
Word on Kehl from Giants\' Minicamp

Posted by Isola - 2008/05/09 14:36

I have been lurking on the Giants' boards to see what they are saying about Bryan Kehl in minicamp, and they linked to a couple of blogs. One said Kehl had an interception off of a tipped pass in one practice. The other had some nice things to say about Kehl, including that the Giants told Kehl that "they considered taking him in the third round and would have if Manningham wasn't still there." It went on to talk about his mission. It seemed like the writer, from the New York Daily News, was impressed with Kehl and wrote more about him than any other player aside from Manningham who had a long one on one chat with Tom Coughlin because of past transgressions.

It seems Giants' fans are starting to warm to him and that the New York media may have taken a shining to him.

Re:Word on Kehl from Giants\' Minicamp

Posted by treck - 2008/05/09 14:46

hallalujah!

I really think he is going to do some great things with the Giants. I have tried from time to time to find info on him during the mini-camps as well but it is a bit tougher...as compared to finding info on Beck last year. Doesn't sound like Popinga is doing anything to make him stand out at Miami. Hear anything on him?

Re:Word on Kehl from Giants\' Minicamp

Posted by Isola - 2008/05/09 14:50

treck wrote:

hallalujah!

Doesn't sound like Popinga is doing anything to make him stand out at Miami. Hear anything on him?

I am not really satisfied with the Dolphin board I found at Phins.com. It feels cheap and I get the impression that is not where the real fans mix. I'll try checking out some other boards.

Re:Word on Kehl from Giants\' Minicamp

Posted by treck - 2008/05/09 14:57

Last year I read a bunch on the sports blogs for sun-sentinel, and finhaven, and thephinsider. Decent reads if you can sort through all the crap and NYJet rivalry mumbojumbo.
