Siosaia Tuipulotu

Here's a kid from my neck of the woods. Actually he attends the Tongan ward that shares my same building

Didn't notice any attention being devoted to this kid so I thought I'd test the waters.

He's a sleeper so far, but the kid was straight dominant as a Junior last year.

In looking at what HS he attends I doubt he will be overlooked. I have not lived in Texas and recognize the school name.

I'm no expert (but who really is besides BRONCO), but he looks like a player to me.....

P.S. I've even been to Eules when I was a bank examiner based in Tyler... and believe me when I say that TEXANS love their football!!!

Isn't Tuipulotu a BYU football name?

It is. There has been at least one that I can remember, Peter Tuipuluto.

Aloha BigTex!

Saia is on BYU's radar. I spoke with Coach Steve Kaufusi a month ago while he was visiting Hawaii. He said after his stop to Maui he was heading to Texas to see some prospects, Sosaia's name came up as of them.

**Yes, there have been a couple of Tuipulotu's that have worn the blue and white. RB Tom Tuipulotu back in the mid 80's and his younger brother RB Peter in the late 80's to early 90's. They come from a very athletic family with cousin Eric Tuipulotu and nephew Albert Tuipulotu both playing for the US Eagles Rugby team. Albert also was a stand out prep player initially playing for UW as RB and then transferred to Portland State.

These Tuipulotu's were raised devout Catholic but both Tom and Peter converting while in Provo. Tom doesn't practice anymore and is back to being "Catholic" and Peter is still keeping the faith.

Meet!

Thanks for the info Meetloaf. So, what is the relation of Tom and Peter to Siosaia?...or is there one?

Siosaia is an outstanding young man. Can't wait to see him in Blue. He plays for the Number ranked team in Texas and in some publications the number one team in the country...I'm a big fan if you can't tell.

He's only in his third or fourth year in the states. Tremendous upside and outstanding attitude.

Good to see you on the board Meet
