I was driving by the practice field after work on Friday, and the players were headed from the SAB to the IPF, and I caught this pic of Russell Tialevea (#52, and I know I butchered his last name!)

Well, I am kind of getting mixed responses to this photo. Some think I'm crazy for idolizing BYU football players, some think its a cool pic.

Should I not post pictures when I spot BYU players? Would you rather me just tell a story, or just keep it to myself? :dry:

Either way, I'm still cheering for the cougars!

No worries! Seeing the players this close to the start of the season IS something to get excited about. Dont let anyone tell you differently. Besides I appreciate seeing just how big Russel is. I wouldnt want to see that guy waiting for me while trying to run up the middle!

Jealous? :laugh: That's good! I'm not a hater. I've never been the type to get star struck. Let alone get excited when I see a BYU player outside of the stadium. Especially because some of them are 8 to 10 years younger then me. That's why I made the comment I did. If you live in P-town you are going to see football players. It's bound to happen. There for what's the big deal?:huh:

That's like saying if you see a conference championship, then why get excited, cuz your in P-Town, where we have won 15+ conference championships in 30 years.

I'm not quite sure I understand your logic??!! It sounds like to me the majority of the fans posting here liked the pic, so I'm glad I could provide it. And yes it is sweet to see how BIG russell really is!!

So... someone 10 yrs younger than can't draw any sort of respect from you... And you wonder why kids don't respect their elders. A person does not have to be older to be a role model or to be looked up to. I spend a lot of time reading about these boys and watching them perform. I was a bit harsh by saying "hater", but I wanted to stand behind someone that is doing something they enjoy! There is nothing wrong with someone taking a photo when they are in the area of some amazing athletes!

I love how someone can read something and interpret it any way he wants to. haha. I never said I have no respect for these guys. I'm saying if I was younger than these guys I would idolize them, and getting a picture of them walking from practice would be awesome. But seeing that I have grown out of that I don't. I still respect and love watching BYU football and what these players can do, and cheer as hard as the next guy when I watch them play. When I see them out in public I don't freak out and try to get their autograph or ask for a pic. I've grown out of that. Doesn't mean I don't respect them. We all do. They are doing something we all wish we could do!

We agree to disagree on this one.

I was in the Detroit airport and saw someone with a beautiful blue "Fully Invested" shirt. For someone like me on the east coast, I was pretty excited about it.

I'd hate to think of the backlash if I had posted a picture of an event far less important than actual players sightings... even at the practice field.

I, for one, liked the "creepy" "papparazzi" picture.

I think the thing to remember is that not everyone who frequents these forums are from the state of Utah, nor in Provo/Orem. They may never see the players except on TV and so they may enjoy a shot with the players and the indoor practice facility.

Just because one or two people who are not very devoted to BYU football spend their time razzing people who are doesn't mean you shouldn't post what you want.

I think with the BYU Cougars blog by Jeff Reynolds we as fans have seen a lot more practice photos, which is awesome. I personally like the fan photos. I regularly search "byu football" and "Provo" on Flickr to see the excellent photos of the valley and the facilities. One of my personal favorite photos is of me, Greg, and Marc after the Coach's show after the Eastern Washington game last year. I had flown in from Mildenhall, England to Las Vegas (13 hours direct!) in a KC-135 the night before and drove up to Orem right after landing so I could be at the EWU game the next morning. Of all the people eating at Legends' Grill that night I was the only one really there for the coach's show. Utah-BYU fans, sheesh.

So yeah, some of us think our stupid photos are pretty cool and someday all this is going to make sense to my little kids -- all this singing of the fight song and wearing "BYU shirts." If you don't have anything better to do than hassle a guy for being a fanatic then go choke yourself.

Hey, when I went to the Y, I dated a girl whose roommate was dating the backup QB (Royce Bybee, who backed up Marc Wilson). He would sometimes bring over friends who were on the team, so I have actually been in the same room as BYU players. For some strange reason, this did not significantly alter my life's path... For that matter, Devin Durrant on the BBall team dated a girl in my student ward, and used to attend sometimes. But, still no miraculous happenings.

I live in SLC and never see Provo until Football season starts. I don't care if I see a BYU player, or Coach. That doesn't mean I'm not devoted. I travel to out of state games every once in a while as well. I razz people because that's what I do. With my family, friends, and people I work with. I razz people that get over excited. People razz me for controlling my passion and excitement. I display that at games. Do whatever you like. Just know that some people will razz you.

Thanks for wasting our time loser. If you're only going to post once a month, you sure have made some great contributions to the board. Perhaps you call your mother only once a year to remind her that she's getting old and her meatloaf wasn't that good when you were a kid. :dry:

I thought Bloodspitter had a good post. Your post howeva was a waste of time! Please refrain from posting again. Mr. Mars, what you've just said is one of the most insanely idiotic things I have ever heard. At no point in your rambling, incoherent response were you even close to anything that could be considered a rational thought. Everyone in this board is now dumber for having read it.

Bloodspitter and Snagger, you've both wasted our time and if what Mars said is "one of the most insanely idiotic things have ever heard", you need to get out more. I agree with Mars, but I think his comments would apply just as well to Snagger.

Mraven looks like you need to get out more. Or rent a movie! It's called sarcasim and billy madison. Look into it!

I think it's funny how someone calls a poster a LOSER, and so I thought I would come to his defense and bust Mars Balls a little.

<http://www.google.com/search?q=sarcasim> :lol:

Dude, for someone who likes to razz, you sure aren't good at taking the blowback, or indicating sarcasm through text (you know, since the normal non-verbal cues are lost in a message board) with a ;) or something. If you don't want to be accepted here, by all means, continue with your current level of tact. Otherwise, leave the personal attacks in a political campaign where they belong. ;)

Back to topic, I loved it when I ran into the players by the IPF while walking back to my car. As a wise man once put it, "I just wanted to bask in your reflected glory. Reflected glory!" I don't care if it's lame, I liked it. Thanks for the pic!

Okay, I can top any of you. Jake Kuresa moved into my ward at the beginning of the summer, and I'm his home teacher. He showed me his All-American trophy, and all his other cool BYU stuff.

Also, my brother in law just informed me that Reno Mahe just moved into their ward up on Traverse Mountain. He says that it is funny watching all the guys group around Reno on the way to Priesthood.

What exactly did you mean by that? :blink: ;) J/K That's a cool story.

Ben Olsen visited my ward last year, he's married to a cousin of someone in my ward, I thought about talking a little junk to him, but dude is huge.:blink:

A few years ago I was in the same ward as Rod Wilkerson. He was a cool guy, but I hated sitting next to him because about half the time I'd hand him the sacrament and he'd drop it.
