say that I won't be disappointed if we don't make a BCS bowl. There will be a lot of tough games, but I don't see a game we shouldn't be favored in. Utah will likely be the toughest game, but I would be surprised if we face a healthy Brian Johnson.

I think our offense will be nigh unstoppable. We should really have a balanced attack. Unga, Fui, JJ and Tonga rushing behind our big, experienced offensive line and we should be able to pound the ball if necessary. Then Hall with Collie, Reed, Pitta, Ashworth and the backs...can you imagine game planning against this offense?

I am a believer in our defense too. Jorgensen and Nixon provide the leadership and many of the new players have seen a lot of playing time. I don't know why, but So'Oto playing LB makes me giddy. I think defense is more about the system, and I believe in Bronco's system.

I think Bronco will have them taking it one game at a time, starting with Northern Iowa, and this should be a special year.

And next year...

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

---

Posted by Conosticator - 2008/05/08 18:59

I think Bronco will have them taking it one game at a time

Didn't know there was any other option... :dry:

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by Mars - 2008/05/09 06:12

Our fanbase craves an 11-1 season or better after the past two years. That's a whole lot to ask, perhaps, but it's where our hearts are set. If we lose at Washington and win all the rest, it's the best season we've had since 1996.

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/05/09 12:08

Generally speaking I am an eternal optimist. As some have said, looking at each game individually I can't see us NOT favored in any of them. Collectively, it takes a great team and a little luck to go undefeated. If I had to choose to go undefeated this year and get a BcS invite and then drop a silly game somewhere along the line next year, or have the reverse of that, I would take the latter option. I believe will finish 11-1 or undefeated this season (barring significant injury) and undefeated next year when we add Jacobson back in the mix with Collie, Pitta, Hall, Unga, George, Chambers, etc. etc. etc! And at that point, we will become the first Non-BcS team to have the top three players from their team! (Hall, Unga, Collie in no particular order)

Go Cougs!!!

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by Cougy_Monster - 2008/05/09 12:19

One scenario would disappoint me more than anything...and likely require several months of medication: if the Cougs were to get knocked out of BCS running by a loss to the yewts in November.

I would probably vomit for a month if that happened.

But, thankfully for us Cougar faithful, the Cougs are going to run through their schedule with a few close games but no losses.

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by scott715 - 2008/05/09 12:52

Why don't we schedule out OOC games all at home, then we can't lose on the road. Nevada did that to us this year by pulling out (note I would not pull that trick on anyone). Another thing, maybe we should do the home and away series over three years instead of two. That way we won't play a team three times within a year like UCLA will be.

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by imuakahuku - 2008/05/09 13:31

Conosticator wrote:

---

I think Bronco will have them taking it one game at a time

Didn't know there was any other option... :dry:

I think there was talk of playing NI and Utah State at the same time so they could garner an extra bye week in the middle of the schedule. ;)

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by ammoncougar1 - 2008/05/09 13:36

---

Cougy_Monster wrote:

One scenario would disappoint me more than anything...and likely require several months of medication: if the Cougs were to get knocked out of BCS running by a loss to the yewts in November.

I would probably vomit for a month if that happened.

But, thankfully for us Cougar faithful, the Cougs are going to run through their schedule with a few close games but no losses.

This scenario, while horrible, would only cause me to need counseling if the win allowed the Utes to go to the BcS! Aaagh! The horror!

Go Cougs!!!

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by jaga97 - 2008/05/09 14:40

---

There have been many great years in BYU history. There has only been 1 perfect season. I will not hold anything against this team if they do not run the table. I will be disappointed if they do not play every game with the heart and passion we expect. Going 12-1 would be a huge accomplishment and 1 of the best seasons ever.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by Isola - 2008/05/09 14:46

---

jaga97 wrote:

There have been many great years in BYU history. There has only been 1 perfect season. I will not hold anything against this team if they do not run the table. I will be disappointed if they do not play every game with the heart and passion we expect. Going 12-1 would be a huge accomplishment and 1 of the best seasons ever.

Well put. I think every game is winnable, but undefeated seasons are just plain special.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by buzzard - 2008/05/09 15:15

---

I think the reason that we are so hungry for BCS glory is that if we don't make it, we can only go back to a very mediocre bowl game. When the WAC winner went to the Holiday Bowl, we knew we would be playing against another highly rated team-SMU, Ohio State, Texas A&M, and so on.

If we win the conference but don't go BCS, the best we can look forward to is maybe another PAC-10 rematch with UCLA (?). Bleech!

If the Vegas bowl wants the MWC champ to get jazzed about the game, they need to negotiate a better tie-in.

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by huskercougar - 2008/05/09 17:07

---

buzzard wrote:

I think the reason that we are so hungry for BCS glory is that if we don't make it, we can only go back to a very mediocre bowl game. When the WAC winner went to the Holiday Bowl, we knew we would be playing against another highly rated team-SMU, Ohio State, Texas A&M, and so on.

If we win the conference but don't go BCS, the best we can look forward to is maybe another PAC-10 rematch with UCLA (?). Bleech!

If the Vegas bowl wants the MWC champ to get jazzed about the game, they need to negotiate a better tie-in.

Well put! That is exactly why it is BCS or Bust. We have to make a BCS bowl game this year!

OK, so here is the scenario. BYU and Utah are undefeated going into the final game, and the winner goes to the Fiesta Bowl. Who of you sleeps at all the week leading up to the game?

This is actually a prediction of mine of what is actually going to happen. That would be intense! ESPN will pick up the game, and put it on ABC. Of course then BYU would dominate the game, and the Yewts would know that we owned them!!:laugh:

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by iShowsToGo.com - 2008/05/09 18:27

---

I'm hoping for the Fiesta Bowl. I will say this though, the Vegas bowl is getting a little old. 3 years in a row is fun, but I'm sick of playing mediocre Pac-10 teams. Cal, Oregon, and UCLA were all mediocre. I know we lost to Cal, but that was Bronco's first bowl game as a head coach. Use it as his Mulligan!

Fiesta Bowl would be great, but even better would be if USC and Ohio State both went undefeated, and played for the championship game in the Orange Bowl, so that means 2 spots are open in the Rose Bowl! Can you imagine if BYU got selected to go to the Rose Bowl!?!?! How awesome would that be? Now, USC would have to go to the National Championship for that to happen though.

Either way, I'll be at every home game this year, and hopefully a lot of the road games. I'm headed to Seattle for the Washington game, and Logan for USU. Go Cougars!

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by mormonrasta - 2008/05/10 08:53

---

I can never say BCS or Bust for BYU. A sweep of the Pac-10 schools (which should equate to an undefeated nonconference schedule) would be good enough for me assuming they lose no more than 2 conference games. It's time for BYU to start doing some damage against nonMWC schools in the regular season.

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by CWC - 2008/05/10 14:51

---

Fiesta Bowl would be great, but even better would be if USC and Ohio State both went undefeated, and played for the championship game in the Orange Bowl, so that means 2 spots are open in the Rose Bowl! Can you imagine if BYU got selected to go to the Rose Bowl!?!?! How awesome would that be? Now, USC would have to go to the National Championship for that to happen though.

How can USC and Ohio State both go undefeated if they play each other the second week of the season? :unsure:

=====

---

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by iShowsToGo.com - 2008/05/11 01:01

---

CWC wrote:

How can USC and Ohio State both go undefeated if they play each other the second week of the season? :unsure:

Good point. I just saw that on the schedule! Maybe Michigan instead? Either way, we could use a Big-10 team and a Pac-10 team in the championship game to help our chances of getting to the Rose Bowl.

So, my bad on the scheduling of that one. Isn't that the same day we play UCLA?

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by cougs_dawgs - 2008/05/11 07:47

---

Sorry USC is not going to go undefeated...Georgia will!!!

=====

Re:BCS or Bust???

Posted by gladejo - 2008/05/11 17:17

---

cougs_dawgs sounds like my son. Since we moved here to Georgia, he has become a big UGA fan. We work together, so everyday we talk some sports, and that always includes the Cougars!

=====