(scroll all the way down)

We'll need him to have a big year this year, I doubt he has a "bigger" year than unga though, I just hope he can take up the blocking void left by tonga.

He only hyperlinked half of the link. Just copy and paste.

Who his Harmon talking about when he mentioned a player making an outrageous comment?

The BB program has a bug that causes it to think a comma terminates an URL.

fui will be a great help being 100% healthy, however it seems that out of every 3 plays he runs, 1 is a good fighting gain, and the other 2 are blown up, perhaps because they stack the box to defend him, but if he's truly healthy and knows the O like he should/does he'll have a lot of games like the 2006 tulsa game. Good luck Fooooooooiiiiii

Careful, we wouldn't want the athletic department to cruiser you.

A moment of silence, please, for our departed friend...

Can I just tell you all how AWESOME it is that our dear compatriot has made such an indelible mark on our hearts and souls that his very name has risen to verb status! Cruiser, you're the biggest thing to hit action-vernacular since "google-ing it"! You are missed, my friend.B)

Sorry to come late to the table on this, but could someone fill me in? What happened to Cruiser?

He was asked by the team (Jeff Reynolds I believe) to stop writing his articles on Cougar Legion. He graciously agreed and has been MIA on both sites ever since. :blush:

I was under the impression Cruiser was a member of the staff not a player.

I don't think he is either one. But he is obviously someone very close to the program because of the information he was privy to.

I think he's a former player.

Thanks, WACoug. I'm sorry to hear that. It's a big loss for Cougarblue. I wonder if silencing Cruiser will help the team.

"One key offensive player, who'll I'll not name because his outrageous quote may come back to haunt him if it fails to come true, said Vakapuna has been so impressive, so explosive in his effort, that it wouldn't surprise him if Vakapuna had a better year next season than Harvey Unga"

-Dick Harmon

There's no way he was talking about cruiser.

Karma to whoever finds out what and who he was talking about.

He is a former player, as was McGregor, although I don't remember when he played exactly. There is a part of me that thinks he played early or mid-80s, but I might be wrong about that.

I don't think Cruiser was a staff member, because I think he probably would have been fired for reporting such things on-line. I just think that Cruiser was very close to many within the program.

My guess:

Harvey Unga ;)

Just to set the record straight on Cruiser. I am sure he is a terrific guy (and a great writer by the way) and I was sad to see him leave but what happen was that some of the stuff he was posting was inaccurate (Old uniforms and specifics on players) and Jeff Reynolds was told by someone one who frequented the CougarLegion board about the inaccuracies and Jeff emailed the administrators of the board and just asked them to correct the inaccurate stuff. HE WAS NOT SHUT DOWN!! Cruiser bowed out under his own accord. By the way, Bronco has no idea who this Cuiser person is in that if you said "Hey Bronco, does the name Cruiser mean anything to you?" he would say, "Isn't that a car or something" No one at BYU asked him to shut it down, they asked him to correct some things and he decided to hang it up. I don't get much inside info on the team but this is one thing I know about.

But two years ago he was as awesome as Unga. I would LOVE to see the two have their phenomenal years the same year. It would be great and I mean really great to see them just plow the field together with their old form. His one of three would be replaced by 4of5 or higher.

Ah the beauty of rumors getting spun out of control. :)

I share your sentiment Mcgregor, I too wish that I was a former (or even current) player.

I guess that makes me a wannabe :S

Wow! Now you're getting labeled a former player. What position would you have played? My best guess is holder, you probably have decent hands and can yell just loud enough.

I heard a rumor, from a credible inside source, that Cruiser is actually the creation of a BYU Computer Science Phd candidate's AI thesis project and we were all just part of a double blind study. ;) The study results will be released next spring when the thesis is published...

BTW - Airwolf was the placebo. :cheer:
